There isn't enough military reserve left to invade an empty field.
What he's doing is talking about boosting the number of troops. But it's all talk because he knows it will never make it past the first step on the hill, and he's doing it with the intention of laying blame on the Dems after it doesn't pass Congress. Pelosi -just- figured this out (gawd she's slow) and is loosely supporting the troop increase (calling his bluff), so the Shrub may water down that plan in the coming weeks.

What you -will- see or hear, on or before the SATU address, is big talk of a big terror plot in the US that was supposedly foiled by "the tools that were given [in the Patriot Act] to combat terrorism". It will either be announced in the speech or leaked to the press (FNC). At least that's my prediction.

And it ain't working anymore. McCain is flopping around like a fish out of water because he can't take the Bush route and has no idea how to establish a voting base. I'm expecting to see Hilary make a play for Bush's abandoned conservative base -- it's the only chance she has to beat Edwards (a Gore/Edwards ticket? Hmmm....)

Bush & Co. have the price of oil pretty well under control. The fiasco in Alaska didn't shake the price, and neither did the announcement of OPEC production reductions. What you are likely to see in the next year or so is a brief reduction in the price of crude, to say around $40-45/bbl, which will be just enough to justify the outsourcing of refinery operations to foreign countries, while at the same time putting a damper on Democratic plans to implement a policy/legislation for transparency in international oil markets. Unless we have another Katrina.....

I think you posted that a few years ago. I keep it in the same directory with the pic of Bush41 chatting happily with Noriega.

You're quite right... but it's really not because they are splatterboxes... as you put it. Really, they are quite linear with the fully temperature controlled AB-Biasing (active transistor tracking.. not just plain diode). It's usually because they can't afford one...

Nice custom housing. Gonna hook it up to 120V or 240V to get that extra swing?

I've explained this to you many times before, Brian, but obviously it didn't sink in. So here you go:

linearity -- 1. The relationship existing between two quantities when a change in a second quantity is directly proportionate to a change in the first quantity. 2. Deviation from a straight-line response to an input signal..... etc, etc, etc.

Now look at the response curve in the spec sheet that -YOU- wrote for -YOUR- amp. Is that a straight line? No, not unless you are either drunk or using noneuclidean geometry. Your amp, by definition, is non-linear.

I have a 9 month old daughter, so I asked relatives to buy give for her instead. I did get a book and a pair of jeans, some some other clothes. However, for my big 40 birthday in Feb, I am going to asked for this:

http://www.hobbytron.com/RCHelicopterElectricPicooZ85615.html

I did however pick up a broken Realistic TRC-455 that is dead in the water. I built a workbench this past week, and plan to try and repair it. I don't think repairing it will be that hard. But aligning the thing will be a problem.

After all the fuss was over, and everyone else was provided for, I bought myself this on the 27th:

http://www.bhphotovideo.com/bnh/controller/home?O=Search&A=details&Q=&sku=457506&is=REG&addedTroughType=search

Actually, I upgraded from the 350D to this one, and am teaching the GF to use the 350D. (had to have a reason)

I have a lower end Olympus. I used to have an old Rebel XS. That camera was great, and took great pics. It was idiot proof, for novices like me. Good luck with it !

You are absolutely right... my production is extremely limited and I command a premium price. I produce around one amp per month now. With all the projects I have going now... that's just fine for my needs.

Frank... are you back on the sauce again? The line in the spec sheet looks awful straight to me... except at the 1dB compression point. That's the point where the linearity stops... hello Frank. Are you just playing dumb again?

First, let's revisit one question that you have repeatedly ignored:
The power gain of one transistor is 15 dB. Your amp is rated for 15dB.
So why does it have two transistors?

Now for the math. Staying within your "linear" region, here are the numbers from the last revision of your data sheet (can't seem to find the current sheet on your site; I wonder why....LOL!!!):

Input: 1 watt
Carrier: 47 watts
100% mod: 71 watts

There's the base. Now let's look at the next line:

Input: 2 watts
Carrier: 84 watts
100% mod: 126 watts

Hmmm..... since you multiplied the input by two, the output of a linear amp would also be multiplied by two. IOW, your carrier and 100% mod outputs should be 94 watts and 142 watts, respectively. Next line:

Input: 3 watts
Carrier: 120 watts
100% mod: 180 watts

Well, you may not be using Bird watts but it's clear that you flunked third-grade math. I'm pretty sure that 47 x 3 = 141, and 71 x 3 = 213.
Is this the "new math"? or are you just using the 'force'?

And with that 1dB "compression point", are you trying to suggest, or even subtly imply, that this is insignificant? I hope not because at your 1dB "compression point" you are pumping 34 watts of pure harmonic distortion into the air..... with an unmodulated carrier!!!

Are you finally going to address these issues? Or are you going to crawl back into your corner and pout for a few more months?

Can't be. Germans are usually known for their quality in engineering.

Since I'm designing my own speech processor... I couldn't resist hooking up Lou's to test the performance. Actually, it did work... but like I suspected... was quite distorted. He claims in his ad that this distortion is not audible. I'm sorry to say that it sounded very fuzzy on my test headset. This is what it looked like on my bench.

Just looks like a brute force clipper to me with no filtering. FUZZY is the right word, this is very simlar to the circuit used in guitar some REAL desperation is having to keep four or more dialup accounts active because of having lost so many due to stupid blunders.

Sure it does... but remember that antenna thoery is quite complex. Not sure there is any one formula for figuring this. The plane's size and shape will have a large impact on radiation pattern... amoungst other parameters.

What's new? Glad you asked...

You forget they do not work in a CB! That is a MOSFET so a number of changes would be required to the circuit. You also need to accommodate it which might be difficult as the rest of the board was designed around a TO220.
The frequency range is too high so no chance of much gain on 27MHz.
Go and do some research.

Wrong again, Brian. Most of my work was done at work on the company computers, so I don't have access to most of it even if I -could- post
it. But you're in luck; I was just doing my annual file-cabinet clean out and ran across a schematic for part of a preliminary Class D audio amp I designed about ten years ago. The technology was moving fast at the time and the design was only used for a year or two, but I still blurred out the name:

www.icehouse.net/wirenut/2934d3.jpg

Here's a couple scans of pcb art I found in a pile of other papers.
The first is an EM monitor I whipped up for a friend's project for her Master's thesis relating to computer monitors (needed to eliminate a suggested confound). The second is one of many variations of a 8255
I/O card; I don't remember what application this one was for:

www.icehouse.net/wirenut/elf-4.jpg
www.icehouse.net/wirenut/8255v8.jpg

As for my personal projects, there is gobs of stuff. Let's start with something simple like a capacitance amplifier:

www.icehouse.net/wirenut/c-amp.gif

And don't forget the Twisty-Buster:

www.icehouse.net/wirenut/tb_rdf2.gif
www.icehouse.net/wirenut/tb_rdf_o.gif

Here's an audio compressor I started a few years ago and has been on the shelf awaiting refinement:

www.icehouse.net/wirenut/tub_comp.gif

You know, I could post a shitload of stuff..... can you be more specific about what you are looking for? Oh, and there is a price for knowledge, Brian. If you want more you need to post the schematic for your amp. It's only fair, don't ya think?

>What's new? Glad you asked...

I didn't. I don't care.

Blah, blah, blah. You are starting to sound like Skippy with his "it's Frank, have you noticed that he's also very careful about the photos of his amp? Only various photos of select parts, with none that can be viewed/linked as a whole. I've never seen a real amplifier manufacturer do such things. Have you?

So, you have decided that 9 square feet is about right based on what theory?
I've built yagi's, ground planes, collinear, dipoles, etc. I was just asking you to back up your theory. This is not some cutting edge science that cannot be verified with today's math. Please don't allow yourself to be proven a blowhard again. You made the statement, back it up.

Even better luck: I found the whole folder complete with my notes.
Here's the full schematic that was sent to prototype:

www.icehouse.net/wirenut/cls_d4_d.jpg

The other schematic was for a variation that didn't work very well;
there was a reactive loading problem with the IRF740LC.

Now..... any more stupid questions, Brian?

I only said that a 3'x3' area of ground plane would be the minimum size that I would recommend for such an installation. Never hinted there was an exact formula to substantiate that recommendation.

You are way out of touch with reality on this one, Brian. Tube audio, ESPECIALLY the compressors, are some of the most desireable audiophile circuits on the market. The reason is because the sound that can't be duplicated by silicon. For at least ten years now many major audio equipment manufacturers have included some sort of tube audio in the line, and a few make tube preamps and processors almost exclusively.
"Older than dirt"? Right. Sure. And your fourth-generation hacks are state-of-the-art.

Except that I posted them to my website, claiming them as my own, and you can't find them anywhere else, not on the net nor in any book. In fact, I posted much of the stuff previously on my website (back when I maintained a website). I'm kind of suprised that you didn't recognize it.

Anyway, you asked and I provided. Now where's the schematic for your amp? Do you need more time to modify it so your "design" can't be recognized as a hack?

You know why, Brain. You're just trying to save face..... and making you're a moron at all. Not everyone can grasp even the scant little bit of electronics you have learned. But you are trying to take the

Actually, there -is- an exact formula for the surface area of a ground plane. And at 11m it's nowhere close to 3' x 3'.

Someone has to briefly describe to me, the difference between Speech Compression and Speech Proccessor. My Turner +3 mic has compression, which allows a steady volume regardless of distance. I think my Icom 746 also has compression. But can anyone be more specific?

Go and do some research. Gain increases as frequency decreases. The major problem of using this device at 27 MHz is keeping the gain low enough so that the amp will be stable. Any amp using this part at 27MHz will have to have a lot of feedback to minimize gain.

Also FET large signal impedances are not all th at different from bipolar devices. With RF power amps you are more interested in the large signal characteristics of the device and not the small signal characteristics. This device would make a decent preamp for 27MHz if you can make it stable. Would have a excellent 3rd order intermod characteristics also.

Outside my engineering job, designing circuits was as far as anything that I wanted to do. When your hobby and work comingle, it makes for a very dull life.

Also indefense of Frank, most major electronics firms make you sign a non disclosure agreement(NDA). That means that you can not divulge anything of your job, projects that you worked on or that the company is doing or is in plan. Usually these last for at least one year after employement ceases. Also any patents that you file outside work during employment or within a one year period after employment ceases is subject to challenge as it might contain intellectual property from your former employer.

NDAs can be very restrictive. Also they are very binding legally.

Compression is essentially where the output signal is limited by controlling the gain of a stage. This is accomplished by some means of feedback of the output to the input to reduce gain as the input signal becomes larger. The amount of compression is the amount of feedback to reduce gain. One can go to a point to where the stage becomes an attenuator by sufficient feedback. With opamps this can be a very serious problem as they do not work well below unity gain.

Speech processing is a broad term that includes compression, clipping and even DSP.

I agree some of the best high end audio is still produced using tubes.
There are some distortion characteristics that bipolar silicon just can't get away from. FETs are better than bipolar, but are still

No kidding. My favorite hobby has nothing to do with electronics; I rebuild & restore old Coleman lanterns. I would gladly trade any of A "processor" is a device that does something with the signal. This can any combination of compression, expansion, limiting, distortion, effects, automatic gain control (AGC), etc, etc.

The term "compression" is used to describe a type of signal processing where the dynamic range of a signal is reduced without losing it's content.

One type of compression is "limiting" which either clips or modifies the dynamic peaks of a signal. Clipping is simply the 'chopping off' of signal peaks. Limiting can also be done by automatic reduction of gain as it peaks (a type of automatic gain control). Limiters are used in radio because dynamic peaks in the audio can cause modulation to exceed 100% resulting in splatter and distortion. If those peaks are limited, the average level of the audio signal, and therefore the "talk-power", can be increased.

Another type of compressor is called a "Constant Volume Amplifier" (CVA), which uses AGC to keep the level of the signal at a relatively constant level. (This is different than a limiter because a CVA works by changing the gain throughout the dynamic range, while a limiter only reduces the gain at dynamic peaks.) The CVA is used in sound studios to compensate for changes in the volume of a person's voice into a microphone. (If you watch reruns of Hee-Haw you can see the old-timers will adjust their distance to the mic while they sing; they learned to do this because they often played without the benefit of a CVA in the sound system.)

Compared to a limiter, the response of a CVA is slow, and cannot be used to increase the average audio level (talk-power) because it does not reduce or eliminate the peaks that drive modulation over 100%.

Brian built a CVA.

Don't mess with clip-on mantles -- they're worthless. Use the tie-on type. Use a double-overhand knot, tie it loose -before- you slip on the mantle, then even out the wrinkles and pull it tight. That way you won't have a loose mantle that will fall apart when you bump the lantern. But even doing that I still get about 1 in 3 mantles that end up with a hole after burn-in. The quality just isn't there anymore.

If you can find the circuit for the compression amp of a GRT21 this circuit works great. Makes your radio sound like a used car commercial. If set up right it can keep average sideband power up and prevent overmodulation. No ICs and a fairly small total parts count.. IF you can find the schematic for the GRT21 you have to be careful, there were two audio input boards. The compressor board and a straight audio board. The transmitter used one or the other, not both.

Won't we need to change the .ngfile also? Also is ALL an acceptable newsgroup on the left side of the dot such that ALL.ALL will catch everything?

Rusty is right (or is that "Rusty is Wright"?) - we have ALL in our .ngfile
so I tend to forget this. ALL.ALL may or may not work, but ALL certainly does.

I plan to make the change on Tuesday unless something horrible happens.

Mark,
Yes, the .ngfile needs to be fixed and maybe we should use .net instead of .ALL, talk to the guys and let me know what you think.

By the way, my friggin 8-track just went out in my pinto so i think i'm going to pick me up one of those new Casset Tape decks. Those things are outta sight, I hear Rick James has one! He's my hero, anyway get back to me soon on that other stuff.

Yeah, but it's not the oldest one on the net. Look at this site:

http://communication.ucsd.edu/bjones/Usenet.Hist/Nethist/0061.html
The earliest post at that site is from May 27, 1980

Lots of other ancient stuff on there too...

Drew

Hope I didn't do that!

Yeah like you said tie the knot and don't trip over the lamp, especially while it is lighted..like a moth to a flame that seems to be my weakness, Frank.

Heh, now-days we are upgrading the generator instead of the mantle..arrrggh

I can still primitive camp a bit, butt toilet paper is high on the must have list right next to extra mantles, fishing line, firewood, newspaper, and such. No oak leaf wiping, please. My wife would freak.

Now we attempt to camp. :)

Hi,
Sorry for the long time to reply...
Put ALL.ALL.ALL in the .ngfile and the dog can get in.
Best Regards
Me

Mark,
Yes, the .ngfile needs to be fixed and maybe we should use .net instead of .ALL, talk to the guys and let me know what you think.

By the way, my friggin 8-track just went out in my pinto so i think i'm going to pick me up one of those new Casset Tape decks. Those things are outta sight, I hear Rick James has one! He's my hero, anyway get back to me soon on that other stuff.

Yeah, but it's not the oldest one on the net. Look at this site:

http://communication.ucsd.edu/bjones/Usenet.Hist/Nethist/0061.html
The earliest post at that site is from May 27, 1980

Lots of other ancient stuff on there too...

Drew

Hope I didn't do that!

Has anyone ever tried a CB repeater lately. I know it was tried in the past without much success because the transmitter and reciver were tooo close together. Seems like it would be pretty easy now if a couple of guys both had high speed internet access. You could put the tx at one house and the rx at someoneelses house a couple of miles apart and connect the audio via VOIP

Repeaters are prohibited on CB, so longevity would be an issue. I have seen CBs that do repeater offsets, though the only real practical purpose for this is to listen to one channel and talk on the other, and the person you're talking to does the same but with the frequencies swapped for in and out.

Easy enough. You can even rebuild the generator if you want. Use a plastic scrub pad to clean the parts, but be careful because they bend really easy. Then polish both the inside of the brass tube and the outside of the cardboard tube with mega-fine sandpaper until the cardboard tube slides freely inside the brass tube. Put it all back together and fire it up. There will be a little muck left over so you'll have to turn the cleaning handle a few times, but after that it will work for almost as long as a brand new generator.

Oh yeah.... I hate to sound like a commercial, but don't use anything but Coleman fuel. There are other brands of fuel available but they are refined like pump gas; the shelf life is short, and if the fuel has been sitting for a few months it will muck things up just like pump gas does in your lawnmower over the winter. But I've never had a bad can of Coleman fuel.

>I can still primitive camp a bit, butt toilet paper is high on the must Absolutely! In a major disaster, everyone should know where their local TP warehouse is located!

I know exactly what you mean. It was a cool hobby when I was a kid, electronic it's like I'm working and not really enjoying it anymore.

I know that some vintage CB radios (Johnson, Lafayette, etc.) were made with remote plugs and could be used for repeaters, but would require a multiplexer to use the same antenna. Those companies may have also made multiplexers. If not, it should be possible to build one. It would be a lot less complicated than linking via internet just to seperate the radios.

Ive been told that alcohol is good fuel for Coleman lanterns. Is this true.
I tried it once in a camp stove and it seemed to work OK.

NO! Not unless it was made for alcohol. The main reason is that alcohol (ethanol) will always have some water. It absorbs water right from the air, whether in storage or from the air that you pump into the fount. The ethanol/water solution is corrosive to the parts and you get all kinds of nasty white/green deposits inside the fount. For the same reason you should never use oxygenated gasoline in dual-fuel lanterns and stoves. When they were designed it was never expected that gasoline would ever contain ethanol. Coleman made a short run of lanterns and stoves that could run on oxygenated gasoline but no longer (and they are now prized collector items).

You -can-, however, run the lantern on kerosene! You have to pre-heat the generator to get it started, and it will clog up more often, but it will run just fine. I wouldn't use it indoors or in a tent because kerosene will run rich in a gas lantern and you could die from carbon monoxide poisoning. But outside it should be fine. You can even run a gas/kerosene mix for easier starting. I haven't tried diesel or heating oil yet but I suspect they would work like kerosene.

Easy to do at VHF but it is too difficult if not imossible to get a mutipler to work at 27Mhz thats why I suggested putting a lot of distance between the rx and tx..

Speaking of kerosene I have a lantern you would love. It a railroad lantern with mirror for signaling. It was my grandfathers when he used to work for the RR. He ran a depot for the GA&FL. or G&F as it was called then.. ITs brass with two big concave mirrors one red and the other not tinted..Only used one mirror at a time, actually Im not sure if you were suppose to swap the mirrors but grandpa did. When I was a teenager we actually used it for camping. Soon it will be in a RR museum in South GA. The mirror is really the interesting part to me as I have never seen one like it before. IT looks like it was made by blowing a sphere then silvering the inside and flattening it. Only half of the sphere was silvered, the part next to the blowing stem the rest is clear and form the front of the mirror.When the depot was shut down there were several old mirros around that the stem had broken on, as you can imagine the silver probably didnt last long after this. Are you familar with this type of lantern.

Nonsense... if the original ALC/modulation limiting is in tact within the radio... this speech processor will not over modulate. However, it will certainly boost your average power on AM and SSB!

Not that difficult at all. The military has been doing it on their VHF-Lo sets for decades. The trick is to put the distance between the two operating frequencies, not the radios.

Maybe your confusion lies in the fact that a CVA requires a VCA as a component of the AGC loop.... or maybe there's just too many anagrams for your brain to process.

And I suggested you go get an education, but so far you have just been demonstrating your need to do so.

So where's the schematic for your amplifier, Brian?

Then why does your processor include amplitude limiting if it isn't needed? And why does your 2-transistor amp have the gain of only one transistor?

Hey, maybe you know how to fix this problem: The edge of my lawn that hits the sidewalk always drys up about mid summer. I thought it was getting burned by the heat from the concrete but it doesn't come back no matter how much I water it, shade it, fertilize it, areate it.... and no, it's not from people walking their dogs. Is this some weird type of grass that only grows next to concrete? Should I just reseed?

The problem is with the RF filtering. It can be done but to construct a cavity filter for 27MHz would be a challenge. One for 50MHz is bad enough due to the size!
Your idea about putting the audio over the Internet is a good one. You would need some form of DTMF entry to switch it all on and off. A similar thing is in place on Amateur Radio bands at the moment, but it goes worldwide.
Best thing to do would be to put the input on CH1 and the output on CH40, then try and get a repeater logic board to hook up the CBs, position the aerials a fair distance apart and build a notch filter for the RX to tune out CH1.
If you had a duplexer then you could use ONE aerial to transmit and receive on at the same time. It is possible even though most people don't understand why it works.
The same goes for amateur bands, you can have a dual band aerial for 144 and 430MHz, one coax, one diplexer and transmit and receive at the same time.
Or you can have another diplexer and hook up two aerials but still one piece of coax.
A diplexer seperates signals from different bands, a duplexer seperates signals in the same band.

He wasn't too bright. He got busted for 100 watts, and then went on to transmit 2,500 watts. Then he didn't bother disassembling the setup when the FCC showed up. Nice fine !

Terrifying to think you are representing an electronics company and can't understand a basic statement! Do they know you are expressing an opinion on behalf of the company?
The person got his theory correct but the terminology slightly wrong - but most sensible normal people know what he meant. By "multiplexer" he meant "duplexer" or "diplexer" depending on the frequencies in use. I take it you know the difference between the two? Have you seen the size of a cavity filter for 27MHz? It's bigger than the average car trailer, possibly the size of a garden shed. This is why he suggested it wasn't practical and by "distance" between TX and RX he means exactly that, put them in different areas - which follows on from the original request for information about using the Internet to stream audio.
Hopefully you will understand that now. I would definitely stay clear of an electronics company that employs people obviously unable to understand basic theory. If you have nothing to add then don't bother posting. I would advise everyone to put you and the electronics company in their blacklist.

Is it mostly sunny in that spot? It may be a strain poa annua which is an annual grass that dies every summer. I'd have to see it to know. Yeah if it's sunny there you might consider sowing some turf type tall fescue or some sort of a perennial blend rye/blue/fescue. If it's shade go more with the fine fescue/rye blend.

If the limiter is in tact within the radio... the redunantcy of the speech processor limiting can be shut off. However, if the radio has no limiter... the the speech processor must be adjusted to do the limiting function. So it'll work either way.

This is only 4 watts so a cavity really isn't necessary. I'm sure it could be done with a couple high-Q notch filters. It could probably also be done with coax stubs.

Nice and sunny. It comes back every spring all nice and green, then croaks. Pisses me off. But it doesn't get a chance to go to seed so it has to be a perennial strain of something.

What happened to the rest of the post, Brain? Why use two transistors when you can get the same gain with one? What about your published

The shit grass is what goes to seed generally, the annuals. Most desirable turfgrass is perennial and never goes to seed because you cut it every week. It never gets tall enough to produce seed... like corn.

If you see grass that's only 2 or 3 inches tall going to seed it's more than likely an annual grass. It's considered a weed in most parts and people will pay to try and prevent it. Golf courses hate it.

Glad to help. That's just a stab in the dark but it might be the problem.
It's real common here. We slice seed those areas for people in the spring

Not sure what you're trying to do but 24hoursupport.helpdesk is a good group to ask about such things if you don't find your answer here. You can ask about almost anything there. :)

Hey Steve, got the daughter a new computer for the holidays and it doesn't come with a parallel port for the printer. I priced the USB/parallel cable up to $40 and said sod that. Since I have both cables
I figured I'd combine the two. Call me cheap, I'd say frugal hehehe.

There ya go, handy with a roll of duct tape too! Hey I have a little bit of NY in my ear on the radio. I'll call Enzo some bad names again and see if Jersey Joe will pass the message on.

It would take a while as I never had the radio in this truck. I'd have to run fused wires through the firewall then find a path through the cab for the feedline. f that as its raining now.

Same here, we've had about two inches of it this afternoon, flood watch is out. Feels like May, sixty degrees today.

I let my fescue get tall enough to go to seed a couple of times a year. I have a neighbor who really hated this and she let me know in her catty way. Funny thing the rest of my neighbors found out what I was doing now they are too.

I told her it was a good thing we didnt live a little further south. Then she would have to put up with me burning off my St Augustine every couple of years.

I'll bet 95% of the cbs operating today have the ALC/Modulating limits circuits defeated. Heck back in the 70's that was the first thing hackjob socalled techs would to a radio.

right, keep on thinking man. Get a unity gain with the right feedback

Incredible..... how do you manage to stick your foot so deep into your mouth? The 2N3055 is bipolar, has a relatively low input impedance, and is -INTENDED- for frequencies from DC through audio and up. Not only that, your implication is that the transition frequency (Ft) is the intended operation frequency when in fact it is the point at which the transistor exhibits unity gain, making it pracitically useless at that frequency.

So where's that schematic, Brian?

I found nothing in the archives that explains how your amp is linear despite your own data proving that it's not.

I found nothing in the archives that explains why you used two transistors for your amp when it has the gain of only one.

I found nothing in the archives that indicates what equipment you used, if any, to make your measurements (the same measurements that prove your amp is non-linear).

I found nothing in the archives that includes, or points to, a schematic for your amp.

What I -did- find in the archives is you demonstrating that you have absolutely no clue what you are doing (i.e, "linearity is not required for SSB...."), ducking the questions by making excuses why you can't answer them, or pouting in a corner with your passive-agressive "Thank you for your support" line.

Yet you BEGGED for just one schematic of what I have done. When I provided it, you once again ducked the questions with even -more-quacking.

If you won't address the issues then the only conclusion is that you can't. And just to twist the knife a bit, the equation to find the minimum surface area of a ground plane is [pi]r^2 where r = 1/4 wavelength.... the area of the circle that is covered by 1/4-wave radials.

So what will it be, Brian..... a demonstration of your engineering expertise? Or just more hack-and-quack?

Burn it off in the winter while it is dormant is the easiest way of getting rid of the thatch. If you dont do it it will eventually choke itsself to death. When this happens you get a big bald spot in your yard then the grass fills in again. In other words if you dont dethatch it it will dethatch itself in very ugly ways.

Be sure to verify that the brown spots are not chinch bugs. T hey log

Zero. Since it is well documented that Audio processing has marginal performance improvements on a amplitude signal. Thus the rest of the survey would be no more than a "1" if applicable.

Now lets talk about an RF Speech Clipper and/or RF compressor and then you may have something worth talking about.

Two transistors in paralell only have the gain as one.
They will put out 3db more power as a single device but only if you supply 3db more drive.

Brian, do you ask these questions in any other forum other than this? A periodical perhaps? Readers here will follow threads you start and see the responses from other operators trashing your claims. How do you think that sits with potential consumers? Have you patented any of your inventions? Does the FCC know what you intend to sell to the public? Readers want to know...

I have not asked in other forums at this time. Can you recommend others?
How does this sit with potential customers? Very good. They know that we are serious about providing excellent products, and value their feedback.
Does the FCC know? Maybe you could inform the FCC that this device will be sold to the public. Thanks for your help.

Go to the S21 function. Your S21 power is read in dB... remember to always use the appropriate attenuators as those VNAs are very expensive and usually have a lower input power maximum of a watt or two.

The statements above are generalities... you should refer to the operation manual for the exact VNA you will be using.

That why it is best to operate a clipper at RF level say 455khz then clip and filter. That way all the harmonic energy generated will be outside the bandpass of the filter. Then convert back to audio.These can be really easy and cheap to make. There used to be a guy down in BAxley Ga that sold these units dor about $50 a piece. He had about $15 in parts and about an hr in time in each one. Something to do fill in the idle time.

And I don't think you're going to any time soon. USB is, as the name suggests is a serial protocol, using embed micro controllers, in either stand alone adapter boxes or built in to the cable headers using SMD parts to implement the control logic. The 40 to 50 bucks the cheap single port adapters cost is going to be less that what your time is likely worth when you consider the time and cost it's going to take you to duplicate such a mass produced product.

That would be "dBm" I think. Logarithmic power measurements have to be referred to some reference power lever since dB is the logarithm of a ratio.
The one I see most often is dB above 1 milliwatt.

Also "S21" is a voltage transmission coefficient in the "scattering parameter matrix" characterizing a 2-port network.

I rushed the last answer because I was in a hurry to get out the door.
Anyway, your statement is true if you are talking only about current gain. Power gain, OTOH, is double in either configuration.

For example, if a transistor with a current gain of 10 is fed an input of 100mA the output will be 1A. Two transistors in parallel will split the input current at 50mA each, with an output of 500mA each or 1A total. No additional current gain.

But you are forgetting that when two transistors are in parallel the input and output impedances are reduced by half. If you take the input signal and convert its impedance to one-fourth of what is fed to a single transistor you can maintain 100mA input to each transistor using the same input power, with an output having -twice- the current at half the impedance of one transistor. The result is double the power gain.

Brian's amp should be pushing 18dB. If it isn't then he screwed up the matching of the transistor input and output impedances. That's one reason why I want to see his schematic.

That, set in line after Brian's CVA (sans the noise gate), would make

Dont need nothing that fancy, Develope an AGC voltage using a rectified sample of the output of the clipper and usee it to bias a FET mike amp. If you used one of those 3 legged ceramic IF filters I bet you could build the whole thing less pots on a 24 pin DIP IC header

I must admit I never built a single transistor PA before SO I will have to look at the numbers again. Granted the push pull amp is more efficent than the single ended amp but Im still not sure about the gain. Il have to crank the #s when I dont have a snoot full of cold medicine. Please correct me if I am wrong but you are saying that two amps biased for say classB operation that a 2 transistor anp will have 6 db more output than a 1 transistor amp with the same drive power.

He probably does have an impedance matching problem , almost all amps of this type do to some degree. The impedance transformation of the transformers can almost always be improved upon by the inclusion of an adjustable L or Pi network in the output of the amp.. I know the last amp I tested had an output impedance of about 35 ohms. A matching network added to this amp increased power out, reduced harmonics and made the transistors stop popping.

No, just 3dB. Double your pleasure, double your fun.

Impedance matching in an amp isn't a plug-n-play application. It's not as simple as reading the specs off the data sheet and punching numbers into a calculator. Since the big-signal gain of the transistors varies so much, each transistor pair much be physically measured, matched, and the impedance adjusted accordingly for maximum gain. The biggest problem with these amps is that the transformers have so few turns that they are very impedance-specific, as you discovered with your 35 ohm amp. There are only two solutions: either use transistors within a very narrow range of gain -or- change the gain (and therefore the impedance) of the transistors with negative feedback. I like the latter because it increases linearity. It does require each amp to be adjusted for any given pair of transistors, but almost all of the transistors in stock can be used because the gain range isn't nearly as limited.

Yes, you can transform the impedance with a tuning network prior to the input transformer and after the output transformer, but it will limit the frequency response of the amp to a narrow bandwidth. This is how most of the so-called "broadband" CB amps are built. Most of the people who have used them know what a bitch it is to retune the amp every time you want to use it on a different part of the band. That's not "broadband" -- it's false advertising.

even though it wasnt a perfect match everywhere it was still a lot better

Thanks to the several people who have responded already. They were sharp enough to copy & paste the original questionaire... with their responses... and send via email. Actually, I was surprised at some of the responses... but that's good. That means that my ideas for the feature list may not be mainstream. One thing I forgot to mention... make sure you have a termination (dummy load) on the output port. This load is generally quite small no matter how much power you're measuring... in the several-watt range.
This is because of all the attenuation on the input port as I stated before.

Frank, wrong as usual. Here is an excerpt from http://rfdesign.com/microwave_millimeter_tech/Amplifiers/radio_pushpull_amplifiers_improve

"Consequently, the gain of a push-pull amplifier is the same as that of an individual amplifier, where the output power is twice that of an individual amplifier. Thus, push-pull amplifiers are frequently used for combining power of individual amplifiers. However, there is more to these amplifiers than combining power. This topology of amplifiers helps cancel even harmonics and intermodulations and improves the even-order intermodulation product."

Oh, let me guess... the man who wrote this article (director of engineering at Mini-Circuits) doesn't know what he's talking about either... LOL

Without seeing it I can only guess that your tuning was pretty low-Q; maybe not the best components, too large a coil, or perhaps some shunt resistance.

In the document this refers to amplitude gain, not power gain. That's why the rest of the sentence says:

Denver Post:

This text is from a county emergency manager out in the central part of Colorado after todays snowstorm.

WEATHER BULLETIN

Up here, in the Northern Plains, we just recovered from a Historic event---may I even say a "Weather Event" of "Biblical Proportions" --- with a historic blizzard of up to 44" inches of snow and winds to 90 MPH that broke trees in half, knocked down utility poles, stranded hundreds of motorists in lethal snow banks, closed ALL roads, isolated scores of communities and cut power to 10's of thousands.

FYI:
George Bush did not come.

FEMA did nothing.

No one howled for the government.

No one blamed the government.

No one even uttered an expletive on TV .

Jesse Jackson or Al Sharpton did not visit.

Our Mayor did not blame Bush or anyone else.

Our Governor did not blame Bush or anyone else, either.

CNN, ABC, CBS, FOX or NBC did not visit - or report on this category 5 snowstorm. Nobody demanded $2,000 debit cards.

No one asked for a FEMA Trailer House.

No one looted.

Nobody - I mean Nobody demanded the government do something.

Nobody expected the government to do anything, either.

No Larry King, No Bill O'Rielly, No Oprah, No Chris Mathews and No Geraldo Rivera.

No Shaun Penn, No Barbara Striesand, No Hollywood types to be found.

Nope, we just melted the snow for water.

Sent out caravans of SUV's to pluck people out of snow engulfed cars.

The truck drivers pulled people out of snow banks and didn't ask for a penny.

Local restaurants made food and the police and fire departments delivered it to the snowbound families.

Families took in the stranded people - total strangers.

We fired up wood stoves, broke out coal oil lanterns or Coleman lanterns. We put on extra layers of clothes because up here it is "Work or Die".

We did not wait for some affirmative action government to get us out of a mess created by being immobilized by a welfare program that trades votes for 'sittin at home' checks.

Even though a Category "5" blizzard of this scale has never fallen this early, we know it can happen and how to deal with it ourselves.

"In my many travels, I have noticed that once one gets north of about 48 degrees North Latitude, 90% of the world's social problems evaporate."

It does seem that way, at least to me.

I hope this gets passed on.

Maybe SOME people will get the message. The world does Not owe you a living.

Don't like doing your homework for you but if you really need a helping hand maybe this link will help from Agilent.

http://eesof.tm.agilent.com/docs/iccap2002/MDLGBOOK/1MEASUREMENTS/3VNA/3SPAR/1SparBasics_1
.pdf

Also I may suggest AN215A from Motorola as another source of info.
This can be found in the Motorola RF Aplications book. Should be a part of most universities Engineering library.

I am not so sure what you intend to measure in Absolute Power? That is somewhat vague. Absolute Power out? Absolute Power Dissapated? so forth and so forth.

A VNA is best used to determine complex impedances of the input and the output in terms called S-Parameters. S-parameters can be generated for two, three, four or more ports. Often most used is two port parameters. In two port parameters you generete four terms, S11, S21, S12, and S22. S-parameters are logrithmic voltage ratios expressed in dBs. These are complex vector quantities. These four readings give you all the information needed about the DUT (Device Under Test).

S11 is the input complex reflection coefficient.
S21 is the forward complex transmission coefficient.
S12 is the reverse complex transmission coefficient.
S22 is the output complex refelction coefficient.

The nicety of these measurements is that they can be moved to the Smith Chart for starting points for matching networks as well as feedback networks for nuetralization.

48 degrees north is the Canadian border. I also got this in email. It appears to be "adapted" to the current Denver snow situation.

This is an urban legend, never appeared in the Denver Post, but has a lot of truth in it neverless. If the Northern Plains were populated by the type of minorities that populates New Orleans, there would be all kinds of whinning and crying about how Bush and the Gument ain't doing nuthing to halp us po folks, and Jessie Jackson and Al not-so-Sharpton would be here getting there ugly mugs in front of the cameras.

"Nevertheless," urban legends have no truth.
Legends are nonhistorical, unverifiable and usually based in lore. Even if one WERE based in truth, such would remain highly subjective.

>If the Northern Plains were populated by the Well now, the Bush government have done nothing to help anyone except themselves. See, there's this little known document among Bush supporters called the Preamble to the U.S. Constitution. It very plainly states, "We the People of the United States, in Order to form a more perfect Union, establish Justice, insure domestic Tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general Welfare.....", etc.

Now, I know you Bush-or-die supporters loathe helping anyone but yourselves, so perhaps you should move to a country where people share your views, like Iraq or Iran.
Many of the homeowners insurance companies still haven't settled with MANY of those who lost their possessions to hurricanes and not just in New Orleans. One would think non-compliance of federal law by insurance companies would be handled swiftly and with justice by the regulating (read: federal) agencies, but the Bush admin is impotent in all regards except in that of fucking our citizens and country.

Have a cherokee cbs-1000. performed the jumper mod, then turned on radio on holding the the number 1 key.
All is ok, but it skips over 27.645.
Is there any way to get that frequency on that rig.
Maybe a 10 kc switch mod??
Any body know about this.

Obviously you have St. Augustine grass, How do yo dethatch yours. I know there are mechanical ways of doing it but to me they are a lot of work and rip out the roots.

Scalping with a lawnmower in the very early spring is the most common practice, while it is still semi-dormant. I suspect the city and the neighbors would object to burning.

Not to uncommon for a design that WILL work of of line voltage to not show a transformer even though it should have one. This may be in the verbal description of the AMP. Also any High Power amp may have a couple of hundred volts DC on the speaker terminals if there is componet failure. There should be circuitry to prevent this.whether it is line isolated or not. Typically the protection circuit CROWBARS the power supply blowing the fuse(s). Again it is not uncommon for something like this to not be included in the draft copy of an amp design.

You're right, and I think I remember saying that it was a prototype.
The production version was a 2-channel unit that included a better front-end with clipping indicator, a triac power switch (easier on the power lines), a DC offset protection circuit (no crowbar), and thermal breakers on the sinks. It was conservatively rated at 1000 watts RMS continuous into 2 ohms in bridge mode. It could do 2000 watts but the filters would get too hot because of the low carrier frequency, which was the primary limitation of MOSFET technology at the time. Nowdays they make MOSFETs with rise times in the sub nS range which made this amp obsolete very quickly.

LIfe of a flourescent bulb is measured more in on/off cycles than on time. I keep a small lamp on in the kitchen it has been on ever since we moved into this house which is now over 15 years, only going off during power failures.
On the other hand the other florescent lights in the kitchen are switched several times a day and only last 2 or 3 years.

I think you're out of luck on that one. If memory serves right, even with an open clarifier you can only slide an additional 5 kc. Now if you had one of the clones such as a Tomahawk or Northpoint.....

Brian Griffey...
Man you seem to never stop pushing that crappy amp. I mean you just never stop. Why is it that you NEVER and I mean NEVER get along with anyone? Brian or professor whatever you are being called now, you have been on this group for years and you have never been appreciated or wanted here. For some odd reason this does not deter you from going elsewhere. I mean of course it is your choice to stay and get abused, but why do it? I have been on this group longer than you and I remember when you first came on. If I am correct you were having the same arguments in 1995/1996 with some of the very old timers like painkiller, concrete man, sean, icecoldnyc, dennis, tollfree... the list goes on. Why has it not changed? Of course you would like to blame others rather than yourself, however I ask you to examine the obvious. You have constant strife on this group. Why do you stay and abuse yourself? Why take the abuse. Unless of course you get some perverse pleasure out of it. The anti keydown guys were at least trying to push their agenda but what is your excuse? Why still here arguing and disagreeing with people on this group still?
Will there come a time when you stop this insane push of your 2 transister amplifier? The spam is simply juvenile at this point.Trust me I have been in the business for quite some time and I know amps. Simply put if yours was half as good as you rant, they would be flying out of your basement and you would not have to defend them at every turn. Now have a happy new year. Celebrate 10 years of the same ole griffey.

generate enough hits on his website so he can supplement his welfare check with some web advertising, or something like that. At least I hope so..... if not then he's gone insane.

hey brian, a little quote from a famous author:

violence (aka force, insults and the like) are the last refuge of the incompetent.

also, I have noted that you seem to ask some very basic questions for someone who "owns" an electronics company (questions normally asked by a newbie to the field of electronics). You have also claimed to be "well versed" in the field of electronics. I now have serious doubts that you are who you claim to be. your own works in this regard betray you.

now, I don't have a string of letter following my name, but I do have a number of years of "in the field" experience with various radio devices and technologies. my "experience" tells me you need to go back to school. you are lacking in general basic knowledge (and it also appears you lack the ability to think). your outburst above is an example of such a lack of proper education.

if you are going to continue to present yourself as an engineer or technician, you'd better make sure your have all your certificates and letters in order. otherwise, I can't see how anyone is going to be able to take you seriously.

heheh. yep. as predicted..... :)

well, enjoy your stay here in rec.radio.*. I'm sure it will be a short one.

and yeah, I did hit a nerve there (judging by your reaction).

anyway, my words were offered as useful advice. you, however, reacted emotionally (as was expected). Had you thought about it logically, you would have seen my point. oh well, you are too ingrained to understand it right now. get back to me when you've had a chance to think.

Put together a little rf speech processor last night on a bread board using color burst crystals for IF filter and osc. Works great with 9db of clipping, about $10 worth of parts off the shelf cost. Took about 2 hours to bread board it up. I figure a one man production line could build one in about 30 minutes.Its just stuffing a board and soldering.

How do you propose to use such a device for AM or FM signals?

I like it, too. It's slicker than a whore's leg on nickel-day. I used a 100kHz crystal and LC filter for mine, but using colorburst crystals would make it a lot smaller.

I'm sure Brian will be pleased to hear that it doesn't require much work. All he needs now is for someone to draw him a schematic!!!

The problem is that this type of RF clipping scheme only works on SSB signals. Back to the drawing board Frank.

It works on AM, too, Brian. It even works in audio PA systems to keep the power amp from clipping.

So where's the schematic for your amp? And looking at your posting frequency lately, don't you think it's time you save the taxpayers some money and get a job?

Please explain the principle of this RF clipping... and how it would apply to an AM signal.

I'm tired of tutoring you in basic electronics, Brian. You seem to have lots of time on your hands..... go to school and learn it there.
Or go to the library and read a book. Judas H. F. Priest, can't you do anything for yourself?

OK... expected.
Why didn't you just say you don't know.
The fact is that such an RF clipping scheme will not work on anything but SSB signals.

It's an AUDIO processor, Brian. Audio IN, audio OUT. That means it will work in ANY application where an audio limiter is needed. I posted a link to one on the BAMA site..... didn't you read it? Or are you waiting for your mommy to read it to you at bedtime?

Apparently it was "consistant and accurate" enough for Jimmy D. And you need to install the viewer for .djvu files. Can you find the

From the manual I cited earlier but you were too lazy to read:

==========

DESCRIPTION:

The Comdel Model CSP 11 is a speech processing device which provides instantaneous limiting without the distortion found in ordinary speech clippers. It is installed in microphone lead lines and does not require any modifications to the main equipment. When employed with public address systems and most radio transmitters, the CSP 11 will give greater average power output for any given peak level than conventional clippers due to the absence of distortion. With SSB systems, where conventional clippers are marginal in performance, the CSP 11 will give good quality output with an -average- power (talk power) gain of 10db or more, relative to the -peak- power output.

I think my point is clear to everyone but you, Brian. And replying to waiting till I got back? You need help. And not with your amp or audio processor -- you need professional psychiatric help. My first guess be disabling. Is that why you are drawing welfare, Brian? Because Reread again. He stated 9 db of clipping. That does not correspond to power increase.

an innocent observation? you?!?!?! riiiiiiiight! you have never made an innocent observation in your life here. you have always chosen to insult, enrage, belittle and divert attention from the real issues. you run under several nyms (and here I have always used this one) and you cannot tell the truth at all (at least none that I was able to detect) face it. you are one of the trolls.

here is a question for you: when have you ever contributed useful (and helpful) information here that wasn't an insult or an attack (don't lie to me, I am as adept at using google as any of the rest here)?

Hello TS E:

You need a really Bitchen type of name for a good speech processor. But the problem is, that if the speech processor doesn't work well then the Bitchen name works against you.

I have a "KING KONG" Gamma Match here with a very large burn hole in it. "KING KONG" yeah right! They put more time into the name than the product!

Why would I say a thing like that? It's not like you've never designed anything that wasn't at least 95% someone else's work. And even though your understanding of electronics can be compared to Swiss cheese, I'm sure you spend a lot of your free time studying, right? Just because your early education in electronics was from 2-bit television circuits designed for the purpose of patent-leeching, that doesn't mean you -have- to follow in your father's footsteps. And speaking of your father, I have no doubt that you pay rent for living in his house.
After all, I'm sure you wouldn't want to live as an adult that needs to be supported by his parents, because that would be pathetic.

Yes Brian, you are certainly a man that can design his own circuits, be his own boss, stand on his own two feet and not need to rest his fat, lazy ass on the labor and laurels of others.

Now..... where's that schematic?

Hi Jay, didnt know you could buy gamma matches. A guy gave me a Moonraker 4 beam a few years ago that had some damage . The gamma mctches had been damaged so I replaced them with a piece of Al tubing and a piece of RGa that had the shield stripped off.

Well, Florida had Punce de Leon, and "show-na-to-va" is a tennis player, but he's too stupid to put two together in his own hand, so can you blame him for having to find friends on cognet?

Perhaps he'll find Tommy, who doesn't know what the Fountain of Youth is, either.

There was an old Bishop whose clucking
Confessed he knew nothing of fucking;
Forget a good boff,
He can't even fuck off,
So he just has to settle for sucking.

Come again, Oyen? Not sure what you're trying to say here. Communication man, communication, get it right!

>it is not my fault when you fail to understand.

It is most certainly your fault others are unable to understand when your sentence or question is improperly formed and hacked like you exampled above.
How many people do you think can understand your non-sensical warbling, Oyen? You wrote, "Is that why your flinked out?" Again, your inquiry refers to my ownership of something, but no one can make out what you're trying to utter. Now you're blaming me because of you're inability to compose a legible sentence or inquiry. It's -your- poor grammar, nonsensical warbling and improper contraction (read: poor communication) that confuses you so.

I made the innocent observation that you come here to learn, inform another of your situation and you ask why I'm "flinked" out. Nothing ad-hominum except your comment about thinking. You're a hypocrite, Eric, and a bitter person.

>an innocent observation? you?!?!?! riiiiiiiight!

You've been wrong about this as long as the subject has been reducing you to tears. Of course, you are unable to provide for anything you say, Oyen. Nothing but bitterness and anger originates from your little pit.

>(and here I have always used this one) and >you cannot tell the truth at all (at least none

You're one of the assholes, Eric. You know it, I know it, everyone knows it. You've been corrected repeatedly, schooled and referred, yet you refuse to learn. You make unfounded accusations based on nothing more than your ignorance and you attack CB'ers on a regular basis whenever one engages in behavior you do not understand or agree. When confused, you attack, a predictable response ingrained in most small carnivores.
When isolated, you begin to whither like other parasites.

You're not adept at anything regarding communication, Oyen, or you would have caught yesterday's posts regarding the freeband radio by the dude in NY. And you wouldn't have to ask another to point it out for you, but admitting you're about as useless as tits on a boar when it comes to your observation skills is a great start at your recovery. So now you suffer from communication and observation skills. Gee Oyen, the only thing you have going for you is us regs willing to teach and school you no matter how much you degrade yourself.

Eric, everything I try I accomplish.

Masterful sailors need no lifeboats. Now run along and listen to the free band.

That's because I'm in the lead boat, Oyen, a leader never a follower. I'm not an obstructionist like yourself. Enjoy listening to me on the free band, Oyen. You may continue to dream.

You are correct in that they are two different modes. They are amplitude modulated signals and are derived from the same general equation. Look in any Communications Text book used in Electrical Engineering school.

You probably used the schematics from the evaluation board and maybe tweeked a resistor and/or capacitor value.

But then it is a good starting place.

Got a nasty cold so I stayed away from work today and tinkered with my speech processor some. Replaced the transistor mic amp with an op amp and Put an FET in seies with the input to the amp. Feeding the gate of the amp with dc derived from the output of the processor giving it AGC. This thing is getting to be a knob twisters delite. One thing did get me thinking. I have a nice scope to look at the output of my TX and to lookat the output of the processor , for me its a piece of cake to setup. How can you do this without test equipment?

Hello Jimmie D:

Yeah there are after market and some antenna manufactures sell larger diameter Gamma Matches to handle higher voltage in order to handle high power output. The costly thing in the Gamma Matches is the use of a good insulator like Teflon is real expensive.

I just put up a Moonraker 4 with some new and improved parts and pieces, but still had the stock Gamma Matches. The Hubs, Mast to Boom mounting plate, and and few other things had been updated, but I was disappointed with the antennas performance. And I ran one of these antennas for a long time.

The moonraker is a pretty decent antenna but like a lot of CB antennas the manufctures were trying to sell elements. They stuff as many elements as they can on a boom that is still UPS shipable. I remember back in the 70s how a few people would claim that ther e3 element beam was better than the 4 they used to have and now I believe they may have been right. I extended the boom on mine and respaced the elements vertical for 11M and horizontal for 10. Any way I guess the point I was trying to make to start with before I rambled is that my Al tubing and coax gamma match easily handles a full KW on 10. Why cant the manufacturers make something that is so easy to make? At the risk of appearing to answer my own question I think it was because if they did consumers would realize you can go down to the hardware store and buy the parts and roll your own about as easy as you can build thiers out of the box.

That's because most nut cases who work for a living usually -have- to live by a schedule. Maybe some day you'll..... aw, who am I kidding.
Let me tell you a little story, Brian:

Several years ago I came across this old guy up in Mead (a small town just North of here). He had amassed a HUGE amount of very cool stuff in a warehouse; just about everything electronic to the mundane to the riduculous. Piles of electrolytic caps almost as big as your head, 55-gallon drums loaded with old tubes, shelves stacked to the roof with radios and test equipment from antique to modern, 50-cubes filled with circuit boards and assemblies, etc, etc, etc. He even had an old portable BC station in a van, complete with an AN/FRT-39 and a 40hp diesel generator. Very cool stuff. Every time I showed up he was open for business..... but would never sell anything! You see, someone had given him this stupid book that told how to make money from the scrap metals in electronics. So every time I walked in the door there was the old man in his wheelchair, smashing transmitter and big old audio power tubes for a few micrograms of thorium, crushing and desoldering RF power transistors and vintage chips for maybe a penny's worth of gold, and all the while bumming smokes from me. Eventually I started to feel sorry for the fart so I explained that most of the stuff was worth a hell of a lot more if left intact. I even offered to put some of the stuff on ebay to prove it to him, but he couldn't shake the thought that it might have gold in it. Going with that, and having worked at Johnson-Matthey, I explained that the gold-plated chip lids didn't have nearly as much gold as the solder that held them on. But he wouldn't hear of such a thing because the lids were gold and the solder was white. You couldn't talk sense to the guy because he firmly believed that he was going to get rich from the info in that idiotic book. After a few more visits I finally gave up. A couple years later the building and its contents were condemned in order to make way for the new freeway. A month later I picked up the van at a county auction for $200. Just a short time after that he died, alone and broke, in a nursing home. What a waste. And all because he allowed himself to be locked him into a mindset of greed that shut out the advice of anyone else, refusing to see all the wealth he really had, focusing only on the glitter.

Maybe you're smart enough to learn something from that, Brian. Or maybe you're not. Only time will tell.

Any technical specifications? What gain does it have at 3KHz compared to other frequencies and what range does it cover. Also what is the attack and decay and gain on 3KHz?
I am interested to know if it would be any better than the processors I have used before. Many such as Turner and Protel are way over the top and when matched to a badly tuned CB they sound bad! They are completely unsuitable for FM use but will work to some extent on AM, but are far better on SSB. CBers need to get away from thinking the louder the microphone the more power. You will hear many using a compressor on FM that is causing so much splatter. People still turn the deviation on radios up in error.

One of the bad things about compressors and clippers is that usually the person using it does not have proper test equipment to set it up. Most try to set it for max "swing". Most people to not understand that power generae outside of the passband of a receiver is a total waste. Well maybe not totally, at least your buds 10 channels away will know you are on the air.

No they aren't. They are more similar than different. SSB is an AM signal that has the carrier supressed and the opposite sideband filtered out.

Then again I would expect a tech to not totally understand the subtle differences between AM and SSB.

What is more an issue and a problem is that most CB grade audio compressors and clippers are not properly band limited. throwiong the full audio spectrum from Dc to 20KHz. and beyond is an often mistake made. A simple look at the standard equation for Double Sideband Large Carrier AM signal it becomes self evident that the wider the frequency spectrum of the modulating signal the wider the bandwidth of the sidebands are.

If you really want to trash your neighbor's CBs for +/- 20 or so channels, just open the bandwidth of the micrphone amp and audio string in front of the audio power amp that delivers the power to the modulated stage. Say an audio spectrum from Dc to 40 KHz should do the trick. Then to really splatter just increase the modulation index to around 2. That should give you a signal that should easily occupy about 400KHz of bandwidth.

All this can be done with a carrier of about 10 to 20 watts and you can be heard on all 40 channels for a good five to ten miles radius.

A good band limited mic amp with some compression and/or clipping will help in improving signal to noise ratios of about one to two dB at the recieving end. Audio clipping and compression do very little to improve signal to noise ratios. They do help imensely in increasing bandwidth when not properly use. CBers think that loud is better and even more louder is even more bettter. The problem is when you have to heavily a modualted AM signal that is fed into an amp the is driven into class C region, the resulting signal is a nightmare at worst. The resulting signal occupies so much bandwidth and then the desired signal to be received is so crappy sounding, most people haven't the guts to tell someone that their signal sounds like crap. It seems that the crappier the signal sounds the better the signal report. The farther the s meter swings to the right the better the signal. Doesn't matter if it is not intelligable.

I have tried to give constuctive critcism to someone to help him set up his powermike telling him how bad that it sounded and that he needed to turn it down even offering to let him know when it was set right(I can readily connect my scope to the IF ampand detector of my RX) only to be blasted by his friends that said he sounded FINE. Dont even try to tell someone that a Class C amp actually removes modulation.

The theory behind a compressor amp is to provide a more constant power signal to the modulator. There have been many schemes in the past 70 yrs or so to do that. Even to the point of what was once called Super Modulation.

A properly setup with compression will not have excessive compression and also not use the compression stage as the major gain stage. Where most compression schemes come into dislike is when the person using it feels he needs to get far more gain from the circuit than is really necessary and so much compression that you can hear a roach fart 20 feet away.

The idea behind audio compression and other audio/rf processing schemes is to increase signal to noise ratios. When using AM and the carrier is already 30 dB above the ambient atmospheric noise then any processing is typically useless. The gain in signal to noise ratio is not worth the effort or even the cost of adding such a circuit. Audio compression is totally useless on FM unless you want a constant deviated signal. For what ever reason that one would want this is beyond all logic.

Even when the AM signal is marginal to the atmospheric noise, audio compression alone yields between 1 and 2 dB improvement in the received signal to noise ratio. On AM, when you are at 6 to 8 dB signal to noise ratio, improving one to two dB is generally worthless improvement.

Clippers are much more useful. Ususally you can clip off the top 8 or 9 db without substantial effecting intelligebility of the voice. This does make for a louder signal without overmoduation. Compression works best when used with an expander on the rx end. But how often are you going to see that..

I believe what comes around goes around and I know full well that it's just bad juju to wish such a level of turmoil and ill upon other humans, warmongering gay-hating maladroits or no, and that the real path of enlightenment is paved with forgiveness and progress and white-hot love and turning the other cheek and scotch.

"In fact, Jesus said something about that, I do believe. He said, "Knock it off already with the warmongering and the hating of each other and let's all get some wine and party like it's 2012." Then again, he never saw Karl Rove stab the nation with the dull ice pick of bogus fear. He never heard George W. Bush describe brutal war and the death of tens of thousands as "just a comma" in world history.

Hello Jimmie D:

Well the Moonraker 4 and 6 element beams where a great design for the hardware to get real cheap for production. The Hubs that attached the Elements to the Boom are made from Cast Aluminum. Real cheap to manufacture, but in time they break and crack making the Moonraker Beams useless. I had new Hubs made from 6061 T6 Billet Aluminum made from a CNC Mill. Now the Hubs are bullet proof. But expensive!

But the problem for manufacturing something using large quantities of materials is always been a design art.

TEH WAY OF THE K00K
Never learn from your mistakes.
Always practice your mistakes; you may get them right.
Always pick on those smarter and tougher than you.
Always believe that only you know the TRVTH.
Never allow logic or reason get in the way of a good k00k.
When being overwhelmed by logic and reason: k00ksuit!
If you are going to be wrong, do it at the top of your lungs.
When caught in a lie: LIE!
When in doubt: Order the Crab Won Ton
Plagiarism is your friend. Use it.
Whenever contradicted; morph, start calling people names, and make false accusations. Include the children of your target in your allegations, even if they don't have any.
(06-Jun-05) When nobody else will listen, post to your own fan group.
(06-Jun-05) Obviously, since you have your own fan group, this must mean that you have fans. Post prolifically to your fan group - you wouldn't want to disappoint them!
(10-May-2005)Everyone reads usenet. Approval here means approval everywhere.
Post numerous blank posts, or posts containing only a message id.
Post numerous copy&paste web articles from crackerpot websites.
Never forget to call kookologists "k00ks."
If there are several, call them "sockpuppets" too
When all else fails, accuse various and sundry kookologists of e-mailing viruses to you. This is a sure-fire method of garnering sympathy and ensuring that the General Public will always see things your way. An especially effective sub-strategy here is to accuse them of infecting you with the 'Sasser' worm via e-mail.

Quote notorious scientists or writers - it makes it look as if they approve the drivel you are writing!
(9-Jul-05) Anytime your computer is infected with a virus, bogged down by spyware, attacked over your internet connection, or otherwise suffers from preventable problems, government agencies are responsible and are trying to silence you and are monitoring your computer files.
Ignore all traffic signs and feel free to trespass, you don't have to obey any rules.
Scare your enemies with lawsuits, police escorts and whines.
Always back up your empty (albeit noisy) threats with phony LARTs, false police reports, and harassing letters to the FBI and other gubbermint agencies.
Be vigilant in your redundancy. The more you repeat yourself, the more likely others will believe you!
If you can't find anyone as crazy as yourself to support you in the flamewars you start with the normal population, create sock puppets and use anonymous remailers that shamelessly hang on every word you write.

(17-Mar-05) When dealing with law enforcement, remember that it is they who have the problem, not you. Be sure to inform them of this at every available opportunity, as they will surely appreciate your constructive criticism. Be sure to make them aware that YOU KNOW YOUR RIGHTS! ("The cops like that, when people know their rights. That way they don't have to read them to you on the way to the station." - George Carlin)

The more your fake personalities adulate you, the more respect you'll get!
When confronted with a reality that you don't like: Announce loudly that you are departing, never to return as long as there's an Internet.

Come back in three or four days and claim you were drunk, hacked, abducted by alience, or forged. Alternately you can just not even mention your prior departure, and if anyone asks you about it, either ignore them or respond with something along the lines of "YOUR NOT THE BOSS OF ME! PLONK!" People really know you mean business then.
Always remain clueproof.
(20-Mar-05) Anyone who does not believe that you are the reincarnation of [$DEITY_OR_PROPHET] is obviously an infidel lacking in faith whose soul in in peril of everlasting damnation.
When responding to one line challenges, post paragraphs of rants and screed in response.

Incoherency is not a roadblock to poasting.
Neither is illiteracy.
Delusions poasted often enough become fact.
Claim you will destroy <insert newsfroup> for attacking you.
When spnaked, send cmsg for Fanboi newsfroup(s).
Find your Lame, Use your Lame, Be your Lame!
Post Edit when the TRVTH hurts.
Always sneck the offending newsfroups.
Always poast pictures of yourself so you can be admired in all your k00ky
glory.
Always accuse others of the very acts you are guilty of.
Post lots of boasts about your high IQ and incredible talents.
(20-Mar-05) If you repeat a lie often enough, it becomes the truth.
Anybody who fails to understand this is engaged in a deliberate campaign
of misinformation and character assassination.

Then I suggest you go into a public place, perhaps a grocery store, a nightclub, let everyone you see know that you are a pedophile by telling them to their face.

Report back here and tell us what happened.
Odds are that you wouldn't even survive more than 10 minutes, someone would end up taking you out real fast or at the very least beat you into a coma.

Stay stupid, pedophile...

Right, when I know that the only creature on this Earth with less brains than you is a mob? Anyone can upset a mob ...

Why don't you try going into the same grocery store and tell how you advised someone who claimed to be a 17-year-old boy to commit suicide?

I can tell you what they'd do and think - nothing. They either wouldn't take you seriously (even if you buggered a child under their noses) or they'd laugh you off as being crazy.

Fact is, people don't usually want to get involved.

Because of my, um, situation, I've studied the dichotomy of large groups and small ones - and "groups" consisting of one to three people.

If you ask a group of people to help you in a bad situation (lost dog, lost child, etc) they won't do a damn thing - if you ask a "small: group - they usually will. The smaller the number of individuals, usually, the more they will react.

Case in point: several years ago, several men raped a woman in the back of a bar (though it's happened more often than you think, the movie with Jodie Foster, "The Accused" was based on one account, though loosely) . . . out of approximately 20 people in the bar, only 4 men raped her. Why only the four? Why didn't the other men who WATCHED it happen do anything? It helps if you look at the group of men raping the woman as one group and the watchers as a second group.

The group of men that raped her was very small - one man began the assault and the others joined in. While the other, larger group, did nothing. I've honestly come to the conclusion (though skewed, I admit) that people are basically "herd animals." The smaller the group, the more likely it is that a single person will act like the "mind" of the group and the small group will adopt that mindset. The larger the group, the less likely that a single person will act on their intentions/desires/inclinations.

Now obviously, that doesn't include the situations where people, of their own volition, form a group - such as when a child is lost, and individual people come to merge with others.

> Why don't you try going into the same grocery store and tell how you > advised someone who claimed to be a 17-year-old boy to commit suicide?

Same thing as above - they may think about doing something awful to that person, but unless it's a small group and ONE person begins to "do something" - nothing will actually occur.

Obviously, in both situations, if there is a person who has experienced either their own child being molested or their own child committing suicide, it's quite likely that THEY will have a reaction that the others might "feed on" and the entire group might act. But I think that both occurrences are so rare that it wouldn't be the case.

You have some good points -- I make similar points in another post.

My only disagreement with you is that you can easily turn a large group into an angry mob by pushing the right buttons -- and fear is usually the best button, fear of the "horrible, stranger pedophile," for example, since nothing inspires anger more readily than fear.
There are other examples -- Hitler's appeal to his "master race" and the subsequent national obsession. The activities in NYC during the black outs of the 70's, the Watts riots ... there are more, of course!

"An angry mob is a terrible thing, and I think it is about time we had one!" -- Young Frankenstein

I disagree that it would be the "fear of the horrible, stranger pedophile"
so much as the fact that (assuming the statistics are correct and 1 in 6 adults experience some form of "inappropriate sexual contact" as a child), at least one member of the "mob" is likely to harbor some anger and/or resentment towards his/her abuser (please note that if it weren't abusive,

there wouldn't be any anger/resentment so don't give me that 'not all contact is abusive' because that's not the point here) and that person is likely to be more agressive out of anger rather than fear.. at least that has been my experience when I've mentioned "pedophiles" in a bar setting..

(I hope that makes sense... I got interrupted twice while typing it up and
I'm all hopped up on cold medicine.. :)

I disagree.. but I already posted why in my response to as400.. err wait... 4s400th I mean lol

I mentioned "pedophiles" in a bar just Monday and I thought this one guy was going to explode - he started ranting and raving about how they should all be killed and then went on to tell me the story of how he was abused as a child.. given the statistics, I don't think finding people of his mindset is going to be such a "rare" occurance..

That's okay, I'm always on narcotics because of chronic pain -- sometimes moreso than others, though!

I used the "fear of the horrible, stranger pedophile" merely as an example. Certainly you have a valid point -- and I absolutely detest anyone who would tell someone who feels like they have been abused that "it" wasn't abuse. No, it isn't always abusive, but if the person feels abused, then "it" probably was abuse.

But the point about the "stranger pedophile" is that the hysteria over pedophiles tends to ignore that the majority of CSA is done by people the child knows and trusts. And, in their hysteria over the "Strangers" people are doing really stupid things and thinking they are making their children safer, when they don't even understand the actual problem and, thus, are doing nothing about it.

I think the setting matters . . . I could see someone in a bar reacting with fury more than the grocery store - why? Maybe kids are present and adults DO tend to monitor their behavior better in front of kids (sometimes, even in front of what they perceive as "ladies" - but then, I'm southern, LOL).

Too . . . a bar? Well, considering the emotional impact that molestation would effect, I think that alcohol abuse is prolly pretty common for victims - you know, trying to drink the pain away? Lord knows I've been known to abuse alcohol for less . . . but anyway, so I think that in a bar setting, you're more likely to come across someone that's HAD that kind of pain and more likely to VENT it. Especially more so than in a grocery store, where there might be kids, women, etc

. . . and too, how many people were in the bar? If it were more than 20 _nearby_ (not just IN the bar, but close to the person) I'll bet he wouldn't have said a single word.

That's speaking from a man's POV - meaning a MAN would be more likely to try to do something in a group setting - I think a woman would leave and wait outside quietly and fucking mace someone . . .

But I really think that people just don't fucking react to shit in large group settings. I once saw a woman getting smacked around in a grocery store with about 30 people in the lines. The guy damn near beat her to fucking death and no one said shit, no one moved, their eyes averted as if they thought that by looking away, the whole tableau would just disappear . . . fucking disgusted the shit out of me. And before anyone says a fucking word, I DID do something . . . I maced his ass in the middle of the candy display. And everyone looked at ME like I was the one who started all the shit - looking very uncomfortable, very indignant.

Fucking cattle. >: ( Definitely true. I can see people in a grocery store (or other place where there are kids) simply giving him dirty looks and moving away. MAYBE uttering an expletive or two, but not much more...

Yeah, same here. And honestly, I'd have it no other way. Kids learn enough st00pid shit (starting fights, screaming, etc) without more lessons.

447. Messenger 1600 For Sale

I have a Messenger 1600 w/remote for sale. It is in perfect working condition, thought the on/off switch on the remote needs to be replaced. It's 2 pills driving 16 (Not sure of the exact set, but I think the 16 are 1446, again not totally sure). Pictures are available upon request. I had this checked and was told exactly as follows "No charge for checking the amp, that thing kicks ass!"
The reason for selling it is, well I have a Messenger 1200 in my Bronco and a Texas Star 667 in the pick up, so needless to say no use for this rig anymore.

Asking for $1000.00 or best offer

Guaranteed not DOA

All inquires can be made @ messenger1600@Yahoo.com

Correction: Google Groups not working usenet. I never heard of this here group before, this is a big coincidence.

I dont remember the hubs like that. The ones I had were fastened on with Muffler clamps on the boom and them cable clamps held the elements to the muffler clamps.

The goal of both compression and clipping of the audio signal is reduce the peak to average power of the human voice. Typical Human voice peak to average power range is about 3:1.

Clipping can be as high as 30 dB as long as there is sufficient filtering after the clipping stage to restore the audio bandwidth to its original bandwidth. Otherwise you have splatter or increased modualted bandwidth.

Compression is somewhat more effective in reducing the peak to averge power in the voice. It can be implemented with better results. A major drawback to compression over clipping is increased cost with a more complex circuit and more difficult adjustments. All to often in CB work the compression stage also doubles up to be mic amp and a large gain stage at the very low level stages of the audio stream. I personally don't like this as it requires to many adjustments for one stage. Audio compression is better done, in my opinion, in or near the final stage, high level, of the audio stream. This too is not without its drawbacks either.

Neither circuit requires the receiver to have any special ciruitry to enhance intelligibility.

I'm siding with TIME and voting USENET for KOOK of the year, even if I know it's lazy and avoids any back-stabbing politics.

Of course, we don't have to find out sleaze later because nobody's got time to hear all that with a cast of 482

Hello Jimmie D:

Ok the Moonraker series beams used a clam shell type Hub that had two of the same Hub haves, that bolted together to hold the 4 elements. A 1/4 bolt then squeezed the hub opening to close against the Boom. The manufacturing of these Hubs had to be real cheap as it was Cast Aluminum that if over torque or got to old, would crack then break. Great to keep the manufacturing costs down, but not good for reliability. I'll bet a lot of good antennas have been thrown out over the poorly designed Hubs.

Look at http://www.cbtricks.com for the Moonraker assembly instructions.

The custom Billet Moonraker Hubs I had made, stirred up a lot of interest until the they heard the cost of the material and machining costs. If you want to play U got to pay!

I think the Wilson Line, now MaCo line uses Muffler Clamps to mount the four elements. Which is a good call, as it can be reused without being damaged. And doesn't require bullet proof 6061 T6 Aluminum Bar Stock and expensive CNC machining.

Keep on foaming, Wabbit! You picked the right guy for a followup, too -- he's an even bigger coward than you are, which is astonishing. Frog and forge Mark for just a few more weeks, and you should win COTM by a

When I rebuilt mine I replaced the existing mufflerclamps with SS hardware, a good idea on any antenna or lawn equipment IMO. You have to be careful though and not put SS next to galvanized or you make for a worse corrosion problem. The U bolts were easy to find but the brackets had to be fabricated. I think these are probably easy to find these days with the popularity of SS exhaust systems.

My experience has been that 9 or 10 db is enough clipping. I cant imagine 30 db of clipping

From my experience compression is more to allow consistent modulation when a change in voice, such as the difference when I talk on the radio and my wife talks. IF she tries without readjusting the mike gain she may not be heard.

Clipping really removes audio not needed for effective modulation and amplifies that that contains the most intelligence. This often shows up on the rx S meter as less than an S unit change over an unclipped signal but sounds like 10db or more increase.I dont have a clipper except for this peice of junk I threw together the other day but when I did have one the reaction was usually" wow how big is that amp you just turned on."

On SSB average power out of a 100 wat tx on voice may be only 12 watts average add a clipper and you can increase that to 80

My preference is a clipper with some AGC action to keep the average output level faily constant.

It has come to the attention of a select few in Law Enforcement that Mark Morgan, KB9RQZ, has violated Federal Law in that he has illegally wrested control of a web site, http://www.marksspamblog.blogspot.com/ away from the original creator. Mr. Morgan exploited weaknesses in the log-in and registration procedures and provided false information to Google in so doing.

Morgan is apparently unaware that in so doing, he violated Federal Regulations making such acts illegal.

Mister Morgan has since been reported to the proper authorities and copies of his illegally gained web site have been recorded and saved for future legal proceedings.

His act is a Felony under current regulations.

He used a replyable address. It may well bounce, but lots of real addresses bounce. The point is, the latter portion is not munged, as it usually is, and you have multiple addies, too, so how is anyone who doesn't know you to know which is real?

No it works quite well, but it is not something you would want to show off and I dont ever infer anything. If I didecide to keep one it will be built a lot better than this one of better componets but even this thrown together piece of junk clipper will work a hell of a lot better than your compressor.

Oh my! Don't bring up high level modulation to Brian or he'll soon be trying to install one of his hacks in an old tube type transmitter! We don't want to get him killed!

So Mark, what's up with the .org in your email. Are you now a 501(c)3 nonprofit organization? Wonder what the feds would think of you implying you are? Maybe you might want to rethink using that sig in the future.

indeed 1) I was draft into the US Army
2) I is a member of the Chemcal Cops
3) The military wont let me retire.
4) I dosn't serve under the name 'Mark Morgan but that's okay cuz teh FBI, DOD, and CIA have all told me I cando it you loosers
5) I is on-the-lam from stalking former marines and fatal attraction four ex-shemale wife
6) I was recently, paying $5/hr. to access my ISP
7) I has a 248 IQ, but can't figure out how to use a spel cheker.
8) I is a bi-sexual Pagan male ham who like to bspanked an sloid waste
9) I can't find any action on the military base in Central IL, so I hav to ask people on teh USENET.
10) I punce
11) dyslexics are just deiferently wied losing something and gaining other like in my case the ability to see most camoflage nets since it stands out to my eye while my spelling my eyes self correct for so I see what I intended no matter what they want to do soemthing I have never done before lead men in battle
the war is treching things quuit e abitI tell em no hell no and no fucking

Clearly I overestimated your reading comprehension. To summarize, the old man died miserably and I ended up with a 5kW HF transmitter station. I feel sorry for the guy, but do you think I'm complaining about it?

>You are really full of yourself (and other things).

True. But that doesn't diminish the fact that an obsession can make a person irrational. The old man got obsessed about the gold and forgot about the underlying motivation. Likewise, you are so obsessed about defending your facade of credibility that you reject any advice, from me and a lot of others in this group, that could legitimize your credentials.

Put more simply, your "hack-&-quack" business plan is doomed to fail.

>Is it so surprising that I'm not the only one that doesn't listen to >you... LOL

Your response to my post is prima facie to the contrary, just as your continued spamming of the group is proof that your "products" are junk. You've taken my advice before -- take it again now.

That is typical of Mark. Being banned, blacklisted, etc., is NEVER his fault. It is always somebody else's fault, isn't it? It is always a "scurous trick" that seems to happen only to Mark.

Stop being a crybaby. You've earned what you've received. You are not well liked and you are not wanted in most groups and have been effectively banned from those that have control. What part of this do you not understand?

Ohhh, I don't think Mark's done a single illegal thing, there. He merely took possession of a blog which had been created to harass him, and the creator foolishly used an email address of Mark's for reference. You stepped on your own dick, there, Wabbit. Silly Wabbit!

Not "everybody elses" life, Brian.

Your business became my business because of all the techno-BS you throw around in here with your spam. I figured that it would be much better if you could actually learn something and provide -useful- and -accurate- technical advice instead of half-baked misconceptions about amplifier classes, linearity, modulation, etc, etc. It would be good for your business and it would be good for the group -- a win-win scenario. I can't fathom why you, in your apparent desire to build and grow a successful business, can't see the obvious benefits to such an approach. Instead, you engage your critics by shoveling more BS on top of your original piles. You've been doing it in here for ten years and it just doesn't make sense. That is, unless you're just a hack.

If you're a -real- electronics engineer then let's see the schematic for your amp. If not then don't expect me or anyone else to cut you any slack as long as you continue to spam your crap and shovel your BS in this group. Fair enough?

True, I think Wabbit deserves recognition for "skillz" in k00ky kombat.
I'll let another make that nomination, though.

Morning Randy,
You know he's not worth it. It's the exact same as Geo, nothing to say of any worth, always complaining etc etc. I see that he claims to have "Hacked" a website, what crock!!!! There's no way he did that!!! If he did there would be a record of him logging in with a track of his IP.
Now, if it was someone other than him, all they would have to do is go to the web host of the site, claim it was hacked and get a record of the ip's that logged in, find Mark's and report him to his ISP.
They may not care about him changing his screen nic to by-pass filters, but something like that would get him tossed real quick. Now it's more like he set that site up himself to try to get sympathy from others thinking he was being harassed.

All he would have to do is stop responding to them for a few or 6 months and they would fade away. Remember how long it took for Geo to finally calm down?
Now Mark, don't bother responding (Unless you want to change your screen name again), I have you kill filed along with 99% of your fans, so do all in RRCB a favor and delete this group when replying to you're friends.

Again I reiterate that both audio clipping and audio compression attempt to to the same thing, that is to reduce the peak to average power in an audio signal.

Compression techniques are basically a variable gain stage in which the gain is contrtolled by the input signal power. Therefore as teh input is low the gain is high. As power increases the gain reduces.
This raises the average audio power while maintianing the peak power.
Compression suffers from attack time and decay time issues. Set the decay to slow and the gain does not return to higher levels fast enough to amplity lower power signals. Set the decay time to fast then the compressor becomes ineffective. The attack time issues are even more critical in their adjustments.

A clipper works by removing the power above a certain threshold. That power does not just go into oblivion. Instead the power goes into harmonics of the audio frequencies that make up the power signal.
Therefore with clipping the peak to average is reduced by moving the power in the peaks of the audio power signal into the harmonics of that signal. There filtering will attenuate the harmonics to restore the original bandwidth. You need sufficient filtering with clipping somewhere in the amplifier chain before that audio power signal reaches the modulated stage.

The major issue of audio processing to decrease the peak to avergae power is not to do so much that you over stress the average characteristics of the modulated stage and any subsequent amplifier stage. Also do not confuse PEP (Peak Envelope Power) with Peak to average. They are two different identities.

A clipper with some form of agc is eesentially a clipper/compressor combination. Another best unto itself.

Which brings us right back to what I had suggested very early in this discussion: Take Brian's hack-job and follow it with an RF-type clipper. The two could probably be combined but I suspect alignment would be a whore.

According to the report the guy's radio tested out at 4 watts on first

Nah, that's Wabbit, the ambiguously identified coward. Might be Woger, might be Woger's follower. Whatever, he's the competition for Robert "Mop Jockey" Wolfe, another coward of stellar proportions.

"Immorality: The morality of those who are having a better time." -- H. L. Mencken

"Consider that language a moment. 'Purposefully and materially supported hostilities against the United States' is in the eye of the beholder, and this administration has proven itself to be astonishingly impatient with criticism of any kind. The broad powers given to Bush by this legislation allow him to capture, indefinitely detain, and refuse a hearing to any American citizen who speaks out against Iraq or any other part of the so-called 'War on Terror.'

"If you write a letter to the editor attacking Bush, you could be deemed as purposefully and materially supporting hostilities against the United States. If you organize or join a public demonstration against Iraq, or against the administration, the same designation could befall you. One dark-comedy aspect of the legislation is that senators or House members who publicly disagree with Bush, criticize him, or organize investigations into his dealings could be placed under the same designation. In effect, Congress just gave Bush the power to lock them up." -- William Rivers Pitt

"It has become clear in recent months that a critical mass of the American people have seen through the lies of the Bush administration; with the president's polls at an historic low, growing resistance to the war Iraq, and the Democrats likely to take back the Congress in mid-term elections, the Bush administration is on the ropes. And so it is particularly worrying that President Bush has seen fit, at this juncture to, in effect, declare himself dictator." -- Frank Morales

You need to get a newsreader. See those two dashes followed by a space? That's called a ".sig delimiter", and in a newsreader (one that works properly, mind you -- not OwiE, IOW), that gets stripped off automatically. Of course, for a newsreader, you need a real NSP, too, so you may well be fucked anyway.

> funny how the kooks and their little play mate marqueer can dish it out

You don't quite seem to get the meaning of the "Golden Killfile". It doesn't mean he's actually killfiled by the group as a whole, only that he's considered by the group to be a boring k00k. You, OTOH, are another matter -- calling kookologists "kooks" is a kooksign, for one thing, and rampant, raging homo-/biphobia is another.

explaining to reporters the meaning of that symbolism. Folksinger Phil
Ochs summed it up: "A demonstration should turn you on, not turn you

You don't mess around these days, do you Shark? Tried and true with the Texas Stars and Sweet 16s but I'm not personally familiar with the Messenger. What year is the Bronco and what type alternator and battery setup are you running? You can reply off board if you want.

Hey Twist,
I still talk every morning and evening on my way from work. Just that since I moved the commute is the same mileage, but the times are shorter than when driving on the Bay Area roads. The Bronco is a 73 Baja Stroppe, one of only 650 made, around 150 left in the world. Took a better part of a year to restore and way more funds than I should've spent.

Still ride the bike, got a Cherokee 1000 Base with a 500 watt base amp, antenna 110' up in the air (in a tree no less). Now, that's where I don't get much time to talk (at home). Still have probably 5 more linears, at least 7 mobiles and 5 antenna's & 2 more base stations laying around, so this is just a drop in the bucket.

See yaaa.............

i'm fairly new to the world of CB radios. my friend has one and got me interested, and i also liked the fact that i can get a PA system through one. i'll jsut throw it out there, what are some suggestions for a CB radio? i want one with PA capabilities. i also was wondering if yall had any speaker ideas, i know you need amps for some and i didnt know what kind of wattage requires an amp? i'm also interested in getting a police scanner, is it posible to get a combo or do you have to buy them separatly? Do i need any special kind of antena or a license to use a CB radio?

Any suggestions and help would be awesome!

Thanks

Asics have their place when space is a premium. Costwise, discretes can be cheaper. Also more simpler. Sometimes simpler is better.

That's the excuse Brian used for not including a regulated bias circuit in his previous amps. He eventually took my advice (not publically, of course) and hacked a bias circuit from a link I posted.
That's why he won't post the schematic for his current squack-box.

I didn't click the url, is Telstar Electronics still selling the manual for their CB radio amplifier on Ebay?

First question to seller - Who the hell would want one, even for free?

Nah, it's all a part of Griffey's spam plan...it pays toward the transistor bill, and gets the old lady off his backside about getting a real job whenever an occasional check rolls in.

Hey he could be moving some major turn blinkers too. ?

"Consider that language a moment. 'Purposefully and materially supported hostilities against the United States' is in the eye of the beholder, and this administration has proven itself to be astonishingly impatient with criticism of any kind. The broad powers given to Bush by this legislation allow him to capture, indefinitely detain, and refuse a hearing to any American citizen who speaks out against Iraq or any other part of the so-called 'War on Terror.'

"If you write a letter to the editor attacking Bush, you could be deemed as purposefully and materially supporting hostilities against the United States. If you organize or join a public demonstration against Iraq, or against the administration, the same designation could befall you. One dark-comedy aspect of the legislation is that senators or House members who publicly disagree with Bush, criticize him, or organize investigations into his dealings could be placed under the same designation. In effect, Congress just gave Bush the power to lock them up." -- William Rivers Pitt

"It has become clear in recent months that a critical mass of the American people have seen through the lies of the Bush administration; with the president's polls at an historic low, growing resistance to the war Iraq, and the Democrats likely to take back the Congress in mid-term elections, the Bush administration is on the ropes. And so it is particularly worrying that President Bush has seen fit, at this juncture to, in effect, declare himself dictator." -- Frank Morales

No admission necessary -- the facts speak well enough without your

I find it interesting how quickly you resume pouting-mode just as I expose your phishing activities. I'm now quite certain that there is no amp. No schematic, technical specs extrapolated from guesswork, an "engineer" that has no working knowledge of basic principles such as linearity and ground plane reflection, and no endorsements from satisfied (or unsatisfied) customers. All you have are a couple pics of just one amp that you may or may not have built yourself.

You're not even a hack, Brian -- your a crook.

I am a filthy c*nt named madMaxWhore. I am the type of girl that only gets taken to White Castles because guys give me a $2 or $3 dollor limit. If I want something more expensive, I have to go by the dumpster behind White Castles and open my legs for 5 cent deposit cans and then after I get sodomized and f8cked by the homeless population, I have to redeemed the bottles and cans to get the extra money. The homeless men love sticking the cans up my filthy vagina and watching them melt from the toxcitiy.

Sometimes the stores won't take my cans and bottle because of the thick discharge on them and the foul stench of the cans and bottle (because of my diseased discharge)

By the time I get back to the fast food joint my date is gone. I guess they met someone that will douche and won;t settle for a skanky whore like me.

I lose every flamewar I enter because the toxic fumes from my diseased undouched vagina impair my already damaged brain. I want to be owned by the best flamer I ever encountered in life refuses to own me because my vagina is so filthy and toxic. I get beat down by everyone on usenet. Even my provider Usenetserver.com beats me down.

I want to get married but I am a known whore whose only good for pumping and dumping. I am so embarrassed at being thoroughly thrashed by all of my Usenet enemies. For those that aren't so picky about douching, I am owned by 70% of the alt.usenet.kook population.

My daddy initiated me into the world of sex and I have been getting buttsexed by him regularly ever since I was five years old. I drip toxic discharge from my filthy vagina. I have vaginal hair longer than the hair on Crystal Gayle's head. Guys just pump me and then dump me. I'm the kind of girl that gets sexed in alley and behind dumpsters

Typical brain dead cber, even after being caught red-handed and warned, still continues to operate illegally Even hitting him in the head with a two-by-four probably wouldn't get his attention. Maybe $10K in the wallet will, however like most welfare cbers he will claim an inability to pay.

578. MI5 Persecution: Dirk Gently on the Toronto Case (803)

Dirk was on the West Coast when he got the call. An old friend at the Toronto police department thought he would like to fly up and take a look at a homicide which had occurred the previous evening. He decided to skip the last day at the World Holistics conference and take the next plane out of San Francisco.

The flight was bad; Dirk had been hit on the back of the head by the Newspaper trolley, the drinks trolley, the dinner trolley and now the gift trolley. When the hostesses weren't trying to tear his arm off they pestered him to stop leaning into the aisle - ignoring the fact that the guy next to him was taking up one and a half seats. Air Canada used to be the flight which was so good you just didn't wanna get off - on this occasion Dirk would be glad to see the back of the plane and the over sized alternative comedian wedged into the window seat.

After breathing in a couple of lungfulls of crisp Canadian air Dirk took a taxi into town. There was a small group of demonstrators outside the MacDonalds and the taxi driver insisted on stopping on the opposite side of the street. "Don't Eat Meat" the placards read and the demonstrators chanted. A couple of policemen where stopping the crowd entering the restaurant itself - one held up his arm and challenged Dirk. A wave of the fax he had been sent and the policeman pushed open the door.

There were few customers in the restaurant. Not surprising really with a demonstration going on outside, half the dining area roped off with tape and a dead body seated at one of the tables. "Mr Gently sir" the officer in charge called out as he peeled one end of the tape off a column "We were told not to touch anything til" you got here".

The body of the man slumped awkwardly in a chair. Then even a dead body would start getting uncomfortable in a MacDonalds chair after twenty minutes - and this one had been there for at least eighteen hours. Two back legs and the tail of a cat hung out of the man's gaping mouth. Dirk turned to the officer, "I suppose you are going to tell me this is the darndest thing you ever saw?"

"Ain't this the darnd...". The officer seemed annoyed that Dirk had second guessed him. "We're removing the body in a few minutes, so if you can get through as quick as possible&#65533;

&#65533;Many people eat cats in fast food restaurants?&#65533; Dirk asked and without waiting for an answer leant over the table to pick up an untouched burger. &#65533;And what&#65533;s this?&#65533; he asked waving it in front of the officers face.

&#65533;It&#65533;s a Vedgie Burger&#65533; The waitress, who was cleaning one of the adjacent tables, shouted across. She walked over to Dirk. &#65533;We started doing them because of that lot out there&#65533; she nodded towards the protesters who were pressing there faces against the windows &#65533;They&#65533;re called Linda McCartney Vedgie burgers - ever heard of them?&#65533;

Dirk suddenly felt faint, perhaps a combination of hunger and jet lag. &#65533;This is deja vu all over again&#65533; he thought to himself. He glanced at policemen - at the badge on his shoulder &#65533;OPD&#65533; but this wasn&#65533;t Ontario this was Toronto. OPD - Officially Pronounced Dead. It dawned on Dirk what was happening, he knew what he would see if he looked out of the window. Sure enough, there it was, the Volkswagen Beetle parked across the road - number plate 28IF - 28 IF Paul McCartney had lived. And amongst the lyrics of the song blaring out into the restaurant he could pick out the words &#65533;I buried Paul&#65533;. Now it was though Dirk was viewing the whole scene though a TV screen. This was conspiracy. Not -a- conspiracy, or -the-conspiracy, but just plain conspiracy.

&#65533;You look faint - are you OK mister? The waitress asked.

Dirk shook his head &#65533;Probably a bit hungry&#65533; Then to economise on dialogue took out a pack of cigarettes and held it out towards the girl. She was about to take one but Dirk snatched the pack away, held it up to his mouth and drew out two cigarettes. He lit both then passed one of them to the girl. It was the closest he had come to a sexual encounter in three months.

&#65533;Want a Burger?&#65533; the waitress asked.

Dirk looked down at the Vedgie Burger on the table. &#65533;No thanks - just a plate of fries&#65533;

The waitress walked away and Dirk looked around the room. Apart from a family seated in the far corner there was only one other person in the restaurant - and he wasn&#65533;t eating. The guy was about mid twenties and had straggling, shoulder length hair. On the table in front of him were lots of pieces of paper cut into squares. Every so often he would pick up a camcorder and pan it around the room and then, when he was finished, speak into a microphone which was attached to a tape recorder. Dirk walked over to where the man was sitting.

The small pieces of paper had paragraphs of text written on them and were stuck to the top of table with blobs of mustard. Lines had been drawn, some solid some dotted, on the table top with a marker pen. The lines ran from one piece of paper to another.

"What are the lines for?" Dirk asked, realising straight away that "What the hell are you doing?" would be more appropriate.

"You see" The man replied nervously "The dotted lines are weak links and the solid lines are strong links. The dotted lines are things which are happening in the rest of the world and the solid lines are things which are happening to me. Now you see I draw over a dotted line, replacing it with a solid line, when I can link something back to me. Like this" The pen squeaked over the Formica and before Dirk could interrupt the man added. "You see I lost my short term memory and, as a consequence have a very short attention span. I write down, record and film everything then put it all together later"

"So" Dirk interrupted. "You filmed what happened here?"

"Yes, yes, it"s here on this tape" The man pushed the cassette across the table. On the label the words "Grassy Knoll" had been crossed through and replaced with "MacDonalds".

Suddenly the man sprung from his seat. Dirk turned and saw that the body was being removed on a stretcher. As it passed the man picked a small object off the edge of the stretcher itself. "This is important" he said, laying a blood stained bullet on one of the small pieces of paper on the table.

Suddenly the room was filled with a deafening throbbing sound as a Black Helicopter landed in the street outside. Two men in United Nations uniforms got out and collected the stretcher. Back at the table the long haired man was replacing all the dotted lines with solid ones. Dirk panicked and began to walk backwards at some speed. Barging through the swing doors he stumbled into the kitchen, tripped and felt himself sink slowly into a large vat.

"The guys fallen into the batter" Dick heard someone shout before he sunk below the surface. He came to sitting in a chair with the batter solidifying all over his body. He surveyed the room through two eye-holes someone had cut. Suddenly the chair on which he was sitting was picked up carried through the restaurant and out of the building. As the chair was being lifted and put into the back of a van, Dirk caught a glimpse of the waitress following him. "Your fries mister, your plate o..."

The doors of the van shut and Dirk tried desperately to steady himself as it sped across town. Eventually the doors flew open and Dirk was flung into the road at which point the solidified batter shattered and set him free. Standing up he found himself outside the international departures terminal of Toronto airport.

In the departure lounge Dirk had time to reflect on the day's events. He had got caught up in the conspiracy theories and the haphazard welding together of pieces of irrelevant information. It was time to catch the person who was operating the bizarre cognitive engine which appeared in front of him like a fairground mirror, distorting any flaw it could find in his own, fragile, map of the real world.

Dirk leant into the aisle of the plane as it took off for London. The oversized person next to him swung his arms violently as he complained about every thing from the supper in a plastic tray to the state of British politics. With a shaven head and a badly fitting suit the man looked as though he could have worked behind the reception desk of the Kremlin. However when he spoke he did so in a Liverpudlian accent. "Me I blame the Con-serv-a-tive government, me. The Tour-rees. That-cher. Me. They need a good kicking" He jerked his feet forward and struck the seat in front with his Doc Martins. "With these. Me Doc Martins. Doctor Martin's, Doctor Martin's, Doctor Martin's Booots!" The phrase was now being sung over and over again as the man writhed in his seat and clicked his fingers.

Dirk looked down at the boots and thought of the reaction most people used to deal with the paranoids at the end of the wire. A nice quick kick. "Oi nutter - get some therapy". This is the easy way out and perhaps the safest. After all there you are sat, alone, in front of the screen. No body language between you some paranoid. No way of telling if he really is some gibbering psycho. Look at it too long and you be drawn in. Fall into the tangled database of weird links with him. Who knows he may be watching you, reassembling and linking your experiences with his. How sure are you of you own cognitive threads. After all cognition is only a bug fix for a neurological system which was designed in a hurry - it's abused by everyone from politicians to advertisers. If people really can convince each other that a bottle of washing up liquid is as exciting as an orgasm using just television God knows what they can do with a computer. Better to avoid the risk. A swift kick. After all if you're Homophobic you put the boot in because you are scared of any ambiguity in your own sexuality - why not be Nutterphobic as well.

Although Dirk would have liked to devoted time to tracking the culprit down he decided to let it rest. The Internet changed over the next twenty odd years. A lot of the people who used it went out and got lives. And those who already had lives burnt them away. The number of users had dwindled after someone had invented a C++ program, with truth as a variable, to deal handle politics and government. Dirk had already retired from finding old ladies cats with the help of obscure science when he got another call from Toronto.

It was 4th March 2025 when he booked onto the Air Canada flight from Heathrow. The silver haired woman in the seat next to him painted bright red lipstick around her mouth. "Of course it was no surprise to be offered the job after Claire Raynor retired" she sneered" After all I used to be a psychiatric nurse... Now if Blokes had periods they would understand..."

By chance the taxi ride to Toronto mental hospital took him past the MacDonalds - where the whole thing had started. Of course it was barely recognisable having become a Church Of Scientology Vedgie Bar. Police in riot gear kept the two sets of demonstrators apart. Dirk didn"t really know what to expect when he got to the hospital. The girl at the reception desk directed him to a row of chairs in a wide well lit corridor. There was a strong smell of disinfectant, the furniture and the carpets were immaculately clean and behind the rows of teak veneer doors the "nutters" were all safely locked away. For some reason Dirk started thinking about CompuServe forums.

A tall blond woman in a white coat approached. "Mr Gentle, I assume"

"Yes" Dirk replied shaking her by the hand. "You"re the nurse who..."

"Doctor" She interrupted, "Doctor Killfile" She led Dirk across the corridor towards one of the doors then stopped with her hand resting on the handle. "Now you know about this person don"t you?" and after Dirk nodded she continued "Don"t tell him anything about yourself - don"t let him get into you head. If he does he"ll screw it up"

The door opened to reveal a frail man sitting in from of a TV screen. He had a keyboard on his lap and next to the television was a computer screen. Dirk glanced at the walls of the room and remembered that his settee at home need upholstering. The nurse left the room and the man looked up "So you come to my daughters wedding and ask me to kill a man" he said in a dry cackling voice. "Look" he continued, pointing at the screen, "I know that man. They"re talking about me now - listen&#65533;. The man stared at Dirk. &#65533;What&#65533;s your name? Are you one of my friends from the Internet? - Are the lambs still screaming Dirk?&#65533;

Dirk, at first recoiled in horror, then felt a sense of anti climax. So this is what they hyped up to superstar status on the back of their own fears of madness. Dirk was reminded of the film &#65533;A day on The Beach&#65533; where a submarine had set off to search a post nuclear World to track down a signal coming from a remote military base - only to find it was being sent by a Coke bottle half balanced on a Morse tapper. Outside the room the nurse waited for him. Because his nicotine craving had returned - and to avoid an awkward piece of dialogue - Dirk turned to her and asked . &#65533;Patch?&#65533;

Dirk took two nicotine patches from his wallet the first of which he stuck onto the inside of his arm. Stepping closer to Doctor Killfile he opened her white coat and slid his hand into the opening at the front of her dress. He pressed the patch onto her leg as close to the top of her inner thigh as he dare. She took a deep breath and then slowly breathed out. &#65533;What Bogart could have done with these things&#65533; Dirk thought to himself.

&#65533;Is he crazy?&#65533; Dirk asked tilting his head back to towards the door.

&#65533;Who knows&#65533; Doctor Killfile replied &#65533;We let him type away. He sees something on the TV in the morning and it keeps him busy all day. What he types doesn&#65533;t go anywhere it just stays on a mainframe in the basement. It can be read by anyone else in the building but that&#65533;s it. We got them all in here conspiracy theorists, racists, nationalists. They&#65533;ve created a world within a world really...&#65533; Her voice trailed away and she stared down the corridor for a while then added &#65533;So long are two things are different neither will come to be in the other and so become at once both one and two.&#65533;

Dirk gave her a puzzled look &#65533;You mean their brains are fried?&#65533;

&#65533;Fried?&#65533; Killfile smiled at Dirk &#65533;No that was Plato&#65533;. Then the smile fell from her face. &#65533;You must remember, mister, plate o...&#65533;

Yes, Porchy . . . we know you're filthy. :) Thanks for sharing.

Now, please DO continue posting as me . . . it's so lovely seeing how you jump and twitch at my every whim. It's nice to see how you so desperately hump my leg for diversion from your pathetic, abusive life.

Now POST, Bitch!! POST!!!

Mike Corley FAQ version 0.1
first edition 5th May 1996
last updated 5th May 1996
Iain L M Hotchkies iain@XXXXX.demon.co.uk

Mike Corley is a 'net personality' who has been active on the following newsgroups (uk.misc,uk.legal,uk.politics,uk.media,soc.culture.british) since....? Well, at least as far back as the summer of 1995.

He posts long tracts, the tone of which approximates that which one might expect from a reasonably intelligent paranoid schizophrenic.

No details are known of Mike's 'real' personal life or background. Once would presume that he came from a reasonable family and was reasonably well educated before the first symptoms of schizophrenia began.

Schizophrenia: Clinical features
(from the Oxford Textbook of Psychiatry, 2nd Edition)

The acute syndrome

Some of the main clinical features are illustrated by a short description of a patient. A previously healthy 20-year-old male student had been behaving in an increasingly odd way. At times he appeared angry and told his friends that he was being persecuted; at other times he was seen to be laughing to himself for no apparent reason. For several months he had seemed increasingly preoccupied with his own thoughts. His academic work had deteriorated. When interviewed, he was restless and awkward. He described hearing voices commenting on his actions and abusing him. He said he believed that the police had conspired with his university teachers to harm his brain with poisonous gases and take away his thoughts. He also believed that other people could read his thoughts.

This case history illustrates the following common features of acute schizophrenia: prominent persecutory ideas with accompanying hallucinations; gradual social withdrawal and impaired performance at work; and the odd idea that other people can read one's thoughts.

In appearance and behaviour some patients with acute schizophrenia are entirely normal. Others seem awkward in their social behaviour, preoccupied and withdrawn, or otherwise odd. Some patients smile or laugh without obvious reason. Some appear to be constantly perplexed. Some are restless and noisy, or show sudden and unexpected changes of behaviour. Others retire from company, spending a long time in their rooms, perhaps lying immobile on the bed apparently preoccupied in thought.

The speech often reflects an underlying thought disorder. In the early stages, there is vagueness in the patient's talk that makes it difficult to grasp his meaning. Some patients have difficulty in dealing with abstract ideas (a phenomenon called concrete thinking). Other patients become preoccupied with vague pseudoscientific or mystical ideas.

When the disturbance is more severe two characteristic kinds of abnormality may occur. Disorders of the stream of thought include pressure of thought, poverty of thought, and thought blocking. Thought withdrawal (the conviction that one's thoughts have been taken away) is sometimes classified as a disorder of the stream of thought, but it is more usefully considered as a form of delusion.

Loosening of association denotes a lack of connection between ideas. This may be detected in illogical thinking (knight's move) or talking past the point (Vorbeireden). In the severest form of loosening the structure and coherence of thinking is lost, so that utterances are jumbled (word salad or verbigeration). Some patients use ordinary words in unusual ways (paraphrasias or metonyms), and a few coin new words (neologisms).

Abnormalities of mood are common, and of three main kinds. First, there may be sustained abnormalities of mood such as anxiety, depression, irritability, or euphoria. Secondly, there may be blunting of affect, sometimes known as flattening of affect. Essentially this is sustained emotional indifference or diminution of emotional response. Thirdly, there is incongruity of affect. Here the emotion is not necessarily diminished, but it is not in keeping with the mood that would ordinarily be expected. For example, a patient may laugh when told about a bereavement. This third abnormality is often said to be highly characteristic of schizophrenia, but different interviewers often disagree about its presence.

Auditory hallucinations are among the most frequent symptoms. They may take the form of noises, music, single words, brief phrases, or whole conversations. They may be unobtrusive or so severe as to cause great distress. Some voices seem to give commands to the patient. Some patients hear their own thoughts apparently spoken out loud either as they think them (Gedankenlautwerden) or immediately afterwards (echo de la pensee). Some voices seem to discuss the patient in the third person. Others comment on his actions. As described later, these last three symptoms have particular diagnostic value.

Visual hallucinations are less frequent and usually occur with other kinds of hallucination. Tactile, olfactory, gustatory, and somatic hallucinations are reported by some patients; they are often interpreted in a delusional way, for example hallucinatory sensations in the lower abdomen are attributed to unwanted sexual interference by a persecutor.

Delusions are characteristic. Primary delusions are infrequent, and difficult to identify with certainty. Delusions may originate against a background of so-called primary delusional mood - Wahnstimmung. Persecutory delusions are common, but not specific to schizophrenia. Less common but of greater diagnostic value are delusions of reference and of control, and delusions about the possession of thought. The latter are delusions that thoughts are being inserted into or withdrawn from one's mind, or broadcast to other people.

In acute schizophrenia orientation is normal. Impairment of attention and concentration is common, and may produce apparent difficulties in remembering, though memory is not impaired. So-called experiences result from illness, but usually ascribe them to the malevolent actions of other people. This lack of insight is often accompanied by unwillingness to accept treatment.

Schizophrenic patients do not necessarily experience all these symptoms. The clinical picture is variable, as described later in this chapter. The table below lists the most frequent symptoms found in one large survey.

The most frequent symptoms of acute schizophrenia (World Health Organization 1973)

Symptom Frequency (%)

Lack of insight 97
Auditory hallucinations 74
Ideas of reference 70
Suspiciousness 66
Flatness of affect 66
Voices speaking to the patient 65
Delusional mood 64
Delusions of persecution 64
Thought alienation 52
Thoughts spoken aloud 50

Various theories exist about Mike Corley:

1) he exists and is disturbed and has net access and for reasons uncertain spams a selected number of newsgroups on a regular basis - if you are reading this FAQ then you will almost certainly have seen

one of his posts.

2) Mike Corley is a 'virtual schizophrenic'. Mike displays the relevant features so well that some people think he may be a construction of one or more people with intimate knowledge of mental illness and the mentally ill. Perhaps they wish to monitor the effects on the internet of the posts of a schizophrenic. Moving into X-Files territory a bit, ourselves, here.

Mike's posts attract different responses:

1) cruel, humourous, dismissive posts from those who've seen his posts many times and have become generally irritated by his behaviour while accepting that he probably has a mental illness.

2) posts from Corley-newbies - those who have come across relateviely few of Mike's posts. These may be humorouous or disbelieving.

3) posts from people who have been sucked in (for one reason or another) into Mike's Wild & Wacky World (TM)

That's enough for now.

Ya can't through Ebay. They keep jerking the real product. Sure, you could sell info on how to make meth on Ebay, but try the real thing and see what happens, moron. Now, is that a clear enough analogy for you?

I agree. He's proven you don't know half of what you think you do. Why you've chosen to prove your idiocy for so long has always been in question.

That what they have on the Police Flyer about me. I am having fun and am on the run from the Fuzz.

If they fire bullets at me I will lob some of my toxic discharge at them. My c*nt can be used for good (yet to be defined) or evil (how it's commonly used).

Note to Police:

Don't mess with a b1tch that doesn't douche!

Persecuted by the Security Service

Since June 1990 the British security service MI5 has waged a campaign of harassment against a UK citizen, through the broadcast and print media, verbal abuse at work, and molestation in public and during travel.

Despite widespread knowledge of the campaign in the UK and discussion of its characteristics on Usenet for over three years, it continues today both in Britain and North America. Its cause and basis is xenophobia on the basis of the genetic accident of mental illness, coupled with discrimination against an inferior "foreigner" whom they condemn as "not up to British Standards".

If this is your first visit to this site, please read the FAQ first. Feel free to contact the author with any questions.

Frequently Asked Questions article outlines the parameters of the persecution. Who is involved, and why?
What technical and social means do they employ? What response have I made, and why has their campaign yet to be exposed?

The UK Security Services which are believed to be behind it all. Domestic security is the province of MI5 while the secret intelligence service MI6 combats foes (and its former employees) on foreign shores.

Usenet archive chronicling the (sometimes very enthusiastic) exchanges which have taken place on UK-local newsgroups since May 1995. Make your mark on the continuing discussion!

Believe it or not, a few items of evidence have been recorded. Although none of them is particularly conclusive, by presenting them I hope to explain what I understand from some television and radio programmes.
Most of the "clinching" material was aired in 1990-92, and no recordings exist now, which is quite unfortunate.

My complaints to the BBC and MI5 (via the Security Service Tribunal and Interception of Communications Tribunal), and their response to my challenges, are recorded here. Basically they deny everything, they have put their denials (mostly - Buerk and Lewis refused) in writing, and I don't believe them. Part of the website also documents media coverage of my campaign to expose the persecution.

Faxed articles to, and responses from British organisations including Parliament and UK media. Over 24,259 faxes in all were sent from 1998 to 2000. Their aim was to boot discussion of the persecution into the public domain, and that aim was not accomplished.

I like sucking horse d1ck and flinging my Toxic discharge. My hole is so danagerous that it called terroristic. Yep me and my hole are on the "No Fly" list. HomeLand Security asked us (me and my diseased family) to leave the country.

My Pus$y is so STANK that not even Al Queda will mess with it! I will crush caves in Afganistan with my pelvic muscles. There is no tw@t more filthy than mine and you should be flogged for saying so.

My pus$y can cause damage of biblical proportions. Don't mess with UnDouchedWoman. I am one bad b1tch! My crotch is hairer than BigFoot and Sasquatch combined! Cousin It looks at my sn@tch and sez "Damn Shave, B1tch".

I am a filthy c*nt named madMaxWhore. I am the type of girl that only gets taken to White Castles because guys give me a $2 or $3 dollor limit. If I want something more expensive, I have to go by the dumpster behind White Castles and open my legs for 5 cent deposit cans and then after I get sodomized and f8cked by the homeless population, I have to redeemed the bottles and cans to get the extra money. The homeless men love sticking the cans up my filthy vagina and watching them melt from the toxcitiy.

Sometimes the stores won't take my cans and bottle because of the thick discharge on them and the foul stench of the cans and bottle (because of my diseased discharge)

By the time I get back to the fast food joint my date is gone. I guess they met someone that will douche and won;t settle for a skanky whore like me.

I lose every flamewar I enter because the toxic fumes from my diseased undouched vagina impair my already damaged brain. I want to be owned by the best flamer I ever encountered in life refuses to own me because my vagina is so filthy and toxic. I get beat down by everyone on usenet. Even my provider Usenetserver.com beats me down.

I want to get married but I am a known whore whose only good for pumping and dumping. I am so embarrassed at being thoroughly thrashed by all of my Usenet enemies. For those that aren't so picky about douching, I am owned by 70% of the alt.usenet.kook population.

My daddy initiated me into the world of sex and I have been getting buttsexed by him regularly ever since I was five years old. I drip toxic discharge from my filthy vagina. I have vaginal hair longer than the hair on Crystal Gayle's head. Guys just pump me and then dump me. I'm the kind of girl that gets sexed in alley and behind dumpsters

20,000 Reward Offered to Expose the Conspiracy

I am making a pledge for information directly leading to the exposing of the "BBC Newscaster Conspiracy". The exposing would specifically need to lead to a legally binding admission from Martyn Lewis or Michael Buerk of the BBC they they were watching me through the TV set.

I would be happy (delighted, in fact) to pay GBP 20,000 sterling in reward for the above admission.

My html thingy doesnt seem to do frames so all I got was a blank page. Then

Now, whatever you might think about the content, this is a very well designed and presented web page (if you use Netscape to look at it anyway - Mosaic couldn't handle it).

This is my article, not my employer's, with my opinions and my disclaimer!

Correct Frank. Nice batteries a bit over priced, but I can get them wholesale, so their perfect for my purposes.

The FCC isn't dragging anything, Morkie.

The delay is with the folks who publish the Federal Register. The FCC's already done their damage.

the fact is, you are selling a brochure (alluding to a real amplifier in the process). that, in and of itself, is not illegal. However, if you are selling any amps as a result of the brochure (and said amps are not type accepted per FCC regulations), well then, you get what you deserve.... just don't say you weren't warned.

the FCC has zero control. Don't say you weren't schooled. Again.

Selling and shipping to interests outside the US does not require FCC approval. What will be required is all regualtions of the destination country be met.

With this in mind the FCC has to show prima facia evidence that any amps made by him has indeed been sold to interests inside the US. Once that has been established, they can react to any violations.

Right now the US has so many other security concerns that most law enforcement agencies have little time or cares to investigate and deal with such petty crimes.

Ouch-Damn! Hi Frank. Huh! I guess if he's selling them directly he's flirting with disaster. I remember Grif posting a link to amateurlinearamplifiers.com as it was selling his amp a while back. That company is in Canada and their prices are a tad high on some familiar items. Grif should just let his distributor up north take care of things since the feds seem to be stinging here and there.

I know I promised not to preach legalities, but Brian has two big problems: First, he's selling illegal amps. Second, he's using a foreign organization as a front to avoid US restrictions. You might get away with that if you are a big corporation with high-priced attorneys and federal politicians on the payroll. But a fat, lazy nobody living in his mommy's basement? Nope. In fact, the feds could even take the parents' house if they find proof of complicity. And since he's fully aware that his activities are illegal (hence the Canadian link), the fines won't be dischargeable by bankruptcy. IOW, when Brian eventually gets busted he's going to drive his parents into poverty and homelessness.

But then again, maybe his parents feel that is a reasonable sacrifice for their little boy's happiness.....

Brian desperately needs your expertise to hack the next generation of Feds are busting more for less. When you hear it from me, you know it's happening. Until Bush is out of office, the administration and its governmental branches will continue to waste its energies and resources. Wait until end of the year profits are posted. This past year will wind up being a banner year for large businesses and big corporations.

I don't mind discussing legalities with you, Frank. My attitude all along is and has been that if you play, be prepared to pay no matter what the action or result thereof may be. Of course, we have certain companies that pay those NAL's without batting an eye. Others plead poverty and try and get the fine reduced or dropped. I'm assuming the complicity aspect is similar to what the feds sometimes invoke during drug raids. I guess if the courts wanted to pursue it, it would have to obtain proof he willfully supplied a distributor outside the U.S. with the intent of selling the amps back to U.S. citizens. Grif may be breaking new ground here for a test case. That is, of course, assuming people are actually purchasing the amp.

And Grif, my offer still stands regarding your amp. Send one my way and I'll render an honest (non-technical) evaluation of its performance and function after putting it through the paces (yea, I realize it's not Saltwater Magazine or Pop Comm, but I've been known to slum <g>). In return, I will transfer to you (via a signed notarized document) the lifetime copyright of the review to use in all future marketing. Check any copy writer and compare the value. If your amp can hold its own with a TS or Palomar, you can't lose.

Oh yeah and tree limbs too, nice antenna otherwise tho. Especially when one is running a 16 pill. I find mine to be directional toward the front of the truck, which is just fine. (no 16 pill over here, 2 pill portable)

Which short antenna do you use?

Not really. What he's doing has been done with other types of contraband for a very long time. Many times the front company just handles the transaction (for a fee) and the "product" doesn't even leave the country. Enron made jillions doing this, and it's standard practice in the unregulated sector of the crude oil market.

> That is, of course, assuming >people are actually purchasing the amp.

And assuming there are amps to purchase. A buyer who gets shafted while trying to buy an illegal amp has no legal recourse to recover his money.

Not really. What he's doing has been done with other types of contraband for a very long time. Many times the front company just handles the transaction (for a fee) and the "product" doesn't even leave the country. Enron made jillions doing this, and it's standard practice in the unregulated sector of the crude oil market.

And assuming there are amps to purchase. A buyer who gets shafted while trying to buy an illegal amp has no legal recourse to recover his money.

Anyone else catch the ham guys presenting a moderated group for the big eight's approval?

They have umpteen groups already and they are almost all destroyed. I've said it before, the only real assholes that post in rrcb are ham radio operators. (mostly no code fuck-sticks)

Kind of ironic.

Intent can never be proven with absolute certainty. But when there are express regulations that would otherwise be broken, and when the persons involved are fully aware of those regulations, it's pretty easy to figure out intent. It's so easy a Geico marketing executive can do it.

Good point. I believe hams are allowed to purchase one amp each year.
You'd have to ask a ham (no, I'm not N7VCF... LOL!). Still, they are dealing with international laws and treaties in the attempt to recover a couple hundred bucks. Heck, many people won't even file a claim in small claims court for that much! Either way, I have yet to hear any testimonial, good -or- bad, from an owner of a SpamWave.

BTW & OT, whats your thoughts about your land being part of the Gulf

The FCC recently modified the regulations to permit the manufacture and sale of external power amps capable of tuning 10 meters. 11 meter ops are still prohibited using more than, what is it, 4 watts output.

You're both idiots.

Landshark can "own" anything he wants that isn't a controlled substance, violates National Security, or requires a federal license for ownership (ie: automatic firearms) Using it is another subject.

As for "violating" anything, Morkie, your use of profanity, not-so-subtle attempts at being the "moderator", and substandard spelling skills are as distasteful as anything to hit USENET since it's inception with the possible exception of Toiddie's lame efforts at

I made up a little encapsulated circuit I was planning on selling t oimprove the bias on solidstate amps that had only a diode for bias, Trouble is most CBers rip stuff like this out of an amp. "HEy man cut this wire and get 10 more watts."

Most CBers will drive a 100W-PEP amp to 100W with an AM carrier, then wonder why they can hear themselves through the TV.

We just got dumped with a butt-load last night, way more than the amount that was forecast. It's still snowing. And it's all heading East.

At the risk of sounding like a Republican, business follows the markets, and the current markets are driven by the "buy-now-pay-later" mentality of the current generation. So if you want to change business priorities you need to change consumer priorities. And cheap gasoline has a higher priority than the environment.

Funny though, the solution is so simple: fusion. The government should be dumping every last penny into research into fusion research. It would be like having a chunk of the Sun right here on Earth, to tap for as much energy as we need for the next thousand years. That's the future if the human race is going to survive; the only question is whether we will choose to do it now or later.

That easy to prove by shipping addresses. One has no control if a then takes that respnsibility.

Agreed with fusion. The Brookhaven National Laboratory is right around the corner but I doubt they are doing anything in that regards. I do know they have a 1/2 mile underground ring doing atom smashing.

not every penny with any kind of crash program you get lots of waste and bad results (witness our efforts to buy our way out of the vproblems we sufer from in Homeland security and there I am not sure we are being ripped off so much as pushinng from intersting prototype to production WAY too fast)

but even fuision isn't needed that badly serious pursuit of Fission tecjh we already have could make a BIG difference but fission like fusion seems to suffer to suffer from the fact that the word bomb got attached to them

indeed in college I work on Nuclear magnetic resoance scanner we had BIG trouble geting funding till some bright eye got the idea of Calling it Magentic Resonace scaning, then funding and production fast. indeed I currently suspect we have had that tech years before if the word "nuclear" had not appeared in our grant proposals

No need to do it until we have to. Why leave the oil in the ground as long as you can sell it.

The problem with fusion is containing it. It takes more energy to contain it than it generates.

True, it has the dogma of being "nuclear". That's a public perception issue. But in case you haven't noticed, public perception is easily manipulated -- that's how politicians get elected.

Why bother punching holes in the ground for crud of diminishing quality when you can manufacture synthetic substitutes that are cheaper, more profitable, functionally superior, and better for the environment?

681. Apology to Mark and Gav

I , Roger Leo Wussman, being of unsound mind and often out of my head, would like to issue a public apology to Mark Morgan for my unnecessary and often mean comments directed toward Mark over these past few years.

I deeply regret posting Mark's home address, his telephone number, and I am very, very sorry for having sent Mark anonymous letters and magazine subscriptions over the names of others. I will never again do this. You have my word on it. And, Mark? Rest assured that the late night telephone calls will cease as of this very moment.

I would also like to take this opportunity to apologize to Mark for cross posting to groups that were innocent bystanders. I was in total error and fully realize that I should not have done so. I will not do this ever again.

And lastly, allow me to eat just one more slice of Humble Pie. I would like to extend a heartfelt apology to Mark's wife, Gav. I went well over the line by accusing Mark's wife of being a Shemale and Transvestite. I now bow my head in shame and humbly plead for forgiveness. If I can make amends to Gav in any way, I will do whatever is necessary to prove my sincerity.

I have my own personal devils to deal with, Mark. I am trying my best, but some of the hurdles are just too great for me to leap over by myself. I'm sure you understand.

I hope you can find it in your heart to forgive me.

Roger

LOL!! No market 11 years ago either. The only constant for griffey is his continuous ability to argue with everyone. Only thing worse than griffey and his air wave amps is the AKC and brian was here before them. Sheesh!! Oh grif get your amp tips from concrete man you used

LOL!!! I can see it now.....Twist (Capn Jack Sparrow) with a set up like on the first pirate of the Caribbean movie. The scene where his on a small row boat type with a single mast in the center. No offence twist, I just had that visual with your description of bungee the antron to the mast.

No, not until we have used the oil up. But in this case it may be impossible to do. It has been suggested that controling a fussion reaction would take a new technolgy that would actually make fussion obsolete.

Because there is money to be made, the reasons you give is just wishful thinking, they are not cheaper, superior, or more profitable, yet. and better for the environment is even questioable.

Assuming you are right, how much money would it take? How hard is it to convince people that a source of nearly unlimited energy is right around the technological corner? Who would shy away from opportunities that, until now, were only dreams? Who really cares if a few die-hard investors lose their fortunes because they refuse to accept change?

The fortunes that will be made, in all stages of the development of fusion energy, are going to drop Bill Gates into the middle-class tax bracket. All that will be required is a little motivation and a little imagination. And if you don't have that then you aren't going to make your fortune anyway.

It is still wishful thinking that the solution is right around the corner and the question is who will benifit from all this new wealth. You can rest assured some form of enrgy will be their just in time to replace all the

We all benifit from current energy sources but some benifit a lot more than others. Same will happen with any other new source and things will be set up to make sure those who are reaping the rewards now will also benifit in the future. Hell check your NG bill, you wil find you are paying for sunshine in the winter.

Did you catch the snow in Malibu? It wasn't just a dusting. I saw a clip of a plow in the Malibu Hills with plenty of snow on the sides of the street. Did you see Gore's film? His slideshow depicts several glaciers and mountain ranges over the years with a photo taken every 10 or 20 years up to the present. Unless the photos are doctored, the evidence is overwhelming and frightening.

>BTW & OT, whats your thoughts about your

I saw that. My thoughts are more in line with Max Mayfield, the ex-director of NOAA's Tropical Prediction center. Before he resigned a few weeks ago the man stated he was tired of officials, particularly those in the Southeast, ignoring his warnings regarding hurricanes. He cited the continued building along vulnerable areas such as coastlines and other sensitive lands adjacent to waterways as examples.
Matfield predicts "A huge storm" which will carry a death toll ten times as much as Katrina, making the Louisiana hurricane pale in comparison.

Save for a serious earthquake under the Gulf which could lead to an extreme tidal surge (some prefer the PC version of "Tsunami"), I feel a hurricane will blast us like a buzz saw before the rising of the global tide affects us but with the crazy weather we're all having, who knows?
While you're battling snow, we're battling bugs..mosquitoes, fleas, bees, all kinds of shit we NEVER had to deal with in the winter and officials just rationed our water use again because of the lack of rains in 2006.

There are those who believe hurricanes are Mother Nature's way of cleansing and cooling the humid earth. I have to admit, these magnificent storms have a weird way of enforcing natural selection and acting as a weeding process. Every time we get smacked, there is always a number of recent transplants who simpy say "f this" and go back to wherever they came.

The climate has changed, no doubt. We still don't have our "winter" and some are doubting we'll get it this year. Most A/Cs are still on during the day, windows open at night when we're lucky.

LOL!!! I can see it now.....Twist (Capn Jack Sparrow) with a set up like on the first pirate of the Caribbean movie. The scene where his on a small row boat type with a single mast in the center. No offence twist, I just had that visual with your description of bungee the antron to the mast.

Landshark

My hair is longer than Sparrow's, and that's saying something at my age.
Does a kayak count? I recently saw these small sails appearing on the bow of kayaks recently. As a regular canoer and kayaker, it intrigued me. I found a few websites carrying these things. If you can toss a mast on a kayak, bet you can damn sure toss an antenna on it, but I've talked back to the house eleven miles away using nothing but a rubber duck antenna out on the water. The bungee was the way to go, man. We could roll up on an island and camp for the night and run the antron up a tree. More than once I was wrongly accused of running power and even though we were barefoot, adjacent channel bleed was proved to me. Funny movie, btw.

Warmer temps = more energy in the atmosphere = stronger storms everywhere. But then again, the changes might shift the hurricaine tracks further to the East. Hard to tell.

Crazy. I guess you swamp-dwellers will need to start getting Malaria shots pretty soon.

I think we're(tinw) being especially kind to Mark Morgan, Wabbit, unlike you. However, since you're so terrified of his vengeful wrath raining down on your pitiful existence and causing you to become a convict and inmate (assuming that you're not already an ex-con, in which case you're more than likely in violation of multiple parole restrictions, especially if you /are/ Woger), I think it's only kind to just give you usenet kook awards, instead of turning your life into an even bigger pile of shit.

Mind you, I'm not exactly "kind", at least not to cowardly, homo-/biphobic k00ks, but I think it would be a lot more trouble than it's worth to track you down that way.

TEH WAY OF THE K00K
Never learn from your mistakes.
Always practice your mistakes; you may get them right.
Always pick on those smarter and tougher than you.
Always believe that only you know the TRVTH.
Never allow logic or reason get in the way of a good k00k.
When being overwhelmed by logic and reason: k00ksuit!
If you are going to be wrong, do it at the top of your lungs.
When caught in a lie: LIE!
When in doubt: Order the Crab Won Ton
Plagiarism is your friend. Use it.
Whenever contradicted; morph, start calling people names, and make false accusations. Include the children of your target in your allegations, even if they don't have any.
(06-Jun-05) When nobody else will listen, post to your own fan group.
(06-Jun-05) Obviously, since you have your own fan group, this must mean that you have fans. Post prolifically to your fan group - you wouldn't want to disappoint them!

(10-May-2005)Everyone reads usenet. Approval here means approval everywhere.
Post numerous blank posts, or posts containing only a message id.
Post numerous copy&paste web articles from crackerpot websites.
Never forget to call kookologists "k00ks."
If there are several, call them "sockpuppets" too
When all else fails, accuse various and sundry kookologists of e-mailing viruses to you. This is a sure-fire method of garnering sympathy and ensuring that the General Public will always see things your way. An especially effective sub-strategy here is to accuse them of infecting you with the 'Sasser' worm via e-mail.
Quote notorious scientists or writers - it makes it look as if they approve the drivel you are writing!
(9-Jul-05) Anytime your computer is infected with a virus, bogged down by spyware, attacked over your internet connection, or otherwise suffers from preventable problems, government agencies are responsible and are trying to silence you and are monitoring your computer files.
Ignore all traffic signs and feel free to trespass, you don't have to obey any rules.
Scare your enemies with lawsuits, police escorts and whines.
Always back up your empty (albeit noisy) threats with phony LARTs, false police reports, and harassing letters to the FBI and other gubbermint agencies.
Be vigilant in your redundancy. The more you repeat yourself, the more likely others will believe you!
If you can't find anyone as crazy as yourself to support you in the flamewars you start with the normal population, create sock puppets and use anonymous remailers that shamelessly hang on every word you write.
(17-Mar-05) When dealing with law enforcement, remember that it is they who have the problem, not you. Be sure to inform them of this at every available opportunity, as they will surely appreciate your constructive criticism. Be sure to make them aware that YOU KNOW YOUR RIGHTS! ("The cops like that, when people know their rights. That way they don't have to read them to you on the way to the station." - George Carlin)
The more your fake personalities adulate you, the more respect you'll get!
When confronted with a reality that you don't like: Announce loudly that you are departing, never to return as long as there's an Internet. Come back in three or four days and claim you were drunk, hacked, abducted by alience, or forged. Alternately you can just not even mention your prior departure, and if anyone asks you about it, either ignore them or respond with something along the lines of "YOUR NOT THE BOSS OF ME! PLONK!" People really know you mean business then.
Always remain clueproof.
(20-Mar-05) Anyone who does not believe that you are the reincarnation of [$DEITY_OR_PROPHET] is obviously an infidel lacking in faith whose soul in in peril of everlasting damnation.
When responding to one line challenges, post paragraphs of rants and screed in response.

Incoherency is not a roadblock to poasting.
Neither is illiteracy.
Delusions poasted often enough become fact.
Claim you will destroy <insert newsfroup> for attacking you.
When spnaked, send cmsg for Fanboi newsfroup(s).
Find your Lame, Use your Lame, Be your Lame!
Post Edit when the TRVTH hurts.
Always sneck the offending newsfroups.
Always poast pictures of yourself so you can be admired in all your k00ky glory.
Always accuse others of the very acts you are guilty of.
Post lots of boasts about your high IQ and incredible talents.
(20-Mar-05) If you repeat a lie often enough, it becomes the truth.
Anybody who fails to understand this is engaged in a deliberate campaign of misinformation and character assassination.
Always <plonk> somebody just before replying the plonkee!
The k00k considers itself the most intelligent person in any conversation, possibly on the planet. Other people are benighted and ignorant, and have been waiting their whole lives for the k00k to rescue them from intellectual darkness.
Write a self-published book and claim it a success. Bonus points for comparing it to "Mein Kampf" and/or the Bible.
Declare yourself equal to a deity of your choice.
Claim that you've come from other planets.
Claim thousands of past lives.
Frothing complaints carry far more weight when you send them from "legal@" some domain.
Nothing strikes terror into the hearts of your detractors more than telling them that you're archiving their messages for possible use in the future.
Never forget that everyone else posting to Usenet is a paid disinformation agent looking to discredit you.
Usenet is governed by US law. If a poster in Romania killfiles you, he's obviously violating your 1st Amendment rights and can be sued.
Every news admin in the world hangs out in NANAU, and they're just dying to nuke the account of that meanyhead who just called you "fucknozzle". Drop 'em a line - that's what they're there for, after all.
AUK will be closed down. Just you wait and see.
They've nuked hundreds of accounts in the name of free speech and yours will be next.
The k00k will, without any trace of irony, lie, manipulate, impersonate, censor, and declare themselves powerful in ways ranging from the ability to have an account shut down to being God Herself, in order to convince people that they are not liars, manipulators, censors, or insane.
Abuse women while telling how many hundreds you've loved. Nevermind that you're one ugly motherfucker and that there were 30,000 femininas that thought you were a scumbag with bad teeth.
Remember that your ko0ky klaims are 'facts', and that 'facts' do not require proof.

Do not neglect to poast your responses to forums that the originator doesn't read. This will make the people in that forum very impressed with how you tear him to shreds without him being able to respond. They like it even better if you are off-topic for that forum.
Keep in mind that lack of evidence supporting your konspiracy theory actually _is_ evidence, of how effective the konspiracy is in hiding.
(06-Oct-05) When spanked, always retreat to the safety of the Ad Hominem.
(04-Aug-2005) When spanked mercilessly for days on end, proving with each poast just what an illiterate and ignorant fool you are, ALWAYS claim ownership of [person(s),froup(s)]. This works on so many levels. It inspires dread in your opponents that they will no longer be able to poast in their home froup and that they will eventually have to pay rent, to name just two.
Any problems with your poasts are the fault of the konspirators, who are trying to stop you from preventing the extinction of humanity.
Konspiracies that are able to subvert whole governments are always unable to silence konspiracy ko0ks.
The entire United States government is willing to spend millions of dollars for the sole purpose of harassing you.
Hollywood is making movies based on your personal life.
Do not consult psychiatrists or other mental health professionals. They are part of the konspiracy, and will sedate you and lock you away and keep you drugged if you tell them the truth.
Numerology and Astrology are respectable sciences and are useful for proving your case.
Everyone is Tim Hill, or David Green, or...
There is a fine line between trolling and kookery. Find that line and cross it repeatedly. When you are killfiled and/or LARTed for net.abuse as a result, claim victory. If you lose multiple accounts, this merely proves that you are indeed a world-class troll, with a black-belt in manipulation.
If you respond to every post someone else makes, they're obsessed. If they respond to less than 1% of your posts, they're even more obsessed.
Publishing people's real names, addresses, and phone numbers when there's no other way for you to come out of a flamewar with any dignity is cool, and proves that you are a master of secret internet information stores, and absolutely not to be fucked with.
Everyone is out to get you. You can put a stop to this by telling everyone that they're out to get you at every available opportunity.
You are the only sane one.
Those that give you a hard time about morally bankrupt things you yourself admit to are just persecutioners of the new inquisition.
Yelling in all caps and cursing at your detractors is debate. Your detractors laughing at you with sarcastic remarks is obvious anger and jealousy.
If doing something results in the loss of your account, legal hassles, or blunt trauma injury, do it again. It always works better the second time.
Asterisks, lots and lots of Asterisks.

Poking holes in kookscreed is stalking, and is a felony.

You do realize it was DixieCrats that propagated that pre-King segregation forward in the 20th century, don't you?

So instead you try and sleaze the Republicans with it???

Dumbass, the Underground Railroad ran to the NE states!

Lincoln was a Republican!

Stop the damned lying!

> and it will be the progressives that finally take power.

OMG, you scumsucking little misrepresenting pinko bastard!

Get rid of _all_ the standards eh?

Let the "progressives" lead us to a land of beastiality, gay marriage, atheism, and sloth?

> There is ample historical precedent for this.

Ya know yer gonna just HATE the very world you're pimping for when you start feeling the decades add up.

Just wait until you're invisible culturally, dismissed as a purchasing demographic, and surrounded by murderous little nose-ringed amoral head bangers looking to carjack you or invade your home.

Keep it up junior, cuz what goes around comes around, and you'll no longer be in any position to do jack shit about it!

I won't likely be around to read your plaintive whining in uselessnet or whatever its offshoot is 30 years hence, but I take solace in knowing you're scripting a socially "progressive" death march that will see you and your meaningless brethren turned into Soylent Green!

Enjoy!

Sounds like your kinda gig "ermine" you fascist pig.

But I guess the Taliban are OK with you too as long as you can use them to dispose of any onservatives here, eh?

You hypocritical slice of shit.

742. MI5 Persecution: Toronto Freenet supports free speech (803)

Newsgroup: rec.radio.cb

Despite an orchestrated campaign of attempted censorship by UK-resident newsgroup readers, TFN did not bow to demands for a suppression of freedom of speech. TFN general policy on the matter is as follows;

Draft Policy on Account Deactivations due to News Group Postings
==========

News group postings occasionally take the form of a message which goes against the "topic" of the conference.
For example, a derogatory message about Canadians in the soc.culture.canada.

Members of such news groups then may send a message to the system administrators asking that a user's account be terminated because of such posting.

The Toronto Free-Net Board of Directors has taken the position that the only postings that will get a person's account terminated is material that is illegal under Canadian law. Otherwise, the Toronto Free-Net will not take any action.

Freenet Executive Director Mike Anderson had this to say regarding the continued attempts of a minority of usenet participants to have my account on his system deactivated;

The TFN's policy is not to take action against members unless they contravene the Criminal Code of Canada, or engage in practices such as forgery, attacks against other computer systems or mailbombing.

Mr. Corley, while possibly being very annoying, has not contravened the TFN's policies. The TFN believes strongly in freedom of expression, while recognizing that the price for such freedom may be a high signal-to-noise ratio in Usenet.

If Mr. Corley breaks the law, we will take action -- until then, he has the same rights as any TFN member to post to Usenet newsgroups. Actions such as mailbombing the TFN in protest will be met by strong complaints to the originating site's postmaster. The best defense against unwanted postings may be simply be to ignore them and deny the poster an audience.

TFN Executive Director Toronto, Ont CANADA

Personally, I find it gratifying that my contributions to usenet discussion are recognized as being conducive to a high signal-to-noise ratio by their quality and thoughtfulness.

On your Web site?
Maybe you could even ask other CB related Web sites if they wish to place the questions on their Web site.

> How does this sit with potential customers? Very good. They know that > we are serious about providing excellent products, and value their > feedback.

I also feel that customers should know that their requirements are considered, but you still have to consider that replies here are public and will be cached.
Any questions will get a certain amount of nasty replies, but on this group you are just begging for offensive replies.

I often do a Google search on a company before dealing with them - see if there are any comments or records of problems. If potential customers research your business or products, would you want them to see the kind of thing that gets posted on this group?
I would consider private replies, with the figures being made public to show that you listened to customers.

Oh, but he could be. If more people say the same, would you consider changing your plans to fit the market - or are you just wanting to sell your idea of what they should want?

People expect that being in a particular line of work would mean that you have the best kept equipment in town, but it is usually the opposite. Even if you could find the time, once you get home, the last thing you want to do is more of the same work. Anyhow, nobody is paying you for the work :~)

It is the same here in the UK. Work done while in the employment or under contract of another becomes their intellectual property - unless it is agreed otherwise. This can be true regardless or where or what time of day or night you carried out the work.

If a company has you under contract to do a specific type of work for them, all work you do of that type may be their property. If when you get home you do, by some chance, still feel like designing, you may find that they own the rights to the work.

Once you put something to one side, "awaiting refinement", it may be simpler just to bin it. You get too stuck into the next job to finish the old ones which you have lost interest in.

Remember the two-way televisions in George Orwell's 1984?
The ones which watched you back? Which you could never get rid of, only the sound could be turned down?

Well the country which brought Orwell into the world has made his nightmare follow into the world after him.
Since 1990 the British have been waging war against one of their own citizens using surveillance to invade privacy and a campaign of abuse in the transmitted media in their efforts to humiliate their "victim".

And the most remarkable thing about it is that what they do is not even illegal - the UK has no laws to protect the privacy of its citizens, nor does it proscribe harassment or abuse except in the case of racial abuse.

A lot of people in England know this to be going on,
yet so far they have maintained perfect "omerta";
not a sound, not a squeak has escaped into the English press, and for all the covert harassment absolutely nothing has come out into the public domain.

Have the British gone mad? I think we should be told.

Mmmm.

Who, exactly is this victim you're talking about?

First up, Britain or the UK (not 'England' - England is a part of Britain, like Kansas is a part of the USA) does have laws that protect the individual from harassement - you can't just threaten people willy nilly. There are laws against that. And if someone lies about you in the press or tv then you have recourse to libel/slander etc. laws.

True, Britain has no 'privacy' laws as such, but isn't that a good thing? As of this moment, the govt. are considering a privacy law, but it is unlikely to succeed. Why? Because any such law would benefit the priviledged and those in power.
Privacy laws, while supposedly protecting the individual, help those in power hide their mistakes/scandals. They stop the press etc. investigating. Privacy laws are undemocratic - they prevent the people from keeping an eye on govt.

And stop looking for some kinda conspiracy in the British press. It's hardly perfect, but your notion that they don't cover/campaign against press legislation, harrassment, discrimination, human rights etc. is plain wrong. You've never seen a British paper in yr life.

You clearly have a specific case/individual in mind. Speak up!
The thought police aren't coming round just yet.

Confession time - the victim is/was me (except my name isn't Corley, but that's irrelevant). What happened was not threats; just invasion of privacy, in a partiicularly flagrant and shocking way, in a way which most people would consider to constitute harassment.

You know there's a particular category of person with mental illness to whom TV and radio "talk", ie they feel the broadcast is directed at them in particular? This happpened to me, quite some time ago in the UK (I'm originally from London, so I've seen plenty of British media print and other).
They invaded my home with their bugs, they repeated what I was saying in the privacy of my home, and they laughed that it was "so funny", that I was impotent and could not even communicate what was going on. Who did this? Our friends on BBC television, our friends in ITN, last but not least our friends in Capital Radio in London and on Radio 1.

How did they do this? I'll give you an example. About a year ago,
I was listening to Chris Tarrant (Capital Radio DJ among other pursuits) on his radio morning show, when he said, talking about someone he didn't identify, "you know this bloke? he says we're trying to kill him. We should be done for attempted manslaughter" which mirrored something I had said a day or two before (I'm not paranoid, honest!). Now that got broadcast to the whole of London - if any recordings are kept of the shows then it'll be there.

You mean the category where they think that everyone is after them ? that one ? So lets get this straight you know you are paranoid and you think that they are out to get you ? Uh huh, try putting the two together and see what you come up with.

Oh yeah, I can see it now. All of them banding together, in a united effort against one man. So ITN, the BBC, and Capital all decide to sit round the table and they come up with idea of breaking into someones house, putting bugs everywhere, listening in to his conversation, and shoving it out on the news everyday. This someone has nothing to do with politics, or business, or entertainment, just an ordinary Joe Bloggs who seems to be extremely paranoid.

Have some sense, grow up and smell reality. What you are talking about would take loads of planning, tens of thousands of pounds and lots of people involved in the planning, execution and maintenance of it. You must have a very high opinion of yourself to think you are worth it.

Of course you are not paranoid, just slightly mad. Did you ever look for the bugs in your house ? If not, why not ? I mean if I thought that was happening to me, I'd search the place from top to bottom, I mean I live there I would know if anything was out of place. If I was really paranoid, whoops I mean suspicious, I would call in one of those bug detection teams which have those machines that pick up the transmitted radio waves. This reminds me of BUGS, that new programme on BBC1 on saturdays which is all about this kind of stuff, but, shown as a drama / thriller. I suppose thats based on you as well is it ?

>is that there is a conspiracy in Britain, that it encompasses the

What a load of jolly hollyhocks, I would say something else but, apparently students are not allowed to swear on newsgroups in case it damages the reputation of the university or some such jolly hollyhocks.

This guy is extremely paranoid to suggest that the entire British media is after him in such a big way. He gives no real reason as to why they are after him, just that he suffers/suffered from a slight mental disorder, could it be paranoia perhaps ?? No surely not.

I put it to the house that he has never recovered from this mental disorder, lets come out with it and call it paranoia, and thinks everyone is after him. Remember just because you aren't paranoid, doesn't mean they aren't after you.

This guy has a serious problem to suggest that the media would go to such lengths just to single out and ridicule one person. I mean apart from anything else, we (the listening masses) wouldn't be interested unless it concerned the royal family, politicians or showbiz personalities. e.g. the camillagate tapes. I would think that almost everyone, no matter how much they went on about infringements of privacy read the transcripts with interest. I really don't think that Joe Bloggs ordinary guy or paranoid nutter would have the same appeal. Well actually I dunno. :)

Paul.

That is what happens in big cities. Hell, it scared me to death when I first started working in Manchester. People keep talking to me on the streets, even if its just to say hello, and I've no idea who they are. This happens to most people, don't worry about it.

Exactly. All you have offered so far as proof of your harrassment by these people is:

1) Someone on radio said something that you had recently said
and
2) People on the streets seem to recognise you.

These are both perfectly normal occurences and happen to lots of people every day so it is unsurprising that people here, and the police, are not taking you seriously.

Trying to always keep an open mind about things I would say that one of three things is likely.

Either there is a lot more to this that you are not telling us, or you are messing about or you have some genuine delusions. I'd like to think that in two of the three cases you would find some real support here, but it seems unlikely I'm afraid.

The key is the pattern, or a change in the pattern. I've lived in London almost all my life, and just walking around the streets, I never got hassled by anybody. All of a sudden, people start harassing you, throwing abuse at you, behaving as if they know you personally, as if they've seen you before somewhere. I read in the papers that this happens to Colin Stagg and people like that Eastenders actress, but they've had their picture in the paperes, so that is understandable.
In a couple of cases people have even known my name - when I was in London over Easter I was walking down Shaftesbury avenue in the West End when somebody (no idea who they were, just some bloke with his girlfriend) called me by name - quite clearly, and my name is distinctive. This also happened once about four 1/2 years ago, onn the tube - some blokes I had never seen started chanting my name and a term of abuse.

It's the pattern which convinces me there's something to it - and would convince any impartial abserver who could see things tyhrough my eyes.

>Doesn't this suggest to you that there are, in fact, no bugs to be found?

There's a little story behjjind this. First iof all, in 1992 I worked for a company where the people made clear they knew what was going on, first of all directly (the very first evening I was there I went out to the pub with them and the Technical Directpor said to another guy, "is this the bloke who's been on TV?" "yeah, I think so") and also indirectly, by rep[peating stuff I was saying at home in London and in my rented accomodation there (I moved several times in the course of 1992 and they followed me each time). Now, if "they" (the buggers) knew their bugs could be found easily, they wouldn;'t be keen to make their existence known, would they?

Also, in summer 1992 I went on a trip abroad to Europe by coach, and on the way out there were a couple a little younger than myself on the coach a bloke and hius girlfriend. He said things about some bloke who was never named, who sounded exactly like me - and he made explicitly clear that our house was bugged, and that a neighrbours house was bugged (and at work they'd been rep[earting what was said at the neighbours, so this looks like independent corroboration).
They also said stuff like "at school he was always really streesed, they found someone from his school and he was a real psycho" and that "he was in a B&B for one night and they got him", dead right again, I had been in B&B for once night a few days before this trip and weatching the news again got a reaction from the newsreader.

Yeah, but this is the point. Each incident is easily and automatically deniable along the lines you're taking. But when this happens every time, and when you get independent corroboration from other people, then there's no escaping it. For example, immediately after I lost my job in 91 I went into the local garage to get some work done on the car, and one of the blokes there said to the other, "so what do you think of it then? it's getting killed on the radio isn't it"
Now again, you look at that and no proff; you can ask them what they're referring to and they can say they're talking about something else.

>I know you may be a little paranoid, but I suggest you sit down >and work out rationally what possible reason anyone off television, >or radio would have for listening to your conversations. After all >it must be hard enough to present a show to millions of people >without the added burden of watching and listening to a single >person and slipping their phrases into the programme.

These presenters are clever people. They wouldn't be presenters if they weren't - they're easily capable of reacting to an individual in this way.

What possible reason? I guess because they think it's amusing to do so. They know that if you ever tell anybody, without being able to show any evidence, then the reaction you'll get from just about anybody will be the one you're showing now.

I realize there are loads of people in England and elsewhere with the sort of thoughts I've described in these postings; and almost all impartial observers would say that nothing other than an go after their private conversations (if they did it to me then I can do it to them, it's a questions of technical competence and money). If you were lucky, you might be able to entrap them into admission. You could of course harass or threaten them back (any coppers reading this?) but that would be illegal and might get a result quite different to the one you're trying to achieve. Of course, it might come out of its own accord given time - if so many people know, if they have an escape valve in their "subtext" through the media, will it not cease to be at a covert level, given time? Surely it is in my interest for it to become overt, since the transgressions at this time are on their side and not on mine?

Thoughts? There must be some way of breaking the secrecy. This isn't the first time in human history that a conspiracy has taken place on this scale, but the truth tends to out. The situation now is they think they';re "winning" hence have little stimulus to change the rules - if they started seeing themselves "losing" things could change drastically.

Mike, if that is your name,

I'm going to try to rationalise what you're telling us. I can think of three possible explanations for what you are experiencing.

One is that there _is_ a conspiracy against you. As a previous writer said, though, a lot of these programmes are taped, so it really isn't possible in some of the cases you've named. Further, why were no bugs found in your house? Finally, unless you are a political figure or someone else in the public eye, why would anyone bother? People like me (and I assume you) are small fry; our contribution to society is likely to be minor. Why would anyone spend so much money and effort on you?

Another possibility is that you are developing some kind of paranoia. There's no stigma attached to this; we're all paranoid to some extent, although perhaps not to the extent that a doctor would call us paranoid. I think paranoia is quite a straightforward explanation here - you really do believe that all these things are aimed at you; you see people everywhere trying to get at you. Logic suggests that this cannot really be the case.

The third possibility is that not even you really believe any of this, and that this is a "troll". I'm not sure I believe this possibility, but it's possible.

Anyway, if you want to be sure that you're _not_ going mad, I'd go and see your G.P. if I were you. If you don't trust him/her, why not see someone recommended by a person you can trust? If you don't trust anyone any more, don't you think it's time you got help?

For a troll, the posts are remarkably well-informed on paranoid behaviour.. you'd need to be one, or be reasonably well-informed on the subject to sustain the tale... which lead me to my theory...ahem...:

An extension to possibility 3 (Number 3.5, perhaps?) is that the original poster may be somehting like a psychology student writing a term paper on the net community's reactions to this tale. (Now, there's paranoia for you! Not only are they listening to/watching us, they're writing reports about us too...:-)

More likely, though, is that the poster is genuinely in need of professional help (he has intimated as much, himself) and, as such, he should be encouraged to seek it.

originally started posting and your posts were neither tediously repetitve nor stupidly long.

But whenever anyone makes any good suggestions you ignore them and start posting from the begining again. You don't want us to help you - so what do you want? If you really wanted help you would listen to peoples suggestions and respond to them. Is this just an attention thing?
But I'll try again, because I'm a fool like that.

You haven't yet given any examples of anything concrete to suggest that this is really happening to you. This, I would imagine, will be the stumbling block for the police. How can they possibly help you when your only evidence is a jumbled mess of TV presenters saying things that could be construed as answers to your comments and the 'feeling' that people are talking about you and watching you?

I seem to recall that last time this was being discussed someone asked if you had been to see a psychiatrist about this - after all if this is really happening then you have can only benefit from being given a clean bill of health. I don't recall an answer.

So you are no longer in the uk? And this is not happening anymore?

Then let it go. Just leave it alone and get on with your life. Its just not worth it. There is nothing you can do to prove that this happened whether it did or did not. So forget it. Go and explore the net - when people aren't spamming it with useless repetitve posts there's a lot of interesting and worthwhile things out there to see and do. Likewise real life (I'm told *&).

>But we've done that. I certainly have at least. Way back when you >originally started posting and your posts were neither tediously repetitve
>nor stupidly long.

Once again we're running into a brick wall. The reason I started posting was because I couldn't figure out a way out of the situation, and thought that saying it out into the open would provide a catalyst for one of those "in the know" (there are plenty in this category, and it's a fair bet that some of them are reading this) to speak up.

It hasn't worked, yet. A little more aggressive shit-stirring (excuse expletive) might do the trick. Perhaps Usenet posting is the wrong arena for this sort of activity; although obviously it does have the advantage of rapid feedback.

Thing is, for people to open up, you would have to provide them with a reason why it would be in their interest to do so. There's no obvious way of doing that; to get thinking people to incriminate themselves when they're safe in denying all knowledge is not a trick I can figure out how to do.

>But whenever anyone makes any good suggestions you ignore them and start >posting from the begining again. You don't want us to help you - so what do

>But I'll try again, because I'm a fool like that.

A "good" suggestion would be one which had the effect of halting the persecution, which so far hasn't happened. If you make a "good" suggestion then damn right I'll stop posting - because then I won't have to.

>You haven't yet given any examples of anything concrete to suggest that this >is really happening to you. This, I would imagine, will be the stumbling

>is a jumbled mess of TV presenters saying things that could be construed as

>and watching you?

Because, as said previously, concrete proof does not exist. If it existed then I wouldn't be talking to you - if it could be proved, or if those doing it could be found, they wouldn't be able to continue.

What's happened is all conversation. You can't prove conversation, not without a tape recorder, and even then you would have to prove that what they meant corresponded to what you understood.

The psychopath who manages the Applics group at my previous employers played little word games, not only with me but with at least one other person in the group; words which rhyme with swear words, words which are ambiguous, eg "bent", words which rhyme with wank, "sheet" rhymes with shit, end (how was your weak end? being the standard salutation on a Monday morning). Sounds childish, most people would easily tell him to fuck off; except to people with predisposition to depression and the inability to express themselves (this was before I started taking medication), that sort of nastiness is not bearable. After ten months of this I was so ill I was crying constantly, eventually I went into hospital and started on medication. Somebody else he did this to (over a year later!) got so depressed he took an overdose of pills, had to go on antidepressants and left.

And where does the "concrete proof" of this trouble exist? NOWHERE. Even if you had physical evidence, even if you had the presence of mind to record what was said, how could you prove what he actually meant by what he was saying? In some cases of harassment you can prove what was done, because it's undeniable. But when the harassment is done with any presence of mind whatsoever, it becomes difficult. In the case of the wider harassment, the people doing it obviously know what they're about - they must have done similar things to other people before in one form or another, and they know what they can get away with, they know what the police will do nothing about.

>I seem to recall that last time this was being discussed someone asked if you >had been to see a psychiatrist about this - after all if this is really

Yes. The reply was of the "neither confirm nor deny" variety. Not much else they can say, is there?

>Well how could they? Who would you sue? The country?

Hmmm, now there's a thought... :-)

>If this gets out then that will be the time to bring your claims to the >foreground.

Wrong way round. It won't get out unless I do something to bring that about; remember, it isn't in THEIR interest for THEIR criminality to be exposed. Yelling loudly on Usenet might nudge things along in the right direction.

>The only thing ruining your life right now is you, Mike. And the only thing >that will make your life any better now is also you. So go and make your Ignoring them would be bliss, but it's not a winning strategy.

There are going to be more of these posts. Sorry. That's the way it is.

Well, cos it's true. I was hoping that someone "in the know" would appear and make some self-revealing comments, but that hasn't happened. Everyone's keeping quiet. What a pity.

>>This is an agglomeration of articles and replies previously

Mine, mainly. The reason for putting that episode at the top of the posting is that they tried to kill two birds with one stone at the Beck trial - they simultaneously put words into the mouth of their invented "witness" to smear Janner, and repeated exactly, word-for-word, stuff which had been said by and about me.

That was the only occasion (the only one recognizable to me, anyway) when they went after another target at the same time.
And it's quite lucky they did that - because it could give some pointers to who they might be.

Presumably there are people still around who were involved in that trial, and know what happened. Beck might be dead, but the "witness" would still be around, as would Beck's solicitor.

Well, your guess is as good as mine. But what newspaper would send a team after someone for five years? I don't think so, somehow. Of course they could, but it wouldn't be in their commercial interest.

You'd have to look at a corporate entity which would indulge in activity of this type, and the nature of the contacts they have narrows down the search.

Janner blamed Beck for the invention. He didn't say anything about it having any other origin. Even had he suspected any other source, he could hardly have pointed the finger without some evidence.

>You say that the media is making similar allegations about you in >relation to this issue? So, you're accused of child abuse, amd

I've been accused of many things although that wasn't one of them.
Most of them have been yelled in my face by people on the street in London at some time or other. Bit difficult to misinterpret when that happens.

>What exact;y are they saying about you? (Respond here please. I'm >leaving the UK tomorrow, so I can't read e-mail.)

It changes with time. Every so often, they sing a new song;
so at one point the allegation was homosexuality, at another is was low intelligence, then it degenerated into sexual abuse.

>How do you know this? Just from what you hear on the radio?

I can't remember if this was mentioned in the "regular" posting, but on a few occasions they set me up with people nearby to talk about me, or more correctly, to talk about somebody who (in their minds) "resembles" me, with actually naming me.

One such occasion was a coach trip to Europe in June 1992.
The "set up" comprised a guy talking to a vacant giggling female about "this bloke", who was never named. Apparently "they" (also never named) "found somebody from his school",
"they" "got" him at his house and at a neighbours, and at a B&B where their target was for one night.

Apart from that, yeah, from "what I hear on the radio". And from what I see on TV. (I wouldn't be doing my job as a mentally ill person properly if the TV and radio weren't talking to me, now, would I?)

>>Oh yeah, I can see it now. All of them banding together, in a united other people; as the scorpion said to the frog, "it's in my nature".

>Are you aware that what you describe is also a common symptom of people >who are suffering from a psychiatric illness? Have you been to your >ill, the mind often makes connections that seem logical and lucid to >you, but do not to the rest of the world. This is one of those connections.

>They are usually known as delusions.

This is the problem, and there doesn't seem to be any way around it.
If a clearly sane person reported this persecution, you might believe him, but probably you'd tell him to go see a doctor to "verify his sanity". If someone with the illness of which you could argue these things to be symptomatic says these things, again, you might believe him, but it would be unlikely - the easiest route is the one you are taking in the above paragraph. The only way I can convince you of what I am saying is by giving precise details of what, when, how - and for most of that stuff is based solely on memory.

To prove it would require an admission from somebody, or else hard proof in the shape of physical evidence such as tape recordings.
Of course, I don't have that.

>The idea of a "pattern", and the notion that if anyone could look >through your eyes they would see the same thing is very indicative of >the onset of a psychiatric illness. Schizophrenia and manic depression >have similar symptoms. I'm not trying to be disrespectful here.
>This may be an illness and it can be managed by the use of medication.
>If it _isn't_ treated, it can lead to terrible tragic consequences.

I'm quite aware what the symptoms would be, and that the reality corresponds to those symptoms.

But if anything, that is an argument which could convince you of the truth of what I'm saying. If they deliberately set out to simulate the symptoms of schizophrenia - in other words, if they know through observation that their target is either suffering from the illness, or is on the borderline and could be pushed in with an appropriate stimulus, then they can feel safe in what they do, since once you are registered as suffering from the illness, people will assign less credibility to assertions that persecution is based in reality.

That this can happen, and people collude by silence, is absolutely horrifying. It is all the more horrifying that it can happen in a country such as Britain which has no history of repression.
Perhaps its happening in the UK is due to the arrogant assumption of moral superiority on the part of those in the media and others involved - we won the last war and we can keep harping on about

German and Japanese war crimes, so we can do whatever we like and we'll be right, up to and including destroying the lives of our citizens (as long as we're not caught doing it).

>>That is the level it's at - basically they show they're listening >it worth the while of the state to spend over one and a quarter million >on you?

Those are pretty much the sort of calculations that went through my head once I stopped to consider what it must be costing them to run this little operation.

The partial answer is, there have been periods when the intensity has been greater, and times when little has happened. In fact, for much of 1993 and the first half of 1994, very little happened. Although I don't think that was for reasons of money - if they can tap into the taxpayer they're not going to be short of resources, are they?

The more complete answer is in the enormity of what they're doing.
When countries kill their own people, as a rule, they get found out and all hell breaks loose. This isn't some para shooting Irish teenagers in the back. This is something which permeates English society, which they are ALL responsible for, and which they cannot escape responsibility for.

Relative to the cost to British pride of seeing their country humiliated for the persecution of their own defenceless citizens, isn't is worth the cost of four or five people to try to bring things to a close in the manner they would wish? To the government a million or two is quite honestly nothing - if they can convince themselves of the necessity of what they're doing, money is not going to be the limiting factor.

>>What possible reason? I guess because they think it's amusing to do >>so.

Sure, it "leans" towards it. But please at least admit there is a POSSIBILITY of it being very real. And once you've done that, can you come up with some thoughts on methods of proof? I may be missing something in my assessment - there may be a way of proving it, in the face of non-

Anyone remember CB in the late 60's early 70's. Back in 1967 when I was a kid I was living in New Jersey at Mcguire Airforce Base and I would go over to the Army Mars Radio Station at Fort Dix and the Guys would let me play on the CB Radio and was fun I traded something to one of those guys for a 5 channel Globe Star CB Base Mobile CB. I put up a Mobile antenna on the Roof where i lived. I could talk about 20 or 30 miles with that setup, later I moved to Sulphur Oklahoma in 1968 My dad bought a Hallicrafters CB 19 with 6 Channels and a 23 channel tune receiver and a Hy-Gain CLR 2 Omni base antenna range was good where i lived... Those were the best days of CB Radio

Yes I remember. I got my first 5 watt CB in 69 which was a TRC-18 Realistic Mobile. Back in those days Realistics were good radios. I too lived in Oklahoma close to the OKC metro and after moving out of state a while have returned here. I was first introduced to CB radios at a late 60's family gathering in Platt National Park which you surely know was on the south side of Sulphur. We used to get up on that high bluff overlooking Sulphur with walkie talkies and could easily make contact with local stations. Who knows, we may have "rachet jawed" a little.

I passed General again on 01-07. I'm now working on Extra. The next test session is before 02-23.

I have a 2950 ready to go. I'll need a radio and antenna capable of 75 meters to go there.

Scott,

I have 2 antenna. Imax 2000 tunes from 10-17M easily. For 20-80, I have the Huslter 5BTV. For 150. you cannot beat it. It is built like a tank. I have it groundmounted in a wet swamp, and laid 3 ground radial wires each for 20-40-80. I did not bury them, and just laid them on the ground. If you choose to do this, let me know. I can save you alot of time tweaking it. I learned the hard way.

Why did you do that? According to Telstar Electronics, you only need 9 square feet of ground plane.

I probably didn;t need them because of the water in the swamp. But I followed the directions and specs. It took me about 1 1/2 days to tune it. The first day I was scratchign my head with 3 and 4 SWR. I finally figured out that my autek analyzer was broke. A standard SWR meter saidn I was pretty well tuned. The biggest problen is adjusting, going back to the radio, and reading the meter. I FRS radio and another person would have greatly reduced the tuning time. It sould only take 1 hour or less.

About 67 I got one of those converters you hook up to your car radio. My radio wasnt in a car though and I had a rotatable dipole up about 40 ft.
Probably the best damn CB receiver I ever had. In about 1970-71 I built my own TX mostly from parts salvaged from old TV chassis. Changed channels by plugging in the right crystal in a tube socket on the front of the radio.
Getting a little feedback from the rx made it sound kind of echoy.

Revealed: How eBay sellers fix auctions

http://www.timesonline.co.uk/newspaper/0,,176-2570050,00.html

Recorded excerpts of meetings with Paraskevaides

CUSTOMERS of the internet auction site eBay are being defrauded by unscrupulous dealers who secretly bid up the price of items on sale to boost profits. An investigation by The Sunday Times has indicated that the practice of artificially driving up prices - known as shill bidding - is widespread across the site.

Last week one of the UK's biggest eBay sellers admitted in a taped conversation with an undercover reporter that he was prepared to use business associates to bid on his goods for him. Our inquiries found evidence that a number of businesses - ranging from overseas property agencies to car dealerships - have placed bids on their own items using fake identities. The cases raise questions about whether eBay, the world's biggest auction site, is doing enough to protect consumers.

Shill bidding is against eBay rules and is illegal under the 2006 Fraud Act. However, the resulting higher prices on the site boost the value of eBay's share of the sales.

Last November eBay changed its rules to conceal bidders' identity - making it even more difficult for customers to see whether sellers are bidding on their own lots. Since its launch seven years ago, eBay's UK website has attracted more than 15m customers. It sells more than 10m items at any given time. One of the beneficiaries of the boom is Eftis Paraskevaides, a former gynaecologist, from Cambridgeshire. He has become a "Titanium PowerSeller" - one of eBay's handful of top earners - selling more than £1.4m worth of antiquities a year on the site.

In a conversation with an undercover reporter last week, Paraskevaides claimed shill bidding was commonplace on eBay. When the reporter asked whether he arranged for associates to bid on his own items, he replied: "Well, if I put something really expensive (up for sale) and I was concerned that it was going for nothing, I would phone a friend of mine, even a client of mine who buys from me, and say: For Christ's sake, I sell you 100 quids' worth of items a week . . . just put two grand on it, will you?" The reporter was posing as a seller of valuable antiquities. He inquired whether Paraskevaides could sell them on eBay and guarantee a minimum price. He replied: "Leave it to me (laughs). Don't call it shill bidding. Then I won't be accused of shill bidding. Yes. I mean - I've got people. "I've got some of my big clients who buy big items off me, I look after them. So I can get on the phone to America and say: Mr XXXX . . . you're a multi-millionaire. You buy a hundred grand's worth off me a year. Do me a favour would you. Just put - yeah. Exactly." He claimed eBay would never follow up a complaint against him for shill bidding because he generated about £15,000 a month in commission for the company. "Are they going to ban somebody who's making them the best part of 15 grand a month? No," he said.

After being told that he had been talking to an undercover reporter, Paraskevaides denied that he had ever shill bidded on eBay and claimed he was talking about clients who sometimes bid on expensive items if they wished to protect the price. However The Sunday Times discovered businesses that have been bidding on their own items. One leading dealer from London admitted last week that that he had shill bidded in the past.

A spokesman for eBay said he expected that the company would now launch an investigation into Paraskevaides. Anyone caught shill bidding risks a permanent ban. The spokesman added: "The change to the way bidder IDs are shown has already resulted in a safer environment for users."

While it's easy to condemn shill bidding, and it's technically illegal, hopefully we all realize that it's a common practice in both live and online auctions. If you go to an auction house where high-end items are being sold (jewelry, antiques, etc.) do you not think that the seller and/or auctioneer have people in the audience bidding up the price?

http://www.timesonline.co.uk/newspaper/0,,176-2570050,00.html

Recorded excerpts of meetings with Paraskevaides

CUSTOMERS of the internet auction site eBay are being defrauded by unscrupulous dealers who secretly bid up the price of items on sale to boost profits. An investigation by The Sunday Times has indicated that the practice of artificially driving up prices - known as shill bidding - is widespread across the site.

Last week one of the UK's biggest eBay sellers admitted in a taped conversation with an undercover reporter that he was prepared to use business associates to bid on his goods for him. Our inquiries found evidence that a number of businesses - ranging from overseas property agencies to car dealerships - have placed bids on their own items using fake identities. The cases raise questions about whether eBay, the world's biggest auction site, is doing enough to protect consumers.

Shill bidding is against eBay rules and is illegal under the 2006 Fraud Act. However, the resulting higher prices on the site boost the value of eBay's share of the sales.

Rotor is probably shot, coax is bad, boom to element mounts probably shot, if the boom has a dent it will probably fold in half when you try to put it up. $50 tops.

Buying a pig in a poke. Ive bought two for less than that. Lots of stuff will go bad just sitting around for 25 years, even worse if it was ever Moonrakers can be turned into a nice antenna. The way they come the boom is too short for a 4 element amtenna. Most of those rotators I ve seen were DOA, gears stripped, lightning damage.

Your point has -nothing- to do with his ad, Jimmie.

You bid $50 for open, or is that too rich for your blood?

Of course it has everything to do with the original post. He wanted to know what it was worth and I said $50 and why.
He asked two questions. What its worth and if anyone is interested. Im obviously not interested. Sorry if you dont like my evaluation of what he is selling but it goes along with my experience with this type of equipment.

There is a Ham M rotor (I assume that's what you have, anything less and it's probably ragged out) on ebay right now, it has 3 1/2 days to go and so far they have 13 bids and it's up to $83.
I have a Ham M that was only in use for about 3 years and has been stored since the late 60's, it's one tough rotor. RM~

I think most of the rotors you saw back then were CD. They were really great for TV antennas OK for PDL-2. Youu could get parts and rebuild them BACK THEN. Until the OP is sure of what he has I assume the worst. I would reccomend setting up the rotor so it is operational and he can demonstrate it to possible buyers as this would be the big selling point of the antenna.

Here - The base stations use ch 19 as the base channel. They use this channel to bother and harass all the truckers coming through vegas. Ch 19 is a fun channel always somthing funny going on.
Bull Dog is the most popular cb'r out here.
Check out ch 19 when the skip rolls in for some Good Radio. You may here Las Vegas.

I couldn't imagine anyone using a TV rotor on a moonraker. They used to use the AR22 and TR44's (mostly 44's) on the smaller beams but the Ham M is not a TV rotor, I used one to turn stacked 4 element Hornets, each had a 24 ft boom.
The rotor was mounted at eyeball level down at bottom of tower and the antenna's were supported on thrust bearings. Had it up 5 or 6 years until 80+ mph wind turned the hornets into pretzels. The tower and the rotor survived. RM~

Your estimate was made on an assumption that the majority of the beam is in poor condition, therefore.

Your experience leaves much to be desired since by your own words, you're used to dealing with beams that are practically worthless junk.
That beam is a classic and most excellent performer. A little TLC, elbow grease and maybe some some new hardware brackets can do wonders. Bent parts can be rehabbed or replaced just like rotors. Even if one needs put some cash into it, one can save over purchasing it new.

The one I have doesn't have any markings on the rotor it's self but does on the control box. The Ham M came with several different control boxes and as I understand will operate with much later model boxes.
I did go out and take some measurements and the screws that hold the bell sections together are 5 1/2 inches from center to center. The bell at it's widest point is aprox 8 inches.

The one I have now (it still has the original paint on it) belonged to a deceased relative and I have offered it for sale locally (NE Okla) for $150. I have had offers to ship it but don't want to have to pack it for shipping so will advertise it again locally when the weather warms up.

Hard (inpossible) to appraise anything with out seeing it and I've been out of the CBing to long to really know but would think your items have significant value if in good shape, check ebay then subtract a bunch. :)

Yeah, a lot of times you see them at hamfest. Someone took one down and painted it with Aluminum paint trying to pass it off as a decent tower.

It used to be funny before it blossomed into a full time living for the Antennas? Most big tractors have GPS guidance for both harvesting and sowing. They can run all night as long as the captain doesn't fall asleep.

Spread the word!

Welcome Technicians to HF Weekend!

To celebrate their arrival and welcome Technician class licensees to HF, Friday, February 23, 2007 through Sunday, February 25, 2007 has been designated as ï¿½Welcome Technicians to HF Weekendï¿½! Of the 655,129 US Amateur Radio licensees, 323,443 (49%) are Technicians, so the number of potential HF operators will effectively double overnight!

Most Technicians will probably be eager to explore their new 10-meter phone privileges first. Since we are at the bottom of the cycle and sky wave contacts may be difficult on 10 meters, all hams are encouraged to monitor 28.365 throughout the weekend to contact and welcome as many Technician licensees as possible.

While Technicians can operate SSB anywhere between 28.300 and 28.500, setting a ï¿½meetingï¿½ frequency will increase the likelihood of successful contacts and a positive first impression of HF if the band isn't open. Of course, if the band is open, calling CQ anywhere in the sub band will likely yield positive results!

This is a great opportunity to encourage new hams and do a bit of Elmering. Spread the word to the hams in your area, help the Technician licensees in you club to build 10-meter antennas, get on the air and have fun! See you on 28.365!

Catch on the bands!

I just looked real quick at the link you provided.

The caveats with any of the cheap circuit simulators are the following:

1. Limited vendor supplied library of parts to use.
2. No way to add additional parts to the library.
3. Limited circuit size, number of nodes or components used in the simulation.
4. Limited or missing models like non-linear magnetics.
5. Limited or missing analysis types, for example no FFT, parameter or temperature sweeps.

Not all of the above may be a problem with the package you're looking at or would be of interest to you.

Personally I am looking at Open Source Software. The cost is zero and the packages are improving. One of the most complete I've found is called "gEDA".

http://www.geda.seul.org/

If you don't mind learning Linux this maybe a better way to go.

Call my "DevHole" what? Not that I have one, AFAIK, I think.

Makes as much sense as "the ying collective", I suppose.

"When I told Abbie Hoffman that he was the first one who made me laugh since Lenny Bruce died, Hoffman said, "Really? He was my god." The combination of satirical irreverence and sense of justice that Bruce and Hoffman shared was the real spirit behind the Yippies--a term I coined to describe a phenomenon that already existed: an organic coalition of stoned hippies and political activists who engaged in such actions as throwing money on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange, then explaining to reporters the meaning of that symbolism. Folksinger Phil Ochs summed it up: "A demonstration should turn you on, not turn you off." So when journalists link the Yippies with misleading bedfellows, at best it's careless shorthand; at worst it's deliberate demonization.
Osama bin Laden wanted an aircraft to crash into the Pentagon. Abbie Hoffman merely wanted to levitate it." -- Paul Krassner,

Typical of low tier simulators. Good for digital and low frequency circuits. Limited by the implementation of Spice. Version of Spice are limited in RF simulation accuracy. It looks as if this version uses a version of Spice that is useful upto maybe 30MHz. I doubt any higher.

Most of the features are just GUI frontend for their implementation of Spice in the low tier product. The one thing that I don't like about the low tier is that it does not do any transfer function, distortion and Monte Carlo simulations. Looks to be a crippled version of Spice.

It is not bad though. If you have Linux installed then try gEDA. et ngSpice also to run with it. You don't need gEDA to run ngSpice but they do integrate into a single package. ngSpice will run on a windows box with CYGWIN. gEDA wont. Though you maybe able to cuild a widows version of it or build a version that will run in CYGWIN.

There is nothing wrong with an undouched vagina. What is wrong with a little toxicity in my nether region?

The next time someone calls me the Yeast Beast, I MaxWhore, will release a series of queefes that will end life as we know it.

If you think I'm playing just try me!!

Do not take my toxic vagina lightly. It is a confirmed member of the Axis of Evil and is an honorary member of Al Quieda

I was never formally charged so any claim that my vaginalstank killed my mom is 100% false.

it was just her time to go and my queefes had nothing to do with it.

Um, hello, retard, didja miss the fifty fuckin posts that BASHED yer fuckin head into the wall? Seriously, how delusional do you get? Do you want ANOTHER post hammering? Cause boy I've got the lil bot and she REALLY wants to fuck you sideways with your own stupidity. ^_^

Spread the word!
Welcome Technicians to HF Weekend!
To celebrate their arrival and welcome Technician class licensees to HF, Friday, February 23, 2007 through Sunday, February 25, 2007 has been designated as "Welcome Technicians to HF Weekend"! Of the 655,129 US Amateur Radio licensees, 323,443 (49%) are Technicians, so the number of potential HF operators will effectively double overnight!
Most Technicians will probably be eager to explore their new 10-meter phone privileges first. Since we are at the bottom of the cycle and sky wave contacts may be difficult on 10 meters, all hams are encouraged to monitor 28.365 throughout the weekend to contact and welcome as many Technician licensees as possible.
While Technicians can operate SSB anywhere between 28.300 and 28.500, setting a "meeting" frequency will increase the likelihood of successful contacts and a positive first impression of HF if the band isn't open. Of course, if the band is open, calling CQ anywhere in the sub band will likely yield positive results!
This is a great opportunity to encourage new hams and do a bit of Elmering. Spread the word to the hams in your area, help the Technician licensees in you club to build 10-meter antennas, get on the air and have fun! See you on 28.365!
Catch on the bands!

897. SWR and buildings

From my understanding when you are checking SWR you should be 50ft away from buildings etc. I'm just wondering how big an effect being close to a building can have on SWR? If my SWR if around 2 (that'll do me) and I find myself in a town near a building or in a jam with a big 18 wheeler alongside could I find that my SWR could go from 2 to a damaging level due to the closeness?

Cheers,

Dave

They are awash in their self-proclaimed glory after they posed as an underage person and agreed to do all sorts of sex acts wioth adult males, and they are adults posing as teenager themselves. Never heard of it happening or seen it happen myself. Objects like buildings and the sheet metal on trucks will absorb far more RF than they will reflect. Any -significant- reflection, enough to potentially hurt your radio, requires a thin, straight conductor, parallel to your antenna, with a specific length, and at a specific distance. Matter of fact, some people who build their own antennas and -want- that kind of reflection often find out that it's not easy -- certainly not as easy as mounting a vertical next to a building or truck.

If you check SWR and it's over 3:1, most likely there's something wrong other than just being close to a building or truck.

There is an effect like you mention... but nowhere near that severe.
Try and stay in the clear when making adjustments... but don't think

Reckon they talk much ssb dx with that rig? They should have a big enough

The truck has a 2.3L with no p/s or ac. I don't think it's coming from the ignition due to no change in the noise during acceleration. When the ignition is turned to the on position you can here the electric fuel pump come on and quite. I am quite shure of the pump being my problem. My question is this. If I just replace the fuel pump would the new one be quiet you think? I'm guessing that the fuel pump is originally the one that came with the truck.

From my understanding when you are checking SWR you should be 50ft away from buildings etc. I'm just wondering how big an effect being close to a building can have on SWR? If my SWR if around 2 (that'll do me) and I find myself in a town near a building or in a jam with a big 18 wheeler alongside could I find that my SWR could go from 2 to a damaging level due to the closeness?
Cheers,
Dave

I have an original Cobra 148GTL CB Radio. I know that i can modify it to operate in the 10Meter band by switching the crystal to a 11.6908MHz crystal.

is anybody familiar with this mod? If so, how do i determine what frequency each channel will be at? will i need to purchase a freq. countert o determine what freq. will go with what channel?

Also, will my 102: whip work with 10M, or rather will it give me a close enough SWR to suffice, or will i need to purchase a new antenna?

Any information or assistance would be greatly appreciated.

The 102 inch whip will be too long unless you use a tuner. If you are going to permanently convert it, just cut the whip, and possibly purchase another to use on 11M.

hello could anyone tell me what a galaxy saturn turbo base with an astatic night eagle mic. might sell for.thanks in advance Dan

Depends if you're talking new or used. A few years ago those bases were selling new for around $499 retail. The microphone is a black and gold version of the D104 with a side grip and ptt button. I don't think they make those microphones anymore but they were going for 100-125 bucks retail. If the radio and mic is used, offer $350. Anything more than that you might want to look into purchasing some ham gear.

I have an original Cobra 148GTL CB Radio. I know that i can modify it to operate in the 10Meter band by switching the crystal to a 11.6908MHz crystal.
is anybody familiar with this mod? If so, how do i determine what frequency each channel will be at? will i need to purchase a freq. countert o determine what freq. will go with what channel? Also, will my 102: whip work with 10M, or rather will it give me a close enough SWR to suffice, or will i need to purchase a new antenna?
Any information or assistance would be greatly appreciated.

There are channel conversion charts out there so you can roadmap your radio freqs.
The antenna will work on 10. Maybe not at optimum performance, but it will work.

Unplug the coax. If the noise goes away it's your antenna, but this problem is a bit notorious of Ford trucks. Sometimes replacing the pump works, sometimes it doesn't. There are various methods used to fix this problem and just as many opinions. Sometimes inline filters work. There have been aftermarket pumps installed meeting with some success.

Try a .01mfd disc cap across the power leads at both ends of the Fuel pump leads. If you got/get a copy of any ARRL handbook in your public library - look for the section on mobile radios.

So how much would you trim off the whip? There are a lot of HAM/CBer's waiting to jump on 10 meters with their existing equipment.

Do I need to trim the whip on a Wilson 1000 to make it happy on 28.365?

I'm kind of leaning towards bad ground. Run the CB's negative to something well-grounded like a bolt on the frame if possible. Did that with a 2001 Ford Ranger my roommate used to have and it got rid of the noise.

Another possibility if the truck turns out to have poor grounding in general (such as my mid-90's Kia Sportage) is go with the best ground you can reasonably get to and use something like the Ranger RCI 2950 and run it with ANL/NB turned on and get good at reflexively adjusting the RF gain.

Yea, when I unplug the antenna the noise goes away completely. I have only used one antenna on the truck since I bought it like 6 months ago. I put on a Wilson 500. I didn't have this type of noise in the cavalier that blowed up on me. I believe I will try a new fuel pump to see what that will do, I don't think I'll try the capacitor until last resort do to the fact I'm pretty good at screwing up. The cb was talking threw the car stereo at first. I bought a little noise filter for like a stereo that went on the power line and cleaned the grounding place real good. Lucky I guess that that problem seemed to go away. What do you think of the idea that perhaps cleaning the ground up real good for the fuel pump? All I almost forgot about the wipers. If I need the wipers I just turn off the cb the noise is so bad. Up in the red. Any experience dealing with a similar problem like this before?

If you unplug the antenna... and the noise goes away... that doesn't mean it's the antenna that's causing your problem!

It damn sure means the source of noise is coming through the antenna or coax feedline and eliminates the fuel pump as the source of the noise.

Dorfs are notorious for brush noise in the system from their electric motors. It's just like TV interference from vacuum cleaners or kitchen appliances. About the only way to eliminate the noise is by putting a filter cap on every offending motor. Or swap the truck for an S10 or Dakota.

Cool. So did you do anything productive today? I put sheet metal, pop rivets, and bondo on an old truck most of the day. It was all I could do to get the barn up to 60 degrees, cold week.

reprogrammed some -54 vdc controller kit. put up a new 10 gig (OC-192) circuit and tested another over to england. yeah its cold especially the wind be a blowin'. nothing like jim upstate though.

I've only plowed my drive 4 or 5 times so far which is light for our

There was lots of skip on CB a few days ago. When these spots come back around in two weeks, 10 meters should be hopping on the weekend of the 23rd.
Heck, Thursday I made a contact to Nebraska on 38 lower.

One contest club is making it the whole weekend instead of one day. My 2950 is ready to go. How much do I need to trim off a Wilson 1000 to make it resonant at 28.5 MHz? I can't test it before the 23rd and I need it that day.

Any sideband radio has better filters then an AM only radio.

I am not saying to interfere with other stations. But I just had to make fun of the way some of the amateurs are taking the no code testing that our goverment has handed down.

Gee whiz yeah the Ten Ten Club, they are a Ten Meter Ham Club.
http://www.ten-ten.org/
Hope they will be a help here. What type traffic do they have there on 28.370 Mc USB???? Maybe a net?

I can use all the Ten Meter Band, but it sure needs more activity. Yeah
I'll bet 28.365, 28.375, 28.385, 28.395, and 28.405 will active, maybe?

Yeah Scott is right here. In my Ford Truck I connected the Battery Ground to the fender, then ran a braid wire to the firewall, and then to the Hood. That made a big difference, in reducing RF Hash Noises from the Ignition System.

Flux is a dielectric and does not necessarily need removal. ONly cases where remaining flux can be an issue is on high density boards that may have issues with metal migration. This can be easily remedied by prewashing the PC boards prior to populating the board and reflow.
Most bare PCBs come from vendors that are highly chlorine contaminated. It is the chlorine compounds on the board that is the issue and not solder flux.

Tha tis only necesary for making antenna pattern measurements. Also on a certified range the ground is made of a consistant material so that it is uniform over the entire distance between the transmit antenna and the receiving antenna.

To do a certified range for 30 MHz the test antennae would need to be separated by ten wavelengths and at least one quarter wavelength in heigth, preferably higher.

Florida to Maryland sounds more like an E hop than F layer propogation. E layer propogation does not necessarily require heavy sunspot activity. 10/11/12 meter E layer propogation is relatively prevelent at local noontime.

Sporadic E does not even require sunspot activity.

The equatorial rotation period of the Sun is about 25 days. It slows down as you go higher in latidtude of the Sun. The Polar regions of the Sun rotate in about 35 days.

Therefore depending on the latitude of the spots the trek around the backside may take between 12 and 17 days.

Maryland to Texas is a pipeline. Florida is the wrong direction for Maryland to Texas also seems to be E layer propogation. Correct that Florida to Maryland is a more north/south path. That is a bit more difficult especially as the afternoon progresses.

Hello TE:

I don't think Mr. Faraday had anything to do with it. Is that guy on channel 12, and goes by Fright Hauler? Has a Cobra 148 and Texas Star 500, and has duel whip antennas?!?!?!

Well anyway grounding the fender, firewall, and hood was a significant improvement in reducing the ignition noise. I also ran new shielded wiring for the Ignition Modular, and that didn't help as much. Oh yeah I also added on copper tape (from the TRW Swap Meet) applied a 1/2 inch width of the copper tape every 3 to 4 inches on the center distributor wire, this was also a big help.

I have a Motorola Radio in the Truck, and its has a really neat noise canceling circuit in it.

And another noise reduction idea, would be a Clear Speech External Speaker with DSP Noise Reduction. Yeahs its 200 dollars, but if ya want to play ya gotto pay.

I know guys fight the noise coming from a noise fuel pump in the plastic gas tank. I would wrap the plastic tank with wire, and add in a power lead filter.

Jay in the Great Mojave Desert, ...just down the road ah ways from the fillin station.

It can also make the board smell bad if it gets hot during use. It may even smoke -- and these days smoking is illegal just about everywhere.

Just get a different truck. Then you won't have to deal with the bass-ackwards electrical system, the characteristic cancer above the fender wells, rebuilding the CV joints on the dual I-beams (a major PITA), or that annoying and mysterious 'clunk' that sometimes appears after 100k or so.

996. ARRL Now Only Wants No Code Hams - Holding Midnight Exams

Found on qrz.com. The ARRL now only wants only no code hams. And as for the rest of us?

W1AW Special Event, Midnight Exam Sessions to Mark New Amateur Rules

NEWINGTON, CT, Feb 9, 2007 -- As new Amateur Radio Service rules phase in Friday, February 23, eliminating the Morse code requirement, Hiram Percy Maxim Memorial Station W1AW will mark the milestone with a weekend-long special event. In addition, a number of Central Connecticut volunteer examiners will be on hand at ARRL Headquarters -- both before and after the new rules become effective at 12:01 AM EST -- to offer Amateur Radio examinations under both the current and new rules. ARRL Regulatory Information Specialist Dan Henderson, N1ND, is helping to coordinate the celebration. He says Headquarters staff and other volunteers will keep W1AW active for the "Welcome Weekend" event.

"W1AW will be on the air all weekend for this special event to celebrate the fact that so many amateurs have gained or will earn new privileges as a result of the rule changes," he said. "The station will operate starting at 12:01 AM Eastern Time on Friday, February 23, continuing into the wee hours and resuming operation during the day. Then W1AW will be on the air on both days of the weekend, from 10 AM until 5 PM -- perhaps longer as conditions and enthusiasm dictate."

Operation will be on both SSB and CW. W1AW operators will concentrate their activities on the Technician and General class HF subbands. On SSB, the station will use its normal phone frequencies -- 1.855, 3.990, 7.290, 14.290, 18.160 and 21.390 MHz. On 10 meters, W1AW will operate SSB on or about 28.480 MHz.

Henderson says operating will be casual unless pileups develop. "The purpose is to welcome newcomers to new privileges," he said.

"First Contact" certificates will be available as part of this event. ARRL invites anyone making a first contact or first HF contact to enter the contact information on the ARRL "Welcome Weekend" Web site and receive a certificate in return. "If the first contact is with W1AW we will also be including a W1AW QSL card for the contact," Henderson added.

The ARRL anticipates a huge influx of upgrade applications once the Morse code requirement disappears. In addition, all Technician licensees will have limited HF privileges starting February 23, whether or not they've passed a Morse code test.

Amateur Radio exam sessions both before and after the zero hour will offer an opportunity for applicants either to upgrade under the outgoing licensing rules at the last possible opportunity or under the new licensing rules at the first possible opportunity.

"Dual exam sessions are scheduled at ARRL Headquarters around the effective time of the new licensing rules," says Brennan Price, N4QX, a former ARRL staff member and an ARRL VEC volunteer examiner. "At 11 PM on February 22, a session will be held for candidates wishing to upgrade under the existing rules. A few folks have expressed interest in such a session." Price says all Amateur Radio written and telegraphy elements will be offered until midnight.

"At 12:01 AM February 23, a second session will begin under the new licensing rules," he said. "Examiners will not only be evaluating previously earned Certificates of Successful Completion of Exam (CSCEs) for upgrades, but will be offering all written elements." Two teams of volunteer examiners will be on site until all applicants have been served.

On or after February 23, applicants upgrading on the basis of a valid CSCE must present the certificate for element credit, fill out an application and pay any applicable exam session fee, which most VECs charge. Only after the VE team has issued a CSCE for upgrade credit may applicants actually use their new operating privileges on the air.

Additional Welcome Weekend information will be available on the ARRL Web site in the days leading up to February 23.

Well, I'm not sure of your point, but from the title of the post, you seem to be somewhat negative...("ARRL Now Only Wants...")

I don't think that's all they want, but more of a case of that's all there is, thanks to the FCC. The ARRL is just accepting the reality of the situation.

1) ANY organization generally wants to preserve itself (Gee, I know this comes as a big surprise). If due to FCC action (beyond the control of the ARRL), all that there is are new, no-code hams, why shouldn't the ARRL welcome them?

2) Read point one above again. This was an FCC action, beyond the control of the ARRL; the ARRL can welcome the newbies or put their tail between their legs and slink off into the night...

3) You ask "What happens to the rest of us?" I am sure the ARRL would be glad to welcome us as new members and/or keep us as existing members. Why would you suspect anything different?

Just think of it this way, you know more than they will by knowing how to use Morse Code at any speed. Now you hae a conversation with some otehr Ham that knows CW and the newbies wont understand what your talking about. Think of it as a benefit, not as disadvantage.

Do you really believe that all the flux is gone?

Most fluxes today are water soluable and not all is removed. Some will remain under surface mounted devices.

Besides it looks nicer if the board is cleaned.

DK 8 watts, and no mods have been done? Right. My radio max out at 5W DK, and about about 15-18 W SSB.

well if you can call turning up the rf a mod, then i guess it does...but mods in my book on a ssb radio is an unlocked clarifier...plus it has no extra channels...all in all, the radio kicks ass!...already have 8 ppl watching it...it will sell

I'm not sure I understand your statement. If you really mean the "ARRL want's only nocode hams" then you must believe all hams that have passed the code test will no longer be welcome at the ARRL and memberships will not be renewed. Do you really believe that?

Lets not forget the ARRL and it's aging membership really has no choice when it comes to accepting hams that have passed all currently required tests. The ARRL should make plans for liquidation if they choose otherwise.

> And as

What do the rest of you (hams that passed a morse code test) want from the ARRL. Would they like to retake the code test as a measure of defiance? Maybe a bordered certificate suitable for framing that proclaims: I Passed The Code Test at (insert speed). And I Practiced
This Long (insert number of times code tapes replayed).

For heavens sake why offer the test under the old rules at the 11th hour? Reads like the ARRL is encouraging a "We vs They" mentality among the old guard. What's next...will the no code licensees have a special marker on their QST address label?

Yea, Thank you for the article on the noise problems. As well as the opinions. I know from having both a S-10 a long time ago and owning a Ranger now that the Ford is way worse on noise. The needle was running on the quiet side of no less than a 5 ever. Now I have it down to 2 threw 2.5 when it's all quiet. Soon as this weather decides what its going to do here in WV I'm going to try to get things done to quiet it down further. I appreciate it. TY

Hi,
What's all this business I hear people talking about blasting people's car stereos or killing cars altogether with high-power RF? I run 2m, 10m, and 11m in my jeep and I'd like to sort out the fact from the legend and find out what kind of power I can use without risking damage to my jeep or cars around me. At what power level is front-end overload to a nearby radio likely? At what power level is damage likely, and to what componets?

I am currently using only 50 watts on a 5/8 wave (2m), 25w on a 1/4 wave (10m), legal 4w on a 1/4 wave (11m)

Thanks,
Nelson KE5MBX

Sorry, that is a SERIOUS FACTUAL ERROR!!!

Dividing 2 by 3 results in the decimal fraction 0.66666666666666...

That is NOT the Bible's reference to "the number of the beast."

Not true what you say about the ARRL. Amateur radio is only as good as the effort you put into it. If you can't do code, you cannot communicate with a huge subset of the amateur population. That is a fact. You never will be able to so until your learn code, FCC requirement or no FCC requirement. There is some DX you will never get, some countries you may never contact, many people you will never meet.

Some no-coders sound like the gay rights lobby: They seem to be trying to make no-code the "norm". "I want you to think I am normal". "I am as just good as you, I can do HF now, I can be a real 'Ham'". (Gays can get "married"). True by regulation, but not really in practice.

In the foreseeable future you will never truly be a ham until you can QSO in code; you will only hold a piece of paper authorizing you to communicate on HF. Don't shoot the messanger. Don't bother disagreeing with me; it is the large subset of the amateur base that you have to convince and, unfortunately, that will take a while to change IF it ever does change. When people are sick of SSB QRM or we cannot QSO by voice due to conditions, we can simply move to the CW sub-bands and you are left "holding the mike".

As Walter Cronkite used to say. "That's the way it is..." February 23, 2007.

Ok, this is a bit long:

Most of the newer instrument clusters (circa '90 and later) are really sensitive to both static -and- RF, and are -not- shielded. Some engine computers are also sensitive to RF (screws with the high-impedance signal from the oxygen sensor). Even some anti-lock brake modules can be disrupted by a strong signal.

Begin rant:

The SAE sure had its head up its ass when they allowed junk like that to be made. Very few of these systems (if any) were ever recalled because it is almost impossible to prove liability in any case of failure due to RF. And the US Supreme Court ruled recently that a few "accidental" deaths are an acceptable risk in corporate business practices, releasing auto makers from liability for unsafe vehicles provided that the problem is fixed after being discovered. Therefore, new auto systems are tested for safety by the consumers who buy new vehicles -- a system is proven "safe" if it doesn't cause any financial liability (i.e, injuries and/or fatalities directly attributable to the faulty system). One would hope that there is some sort of saftey process that needs to be done -before- a new auto system is implemented, like what the FDA does with drugs. But there isn't. And to think that people would rather whine about a little tobacco smoke.....

End rant.

So how much power is too much power? There's no definitive answer. I have seen brake failure with as little as 60 watts on VHF-hi (a Ford).
Remembering that the auto makers are mostly responsible for any such problems, you will just have to use your best judgment. Follow the rules that say to use the least amount of power, and to use good engineering practices.

Get over it already and move on. They ARE doing code too or can't you read?

Code is still used but it is not relevant today in testing any more.
GET OVER IT. MOVE ON. No one is stopping you from USING CW. USE IT IF Happened when I was working at a 2-way shop in Oregon. Since the auto makers dumped the responsibility of RF compatibility onto the radio makers, the procedure (as described in the manuals) for installing a commercial radio into -any- vehicle requires that it be driven and keyed up with the brakes applied. One failed the test.

Was there fluid in the master cylinder on that one? In other words, could it have been the brakes were bad to begin with? How many were tested?

He's laughing at the Gertol class of amateurs like yourself. Don't bother disagreeing with him. His group WILL be a larger subset of the amateur base that you'll have to convince to not laugh at you and your senile friends.

Well, I hardly know what "Gertol" is. Talking about senility, one of the first signs is forgetting how to spell.

The sooner that you bastards all realize that ham radio as you have known it is now ended and now getting a licence is much like pulling a prize envelope out of a Cracker-Jack Box the better you'll all be for it. Am I lying? It really don't matter anyway as kids today would rather be on Youtube or Myspace or AOL IM with their friends.

Ah yes but if you say that you just do not understand radio people. You cannot possibly have exprienced the fascination with the physics of skywave propagation or the joy of knowing how analog circuits work, antenna and transmission line science and just knowing that one has transmitted an EM wave that someone else 8K miles awys has received at the speed of light without help from a man-made infrasructure. It is waves, it is music, it is knowedge, it is dicovery, it is joy. We argue, we disagree, we flame, we sometimes hate each other, some of us are not licensed, some are CBers but we all share that common fascination that IT just cannot provide, as awesome in its own right it may be.

Hello? This is February 12, 2007. FACTUAL ERROR!!!

There's one little problem, "Stefan." Isn't ANY "Stefan Wolfe" in the FCC CORES database. The best that can be found are two Steven Wolfes:

Steven H. Wolfe, KC4UZW, Tech, FRN 0004408340
Steven B. Wolfe, KC9KTN, Tech, FRN 0016067183

www.qrz.com confirms that.

The only "CW sub-bands" that Techs have is a small sliver on the bottom of two VHF ham bands. Of course, all other classes can use those. <shrug> So?

Yep. Mechanic checked it out completely. It was the radio.

>Errr only Fords' are susceptible to RF brake killings? <g>

Beats me. I would suppose it can happen with other makes since the manuals (Motorola, GE, Uniden, etc.) say to test -all- vehicles. But I have also seen GM cars/trucks get screwed up -without- a radio due to RFI from the vehicle's own harness wreaking havoc on the oxygen sensor wire. I rewire all O2 wires with teflon coax just to be sure. And I don't think I would do fiberglass hood & fenders without wrapping the entire harness in some sort of shielding.

These modern electrical system are proving to be just too fragile for me. Over the winter I've been building up a 4.3 with a Q-jet for the S10, and as soon as spring gets here I'm going to drop it in and gut the truck of all that computer crap. You can color me retro, but don't color me stranded on the side of the road because some overpriced sensor got plugged with a little road dust!

Having observed issues and changes in recent years, I think the question that has to be asked at some point is whether or not the ARRL should continue to attempt to influence rules, laws, etc. The money that they have to be spending on legal efforts, lobbying, etc has got to be significant. I think any objective observer would conclude that their ability to influence legislation, FCC rules, etc in recent years has been pretty dismal. Earlier in their history, the ARRL had the ability to do this. Times change. In today's world, the Imperial FCC chooses to do what it wants to do, selectively uses public comments that support their pre-determined outcomes, fails to enforce its own rules and is happy ignore factual data or public sentiment in the process. Resources may be better spent in providing new and different services to members rather than flush it down the commode under the banner of "fighting city hall."

No Dodge Ram pickup trtrucks are also. It states in my owners manual to be careful in installing any RF transmitters such as to not interfere with the ABS brakes. Chrysler reccomends less than 100watts but is not specific on an exact wattage that can cause failure of the ABS.

This is in my opinion a move to protect themselves from lawsuits if a failure was induced from RF. They can say "We told you so"

Back in the 70's when Eaton came out with ABS for tractor/trailer setups they did have some ABS failures due to high RF field environments. Mostly lockups were the isuses. In todays market it is easier for the auto makers to put the emphasis on the owner to not u se highpowered RF transmitters in the vehicles, than it is to increase cost to fix a potential problem.

I know it will sell. One piece of advice. Start the auctions at 99 cents. They will sell for the same price as if you start them at $50. The difference is, you put less money in ebay's pocket. Also, take better pictures, A nice picture can get you quite a bit more. The picture you have is shitty.

I'm sorry, but I fail to see your point. "CW" can be used just about everywhere on amateur bands from 160m on up to sub-THz.

My remark was on "CW" ONLY. Where's your beef?

Why not? The ARRL is a private incorporated entity. As a legal entity in the USA they have every right to make themselves heard to our government.

>The money >that they have to be spending on legal efforts, lobbying, etc has got >to be significant.

"Significant" is a subjective word, isn't quantifiable.

Their IRS Returns show the amount they've spent on services from a professional lobbying group and a law firm. One of the law firm's partners is Chris Imlay, a member of the ARRL's high inner circle. ARRL's recent IRS Returns show a multi-million dollar PROFIT for their "non-profit" organization.

>I think any objective observer would conclude that >their ability to influence legislation, FCC rules, etc in recent years >has been pretty dismal.

The ARRL hasn't gotten carte blanche on what IT wanted, true. But, it was never a god of radio and really did NOT know what was "best" for US amateur radio...but it seemed to know "what was best" for the Leagues' inner commanders and their core membership.

>Earlier in their history, the ARRL had the ability to do this.

So, they've convinced you they did? :-)

Back in the 1920s and 1930s the League had trumped their organization competitors in the USA. At that time there was little in the way of citizens communicating quickly to DC and getting replies back. ARRL provided the opinion-courier services, a nice letter-head and all the appearance of "being important." It certainly didn't hurt that H.P.Maxim had personal resources to make trips to DC to do his lobbying efforts.

ARRL was able to (profitably enough) publish a monthly magazine (purportedly a 'membership' periodical) of special interest to radio amateurs. The IMAGE of "being all for amateur radio" took hold in the limited ham public eye. It stuck, rightly or wrongly. There were no real competitors in amateur radio publications before or just after WW2.

>Times change.

No kidding? :-)

The appearance of RIVAL publications soon after end of WW2 (CQ, 73) plus the 1960's "question authority" mood began to erode the League's carefully-manicured IMAGE. ARRL increased its efforts to present the authoritative "mission" of them knowing what was best for amateur radio...consistently that being "work DX on HF with CW." VHF and above was a dark, mysterious region to the League and they generally avoided that new area or just didn't bother much with such things...it wasn't "ham radio" as they knew it.

Once the Internet got going and the US government joined up, the common folk COULD talk to DC at the speed of light without any intermediaries to selectively sort/ sanction their words. No more did US radio amateurs have to go through their "district directors" to talk to Washington. The capitol began to "listen" more and more to citizens through the Internet.

The Internet didn't do it all. Before the 1991 public entrance of the www, there was already the movement to toss the code test with the creation of the no-code-test Technician class. That became LAW despite the efforts of the ARRL (which supposedly "knew what was best for ham radio") to stop it. Even before that, well before, the FCC was cognizant of morse code's diminishing use in the whole, wide world of radio communications.

Around 2000, the IARU was for a total rewrite of ITU-R Radio Regulation S25. With that would be removal of the necessity for administrations to test for morse code for any amateur radio license privileges below 30 MHz. ARRL was opposed to that. They remained opposed until WRC-03 was scheduled for Geneva, then they took a "neutral" stance in public just before the conference beginning. The ARRL inner circle was against dropping the code test for US amateur applicants but took on a better-PR appearance of "no comment." The S25 rewrite took place and was voted in. [ARRL can't vote on such ITU things, only "advise"]

Many countries dropped the code test for amateur licenses after WRC-03. The FCC was obliged to stay with the State Department - NTIA - FCC triumvirate representing the US adminstration. A new Petition for removing the code test didn't appear at the FCC until 2005. The ARRL was against it and wanted THEIR version, which HAD to include some code testing (the ARRL "knows what is best for ham radio"...and it was what THEY wanted).

>In today's world, the Imperial FCC >chooses to do what it wants to do, selectively uses public comments >that support their pre-determined outcomes, fails to enforce its own >rules and is happy ignore factual data or public sentiment in the >process.

Sourness Alert! Sour grapes time! It is rather obvious that YOU favor continued code testing and think you are in some "majority" in regards to that.

The FCC isn't "imperial." It is (now) an independent agency of the Administration of the United States, created in 1934. [I was then two years old and you did not exist] With all the radio services it must, by law, regulate now, it does not "favor" amateur radio. What the FCC did do was simply go the course as with all other Petitions, allowing time for Comments (even extending that time twice), then considered ALL those Comments for full year before deciding. Specific things they considered are well described in the body of FCC 06-178.

If there is ANY organization in the USA that is "imperial"
then it is that of the ARRL. They ignored world opinion, toadied to their core membership (olde-tyme morsemen), and simply ignored the majority. They didn't worry. Their publications were giving them a multi-million dollar a year PROFIT for their "non-profit" activities. They believed in their own propaganda and loved the life of "leadership." They still didn't try to entice the HUGE Technician class licensee group...until AFTER 06-178 was announced. AFTER. They aren't fools and know that a sustained League existance requires NEW membership. If existing license are EXPIRING at a rate of 78 a day but NEW licensees represent only 32 a day, they don't have to be mathematicians to realize numbers are shrinking.
Newcomers have - by far - come into US amateur radio through the no-code-test Technician class.

>Resources may be better spent in providing new and different >services to members rather than flush it down the commode under the >banner of "fighting city hall."

Do you consider Access BPL to be "city hall" doings that the League should NOT fight? Sorry, but BPL is a clear and present danger to anyone using HF for any purpose. The ARRL needs to keep the pressure on Washington to fight BPL. After all, with lots of BPL QRM, it is hard to "work DX on HF with CW." The League only lives for HF bands.

What "services" would you suggest the ARRL be doing? Give you fancy bordered certificates (suitable for framing) for your state-of-the-art morse code ability? Provide free franking privileges for your QSL cards? Give you a spare radio in case your ready-built fails and it needs factory repair? Have a representative come and hold your hand when you contest?

The League provides a number of services already and has been doing so for years for its membership. Don't begrudge those. Just try to remember a small group of New Englanders are NOT gods of radio, just a minority membership group in the amateur radio hobby, and are a profit-making publisher of amateur radio special-interest material.

Try to remember that the US government does pretty well at governing ALL its citizens, political parties aside. An "Imperial" dictatorship can be an apt descriptor of a bunch of old men who consider themselves Elite in radio because they could emulate the professionals of 70 years ago. So, you've lost a government decision. TS happens.

No beef. Just stating that back in the 60's novices and techs had 2 meter CW priviledges that were altered at a later date.

The FCC band usage has changed many times in the past 50 years. This recent change is not unusual or anything new.

Not as a corporate entity. The government is of the people and by the

The FCC does as Congress dictates. Remember COngress holds the purse strings for the FCC as well as the power to remove and appoint commisioners. The FCC is an extension of Congress.

Sorry James;

Congress does hold the purse strings as well as the abililty to enact laws which the FCC has to enforce. The President appoints commissioners and the Senate confirms the appointment. The President can request the resignation of any official in government but can only fire a few.

The FCC has released its latest operating budget listing over its web page. Anyone who cares to can go check it out.

The ARRL never reveals its budget plans to the public, despite all its Believers' claims that it is handled in a "democratic fashion" AS IF it were an arm of the guvmint.
The best one can hope for is someone else getting copies of its IRS Returns and publicizes those. Otherwise we "common folk" would never know its a multi-million dollar

"non-profit" organization.

Technicians had and have CW privileges on VHF and UHF whether or not they passed the code. While there are small slivers of 2m and 6m that are exclusively CW, it can be used anywhere above 30mHz by all licensees of Technician or higher. Technicians have ALL privileges above 30mHz.

OK, no problem, assume everything you say is true.

1) Is that bad? Is it any different than the NRA or any other hobby organization?

2) What alternative to the ARRL do you suggest?

There WAS a website (webmaster is a ham) that DID post ARRL IRS returns. I footnoted that in one of my Comments to the FCC. Have to look it up on the CD holding those documents but anyone can access it if it is still up and running.

The National Recovery Act is still going on?!? :-)

> 2) What alternative to the ARRL do you suggest?

"Alternative?" You want an instant alternative?

The ARRL was incorporated in 1914. That's 83 years ago. The league was able to squash its competition in the ancient days by good PR work. I admire them for their chutzpah in that.

From my observation the ARRL just got to believing its own "sins of omissions of the truth" that it lost sight of its original aims (other than being a local telegraph service hacker)...then got the inner circle of its staff to think they were all there through some odd "divine right." It is only a fraternal order and a publisher.

Ain't no equivalent national organization in the USA
now that could compete on equal terms with them.
However, that is NO reason (logically) for them to think they are Top Dog just because they don't have the competition. Its Believers do, but then they have drifted off the mainstream into an emotional attachment to fraternalistic orders.

I've used a 667 on 11 in my Jeep. It did not like the intense voltage swings caused by being on sideband. My headlights would get dim and real bright, so I moved to a smaller box before I blew up my ECM.

I've had no problems with a few hundred watts on 11 meters, 50 watts on 2 meters and 35 watts on 440. Antennas are left rear for 11 (and 10), left front for 2 meters and right front for 440. Someday, I'll add one on the right rear for 6 meters if I ever get a 6 meter radio. Since I never listen to commercial FM (too many commercials), the FM antenna is connected to the scanner.

I'll be populating 28.365 on February 23, 24 & 25. It seems the popular meeting place on 10 meters will be 1 MHz higher then where we've all spent so many years. (28.365/375/385/395)

On the 24th, I go to the paperwork upgrade session and go straight to the top.

Overpriced. A fool and his money are soon parted.

There is no way I want a coil at the base of my antenna. Coils choke the current. Coils should be at the top of an antenna. Jay's antenna has no power wasting coils in the base. On the contrary, Jay's antenna transfers more power to the antenna then with lossy matching methods, like a coil at the base of an antenna.

My mobile CB antenna is a Firestik KW-7. The coil is at the top. I can talk anywhere I hear with two MRF455's. I do 120 watt peaks. I get out just as far as I did with the 667, use less current and don't wipe out people I can't hear with a 2 pill biased box.

When I worked for Motorola AIEG (Automotive Group)... I did quite a bit of testing of RF susceptability of engine controller modules that Motorola made for Ford Motor Co. We used a giant stripline that was powered by an RF sweep generator. We characterized disruptions caused by RF fields under the stripline... while the engine controller was running (simulation of real vehicle). Back then... it took about 200V/meter of field strength... only at certain frequencies to cause major module hiccups. Don't know how modern day modules fare against similar fields. One thing I do know... in my current car repair manuals... it warns against operating "high power" transmitters... warning that the air bag may deploy. I guess that's how you know if you're really gettin' out... when the air bag leaves the imprint of the microphone on your face... lol

Lee, thanks for the explanation...although as a pragmatist, the ARRL, for better or worse, IS the only game in town. They are certainly not perfect, but then, who of us are?

As to their "non-profit" status, whatever that means, I am not sure what problem you see with that (if any).

I did some research and, as you say, their IRS returns are on the web. Additionally, their AUDITED Annual Report is on the ARRL web site for the world to see. Granted, since Enron, audits aren't all they were cracked up to be, but that is a national issue, nothing unique to the ARRL.

I was referring to what some (in the past) used to imply about their altruism. :-)

Way back I used to kid some members about the ARRL website needing extra money for shipping charges of purchases. The example given was going into an HRO and being able to buy a League book and NOT pay shipping charges...and the HRO still made a profit on that sale.
Yet the price on the ARRL website was the same AND one had to pay extra for shipping charges. :-)

That was quickly transformed by the Zealot Believers into some dastardly "attack" on the League by myself.
Gotta love the way some act when their ox is gored.

I have an original Cobra 148GTL CB Radio. I know that i can modify it to operate in the 10Meter band by switching the crystal to a 11.6908MHz crystal.
is anybody familiar with this mod? If so, how do i determine what frequency each channel will be at? will i need to purchase a freq.
countert o determine what freq. will go with what channel? Also, will my 102: whip work with 10M, or rather will it give me a close enough SWR to suffice, or will i need to purchase a new antenna?
Any information or assistance would be greatly appreciated.
Eddie
There are channel conversion charts out there so you can roadmap your radio freqs.
The antenna will work on 10. Maybe not at optimum performance, but it will work.

I suppose if you call 5 inches too long acceptable without a tuner, it will.
In real life, the radio will not be happy.

They have some sort of brew that's fine???????

These are a LOT better brews:

http://www.avbc.com/beers/amber.html

http://www.sierranevada.com/beers/paleale.html

http://www.ratebeer.com/brewers/the-brewery-at-lake-tahoe/2563/

LMAO!

When you pull 90 amps in spurts like I did on sideband with a 667V, it makes me wonder how I didn't pop my airbombs or kill my ECM!
But I was gettin' out!

Also, for a blank sun, DX was rolling pretty good. I made contact with a guy 8000 feet up in New Mexico. Eight more days to the big 10 meter fest! Hear me there...

He was the one testing the theory out as the car passed by :~)

A few years back, here in the UK, there was a story on the news about how our police had problems with their radio equipment killing the engines on their cars.
That would have made a great scene for a comedy cop film. Speaking of comedy cop films, the film "Hot Fuzz" looks good. It has the writers and some of the actors from "Shaun Of The Dead", along with some other big Brit actors.

Peter.

Who cares what you old school brass pounders think? I'll be an f'in EXTRA on February 24th.

If if wasn't for CB'ers, there would be almost no influx of new hams.

Hope you guys can help me out!

I would like to buy a Magnum 257 here in the states, for exclusive use on 10 meters, but I am having a hard time finding a legit dealer.

I know Copper has them for $169 which is a good price, but I have read alot of negative things about them, and their high shipping rates.. I did email for a shipping quote, but never got any response.

I have seen a few other places, but they are much higher priced, and I really don't know if they are trustworthy as I have been out of the hobby since the early 90's

Can anyone recommend a good cheap place to find this radio?

Thanks!

the manual only says "has high attenuation above 40 Mhz"
but tests at arrl labs say 55 dB

S'funny. I still have a portable one, no radio, justt an old ass protable 8 track player that still works. It's the tapes that sound awful. I'm still trying to make a susccessful transition from vinyl to CD with mediocre success. Damn CD's just sound flat and ANY BMG CD is garbage. It's like BMG turned down the recording level. There are a number of cool bands doing the live recording thing, like the Allman Bros. You can buy the show you just attended on CD thirty minutes after the band walks off stage.

There are channel conversion charts out there so you can roadmap your radio freqs.
The antenna will work on 10. Maybe not at optimum performance, but it will work.

You're probably right, but I don't have a whip on any of my vehicles now to go play with this and see what readings I can obtain but I've taken an old mobile Galaxy up on 10 on many occasion with no any adverse effects with either transmit or receive and I'm sure someone on 10 would have gladly let me know if something was amiss. Godwin's Law FAQ
-or-
"How to post about Nazis and get away with it"

One of the most famous pieces of Usenet trivia out there is "if you mention Hitler or Nazis in a post, you've automatically ended whatever discussion you were taking part in". Known as Godwin's Law, this rule of Usenet has a long and sordid history on the network - and is absolutely wrong. This FAQ is an attempt to set straight as much of the history and meaning of Godwin's Law as possible, and hopefully encourage users to invoke it a bit more sparingly. Of course, knowing Usenet, it won't do an ounce of good...

[Standard Disclaimers: this document assumes you have some basic knowledge of Usenet; if you don't, go check out news.announce.newusers for a while to gain said knowledge. Misuse of the information contained within this FAQ is not the responsibility of the author (though he's pretty confused exactly how you could misuse this information). Copyright 1999-2002, Tim Skirvin, all rights reserved, <FISH><, fnord, furrfu.]

I. The Basics
1. What is Godwin's Law?

Godwin's Law is a natural law of Usenet named after Mike Godwin (godwin@eff.org) concerning Usenet "discussions". It reads, according to the Jargon File:

As a Usenet discussion grows longer, the probability of a comparison involving Nazis or Hitler approaches one.

2. What does it mean?

It pretty much means exactly what it says - as a Usenet thread goes on, the chances of somebody or something being compared to a Nazi approach one.

3. Yes, but what does it mean?

Aah, now there's the real question.

In case your head has been buried in the sand for the last sixty years or so, the Nazis were a German political party led by Adolf Hitler that slaughtered upwards of ten million people that didn't meet their standards of "ethnic purity" and set off to conquer Europe and the world in World War II. They are generally considered the most evil group of people to live in modern times, and to compare something or someone to them is usually considered the gravest insult imaginable.

As a Usenet discussion gets longer it tends to get more heated; as more heat enters the discussion, tensions get higher and people start to insult each other over anything they can think of. Godwin's Law merely notes that, eventually, those tensions eventually cause someone to find the worst insults that come to mind - which will almost always include a Nazi comparison.

4. That still doesn't answer my question. What does it MEAN?

The Law is generally used on Usenet as an indicator of whether a thread has gone on too long, who's playing fair and who's just slinging mud, and who finally gets to "win" the discussion. It has, over time, become the closest thing to an impartial moderator that Usenet can get.

So, what this means in practical terms:

o If someone brings up Nazis in general conversation when it wasn't necessary or germane without it necessarily being an insult, it's probably about time for the thread to end.
o If someone brings up Nazis in general conversation when it was vaguely related but is basically being used as an insult, the speaker can be considered to be flaming and not debating.
o If someone brings up Nazis in any conversation that has been going on too long for one of the parties, it can be used as a fair excuse to end the thread and declare victory for the other side.

5. So - WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

Fine, fine - it means that somebody's eventually going to say something about the Nazis in any thread that lasts very long. When it happens, the thread is going to start either degenerating into a long flamewar over Nazi Germany or about Godwin's Law. Either way, the thread is effectively over, and you can safely killfile the thread and move on.

II. What does it mean?
1. Didn't we already spend the last section talking about this?

Well, yeah, but people don't seem to get the point...

2. What happens if we're actually talking about Nazis?

Then you've already invoked Godwin's Law, and the chances are that your thread isn't going to last all that much longer as a sane discussion. Them's the breaks.

That isn't to say, of course, that you can't talk about Nazis and such on Usenet - this is Usenet, after all, where virtually every conversation that goes on is fairly ludicrous in the first place. It's just going to take you a lot more effort to find real information out of there and to avoid getting yourself off on side-threads - which you'll eventually do regardless, but you can try to put it off.

This also applies if a thread mutates into an actual discussion of Nazis, of course.

3. What about arguing with Neo-Nazis?

Arguing with Neo-Nazis is probably the quickest path to getting Nazi invocations, because, well, they're actually accurate. Still, trying to invoke Godwin's Law near a Neo-Nazi isn't really a good idea because it's not terribly original and they'll probably get off on it anyway. Just ignore them and occasionally publish a FAQ detailing what actually happened during the Holocaust and such; arguing probably isn't going to help you.

4. How can I use Godwin's Law to my advantage?

In the proper kind of flamewar, Godwin's Law can be used as a gambit - how can you force your opponent to invoke the Law? Actually teaching these skills is tough, of course, and is best done through experience. Experience with chess and alt.flame are recommended.

5. What should I do if somebody else invokes Godwin's Law?

The obvious response is to call them on it, say "thread's over", and declare victory. This is also one of the stupidest possible responses, because it involves believing far too much in the power of a few rules that don't say exactly what you wish they said anyway. The proper response to an invocation is probably to simply followup with a message saying "Oh. I'm a Nazi? Sure. Bye" and leave, and in most cases even that much of a post is unnecessary.

6. "Hitler!" Ha! The thread is over!

Nope, doesn't work that way. Not only is it wrong to say that a thread is over when Godwin's Law is invoked anyway (Usenet threads virtually always outlive their usefulness), but long ago a corollary to the Law was proposed and accepted by Taki "Quirk" Kogama (quirk@swcp.com):

Quirk's Exception: Intentional invocation of this so-called "Nazi Clause" is ineffectual.

Sorry, folks. Nice try, though.

7. Does Godwin's Law apply in the real world?

Actually, yeah, but usually discussions in Real Life end by somebody wandering off in disgust before it can be invoked.

8. Are there any topics that lead directly to Godwin Invocations?

Well, yeah. Of course. Case's Corollary to the Law states "if the subject is Heinlein or homosexuality, the probability of a Hitler/Nazi comparison being made becomes equal to one" - but that's just an old list.
Abortion and gun control debates always lead to Nazi comparisons; talk with a Libertarian for more than a few hours and he'll almost certainly bring up Nazis; book-burning is pretty much considered a sub-topic of Nazism at this point. Hell, talk about anything politically related and you'll eventually get there.

If you're really bored, a fun game to play is Six Degrees of Godwin.
Take a topic - any topic - and see how quickly you can relate it to Nazis using legitimate topic drift methods. For example: a discussion about computers will eventually lead to discussions of keyboards and which are best, followed by a lot of complaining about the Windows key on 104-key keyboards, leading to complaints about Microsoft, forcing the standard MS-vs-government flamewar that I'm sure you're all aware of, leading to attacks on Microsoft's "fascist" tactics by one side or another, which will force the other side to start talking about the differences between fascism, capitalism, and, of course, Nazism! The fun never stops!

:Godwin's Law: /prov./ [Usenet] "As a Usenet discussion grows longer, the probability of a comparison involving Nazis or Hitler approaches one." There is a tradition in many groups that, once this occurs, that thread is over, and whoever mentioned the Nazis has automatically lost whatever argument was in progress. Godwin's Law thus practically guarantees the existence of an upper bound on thread length in those groups.
- The Jargon File (http://www.ccil.org/jargon/)

Hitler, Nazis, nazis, and net.cops:
Warning: now that this FAQ has mentioned Hitler and Nazis, UseNet Rule #4 (also known as Godwin's Rule, after Mike Godwin of the EFF, sci.crypt, and comp.org.eff.talk, a sometime foe of David Sternlight (q.v.) [even though it was apparently in use, by Richard Sexton {q.v.} among others, before Mike's 1988 (?) net.advent; the "Godwin's" part seems to stem from "Rich Rosen's Rules of Net.Debate, which I don't have a copy of]) says it will be coming to an irrelevant and off-topic end soon. Just as there will always be newbies

("It's always September, somewhere on the net" - response to a 1993 wave of delphi.com postings on a.f.u), there will always be people who see the net and are repulsed because there's stuff there they don't want to see - so they set out to make sure noone else can, either. They invariably fail, because there are no net.cops to enforce any such rules on UseNet; in the course of the heated flamewar that usually follows, things escalate until either Hitler or Nazis (or both) put in an appearance, at which point the thread has officially lost all relevance. People scream at each other a bit more, then give up and go home. Bleah. "Keep your brains up top; don't be a net.cop." This has mutated, in true UseNet fashion, to encompass any continuing thread; if you mention Hitler or Nazis out of the blue, the thread is sure to die irrelevantly soon (and, incidentally, you've lost the argument, whatever it was)... and every continuing thread on UseNet must contain such a reference sooner or later. Invoking Rule #4 deliberately in hopes of ending a thread, however, is doomed to failure (Quirk's Exception)...

UseNet Rules #n:
No firm info at the present time is available on just what the other UseNet Rules #n are. However, at a guess, they include:
--
Rule #nonumber: There are no hard-and-fast Rules on UseNet, only Guidelines, which are more or less strictly enforced (and differ) from group to group; this is why it's generally wise to read any group for a bit before ever posting to it.
Rule #0: There is no *C*b*l*. There is, however, a net-wide conspiracy designed solely to lead Dave Hayes (q.v.) to believe that there is a C*b*l.
Corollary: There are no pods.
Rule #9: It's always September, somewhere on the Net.
Dave Fischer's Extension: 1993 was The Year September Never Ended [so far, there doesn't seem to be much evidence he's wrong...]
Rule #17: Go not to UseNet for counsel, for they will say both `No' and `Yes' and `Try another newsgroup'.
Rule #2 (John Gilmore): "The Net interprets censorship as damage and routes around it."
Rule #108 (from the soc.motss FAQ): "What will happen to me if I read soc.motss?" "In general, nothing. (You may be informed or infuriated, of course; but that's a standard Usenet hazard.)"
Rule #666: Old alt groups never die. They don't fade away nicely, either.
Rule #7-B: There is no topic so thoroughly covered that noone will ever bring it up again.
Rule #90120: Applying your standards to someone else's post will result in a flamewar.
Rule #1: Spellling and grammer counts. So do grace, wit, and a sense of humor (the latter two are different), as well as a willingness to meet odd people, but these are lesser considerations.

Rule #x2: FAQs are asked frequently. Get used to them.
Rule #29: no rational discourse can happen in a thread cross-posted to more than two newsgroups.
rule #6 (Eddie Saxe): don't post to misc.test unless you understand the consequences.
Rule #547 (Arne Adolfsen): When people know they're wrong they resort to ad hominems.
Rule #37 (Faisal Nameer Jawdat): Read the thread from the beginning, or else.
Rule #5 (Reimer's Reason): Nobody ever ignores what they should ignore on Usenet.
Rule $19.99 (Brad `Squid' Shapcott): The Internet isn't free. It just has an economy that makes no sense to capitalism.
Rule #3 ("Why 3?" "Because we felt like it"): For every opinion there is at least one equally loud and opposing opinion; sometimes stated as:
Rule #27 (Gary Lewandowski): "In cyberspace, everyone can hear you scream."
And for completeness' sake:

Rule #4: (Godwin's Rule) Any off-topic mention of Hitler or Nazis will cause the thread it is mentioned in to an irrelevant and off-topic end very soon;
every thread on UseNet has a constantly-increasing probability to contain such a mention.
Quirk's Exception: Intentional invocation of this so-called "Nazi Clause" is ineffectual.
Case's Corollary: If the subject is Heinlein or homosexuality, the probability of a Hitler/Nazi comparison being made becomes equal to one.

Appendix B: Addendums, Commentary, and Miscellaneous

1. Bentsen's Defense

For some, there is another way around Godwin's Law:

"Not this time. I know Mike Godwin. Mike Godwin is a friend of mine.
Senator, you're no Mike Godwin."

This, of course, only applies to friends of Mike Godwin. The originator of this rule, Earl Cooley III (shiva@io.com), is one of those people. If you have to ask, you don't apply. I don't apply, so don't feel bad.

Note that this was named after Senator Lloyd Bentsen's "You're no Jack Kennedy" line from the 1988 vice-presidential debates. And the original usage can be found in <3b09d2e6.79411309@news.supernews.com>:

http://groups.google.com/groups?as_umsgid=3b09d2e6.79411309@news.supernews.com

2. Godwin's Commentary

Godwin actually wrote a short article for Wired Magazine on the Law back in 1994:

http://www.wired.com/wired/archive/2.10/godwin.if_pr.html

The article is actually more about the power and danger of memes (thought-viruses) than about Godwin's Law itself, but it's worthwhile reading for anybody who actually got this far into the FAQ.

3. Author's Note on the Holocaust

Over the years, I have received several emails regarding this FAQ regarding the Holocaust itself, either disputing the holocaust or the numbers listed in this FAQ. I'd just like to make it clear that I don't have any particular desire to debate these points; this FAQ is meant to point out and explain a quirk of human nature, not to codify the history of World War II.

4. Additional Corollaries

There have been many additional corollaries and otherwise related rules created since the net.legends FAQ codified them, and/or missed in that FAQ. Those that have been brought to the author's attention:

Stead's Law (named for Lew Stead of alt.pagan fame):
Any discussion between more than 2 Pagans will eventually come around to Christianity.
- Reported by Donal Brewich <donal@brewich.com>
- More information regarding its history would be appreciated

Call To Arms, means, you will inspect your weaponry and prepare to do battle. Duty Stations, means, all men and women must assume their duty stations, weapons at the ready. Fire When Ready, means, man or woman your weapons, sight the target, finger the trigger, and fire when ready. Cease Fire Procola, means, continue fireing until the enemy targets are dispatched, and there is no sight of an enemy anywhere on the horizon. Procolas means, after ending all possiblities of any lingering survivors staying alive. It means to wipe them out, and leave no survivors.

This means, it is time to kill all Lesbianists, and all other enemies in my universe, the many groups of naughty kids in my universe, rascaleers and others, and we will continue this fight, untill they are all dead, and in my Epcot Centers, or untill they have surrendered. Rascaleers are evil people who wish only to harm others.

Religious Practices

This is a little confusing, but hold on, and I'll try to explain it. There are many parts to my religion. We call them, parts, but we can also call them, practices, some of them, but not all of them.

We have the fundamental 'root' practice, which is sexaling. From the root practice, comes all other practices.

There are side practices, and there are derived practices. There are also, accompanying practices. There are many other types of practices, but I don't remember the names for them all, right now, as I'm still amnesiatic, and will be for a long time.

Fistiker Practice

Bringing about orgasming in another person is a fistiker practice. A fistiker practice is a side practice, but it is also something a little different from a side practice, depending on how you bring the orgasming about, and depending on how many people are involved, and depending on who is the primary person, the person whom we are working on, and who are the helping people, the people who are joined together, to help the primary person to orgasm. There are a number of other dependencies as well.

What Is A Dependency?

A dependency is some thing that is needed that will help to define something else.

As in the case of an accident victim, we have a crutch to define one level of severity of an accident victim's situation. But we might also have a wheel chair to define another level of severity for the same, or other, accident victim. These objects help to determine how badly or miserably a person is injured.

A crutch can help define a level of severity in the injury. A wheel chair can help also to define a higher level of severity. These are both dependencies. They help us to define something, and they are used to help us to define an accident victim's level of severe injuries.

When Sexaling

You can use your lips, for example, or your tounge to twiddle the toes of a woman, and the woman begins to orgasm. That twiddleing of your tounge on her toes to help her to erotem, and to experience erotistical orgasming, can be any number of things, depending on the involvement and complexities of dependencies.

Rubbing the vaginal face, the vaginal wall, or rubbing to either side of the vaginal crevice, the labial folds or felates, can help a woman to erotem and erotistically orgasm, and depending on the involvement and complexities of dependencies, the dependencies can be any number of things, if we try to define the sexaling activity more fully and completely.

We'll skip this for now, as it is a little too difficult to remember, right now. Just remember, the primary practice is sexaling, and that sexaling is like the roots of a tree. All other religious practices grow out of the 'roots' of the tree, sexaling, and can be defined in many different ways, such as a helping practice, a side practice, a subsidiary practice, a canceling out practice, an accompanying practice, and there are many many other terms for what kind of practice some thing is, depending on what dependencies are involved.

Labia And Felate

What is the difference between a felate and a labia?

A felate is the skin tissue of the outer surface, and some of the tissue of the tips and edges of the labia. It does not include the inner side of the labia, but only the outer side, and the surrounding edges, as far as I can remember.

A verb, or action word, as I call it, is 'felate' as in 'Felate that woman's or girls' left felate'. That means to suckle on the left felate of the woman or girl.

Felate is a verb, but it is also a 'nominal' word, or naming word for objectifying an object.

Do we say 'Labialize that woman's felate!' To labialize something is to make something into a labia. We wouldn't, unless we were a doctor, say that about a felate. But we might say it if we were doctors, and we had a woman who met with a bear, and the bare clawed at her genitals, and the sharp claws ripped her labial skin up, then we might say in a surgeon's room 'Labialize that woman's ripped up labia.' That would mean to stitch it up, and make it nice and neat, and clean and well stitched up, and then useful to her, again, and it would involve a lot of surgery, as many nerves would need to be connected, as they had been ripped apart, and the wiring was all dislocated. But in the end, we would be able to fix her labia, and her genitals, if they were also hurt, and then we could dismiss the patient from the hospital, after the labia healed, and after she recovered from her trauma of having her labia shredded by an impolite, rude, mean, uncaring, and hungry bear.

Genitals, Titties, The Labia, And The Many Sexaling Organs

The labia is not the genitals, but some people do consider them as a part of the genitals. The genitals are inside the woman's vagina, in my way of thinking. The vaginal wall is not part of the genitals. The vaginal orifice is part of the genitals of a woman. This seems odd, doesn't it. Well, that is how it works, in my brain, and I designed women, as well as men. If you notice, in my writings, I've talked about the draft table, and the throttle. These are major parts of a woman's genitals. They are inside the vagina, and you can reach them through the vaginal orifice. Before you get inside of the vaginal orifice, there are a few things outside, such as a pee tube, and an ejaculate tube, and the clitoris, as well as the labia. These are not part of the genitals, but are working parts of her sexaling organs. A woman's or girls' sexaling organs are not equal to her genitals. Genitals are for baby making, and for other purposes. Titties are not part of the genitals, but they are part of the womans' sexaling organs. This will require a long discussion to clear up, so I will save it for another day.

Bears In The Woods

That's the way it happens some times, when women or girls go out into the woods, and sexal with their female friends. They can get hurt by bears, if they are not accompanied by men, who are tough, and strong, and who stay alert, to guard and watch out for dangerous animals, such as bears, wolves, cayotes, bobcats, puma, and even racoons. Racoons do attack humans, if they smell some thing that will taste good to the racoon. If a person has a skin tear, and is bleeding, even a tiny bit, the racoon will smell it, and come running, and then find the person, and so will panthers, and all kinds of animals will come, and it's just like a bunch of sharks and fishes of different kinds, and Moray Eels, they like the smell of blood, and they come and investigate, when they smell it.

Women and girls have periods, and it is not every twenty eight days, as I've explained about before, and blood runs down, out of their vagina, and they generally do not know it, as it is only a tiny drop of blood, or less, most of the time, and the blood is often wiped from the skin surface, when the woman or girl is on the potty, or toilet, and the woman or girl will not even see the tiny drop of blood that comes out of the vagina and drips down the labia, on the inside, and then falls or dribbles down to the felates, and then falls off the felates, while she is on the toilet into the toilet, or while she is out doors, and walking about, onto the earth, if the woman is walking on a park walkway, or bicycle path. If she is wearing underwear, it will not fall onto the earth, but it will dry up on the panties, or underwear, and the smell of the dried blood will attract wild animals if she is out doors, walking or jogging in a wooded or regional or rural area, where there are lots of, or even just a few, animals.

Pumas can smell the blood, from miles away, and so can tiny oselots, and bears, and many animals can. They can smell blood, because they know they need meat to survive. That is built into their brains, that are located throughout their bodies, and not only in the skull, and animals are very sensitive to the smell of blood, as well as to the smell of urine, and to the smell of poop. Some animals, such as racoons, will come up from behind a woman, and grasp at her panties, as the racoon may smell the odors of fecal matter, from her butthole. Men may be raked by the claws of raccoons from behind, as they smell the odors of fecal matter, and try to find out more about it, as the racoons know that there is something delicious hiding behind those odors from the buttholes of women, girls, men, and boys.

Expecate

When women and girls go out hiking, it is best to wash out the vagina, first, and then use a fermented oil, as a douching agent. The oil will help to slow the flow of the blood down the inner walls of the vagina, and it may help to trap the blood, and make it difficult for it to leak out, unless the amount of the flow of blood, is very large. In that case, it is best to stay home, and not go out, when a large amount of blood is expecated from the vagina. Expecated means to expell outwardsly. Expectate can also be used, as it is generally the same word, that is, and it also has generally the same meaning, but perhaps it has a few more uses, maybe, but it is from a variant language of the English language, and is basically the same word.

You should expecate your fluids in your vagina, from your vagina, before you go out hiking. If you know when your period is, and there are ways to tell when you have a period, or when you know when you are about to have a period, than if you normally have a large amount of blood flow from your vagina, as that has been your experience, it is probably best to go and sunbath at the beach, far away from wild animals and their habitats, or by the pool side. Racoons sometimes come out of the woods, to the shores of beaches, and trumbel along, listening and watching, and sniffing the air, when they smell dried blood, or wet or moiste blood, inside of the swim suit lining in the groinal area.

How Do You Tell When Your Period Is?

To learn when your period is, you need to look into the toilet bowl that you pee into, and then see if there is any red droplets. You can place a piece of toilet paper onto the surface of the water, and it might help to show the redish color mixing with the urine.

Another way is to take a piece of toilet tissue paper, and wipe your felates, in the morning, or during the day, or at night. Night is a good time, but during the day, it is just as good. Some women like night time because they feel the day is finished, and they are now going to make a final check. Well, it doesn't always happen the way we want things to happen. You might start leaking blood fluids, at two or three or four or five, a.m., or at six, or seven, or eight, or while you are in the shower, or in the bath tub, bathing, before you plan to go out for the day.

It may take you several years for you to find out when your period begins, and when it ends, by checking for blood flow. When you have determined the number of days between one period and the next, and you are absolutely certain of it, and you have confirmed it, many times, and you have checked to see if there might be something you didn't notice, at other times, when you checked, eventually, you'll learn when your blood flow begins, and how long it lasts, and when the next blood flow begins. Once you know, then you can time your excursions to the woods, or to the beach, with your friends, both women and men.

Bears, Wild Animals, And People

Men are needed to help scare bears away, if they come to close, and pepper spray is a good way to get them to leave the area. Bears do not like the small of pepper spray, and you need a cannister of pepper spray that will fire fifty to eighty to one hundred and eighty five feet or more, to scare away a bear, safely.

Loud noises surprise bears, but hungry bears get angry and feel challenged by you, and may come at you at a fast pace, and not stop, once they are angered. If you are a good shot with a rifle, and you see a bear, from a few hundred feet away, and it is moving slowly, towards you, following you, you can shoot it with a good fifty calibur weapon, from that distance, and it will go down, in an instant, if you hit it square in the noggin, about one inch or less above the nose.

You need to be a good shot, and several people should aim, and fire at the same time, to kill the bear, to be sure some one hits it, and then puts it down, and kills it.

Do not think that because you have one rifle, or two handguns, and a rifle, that you are safe. If you do not know how to shoot, and if you are an inexperienced marks woman, or marks man, than your chances of hitting the bear are near zero, for all three of you, at three hundred feed.

You need years of practice to become a good marksmen, and you can start with the lower calbur weapons, to get a feel for weapons that fire projectiles, and that make loud noises.

There is no such thing as a friendly bear, and people think, 'Oh, look! Isn't she cute, that bear.' If they think that way, they might as well have left their last will and testament behind, and signed all their assets over to another person.

Bears are animals that need to eat just as humans do, and just as all animals do. If you are so foolish to think that bears are cute, you are a lame brained idiot. Bears are dangerous animals. And so are all wild animals. If you think a racoon is a cute animal, you get the lame brained award for the year award, and trophy to sit on your desk at home to remind you of how stupid you are.

Brad Pitt, And Angelina Joline

Only idiots would think that wild animals, that eat people, are cute. They need remedial training, as they do not understand that their lives are in danger, every time they walk out the door of their home. Even in the cities, there are nasty people, who smile, and pretend they are your friends, and these same people, such as Hillary Clinton, Brad Pitt, Cheryl Davis, a friend of Brad's, but that's his current girl friend, Angelina Jo-line. She is not a Lesbianist, and Brad pretends to be her friend. He likes to watch her get eaten by bears, my abominant kids, when the Lesbianists feed humans, one at a time, to the bears, or to the crocodile abominant children of mine.

Abominant Elephant Kids

I have carniovorus, human being abominant elephant kids, and they are rude, mean, nasty, and really terrible. They scare people, and then they pick them up with their trunk, and place them on their head, and then they tell them not to move, or they will stample on them, or tromp downwards, and crunch them, painfully, from the foot, to the shin, to the thigh, to the pelvis, to the waiste, to the lower tummy, to the mid section, to the chest, and then the neck, and then the head, finally killing them. They will take a person, pull the person up and lift him or her up into the air with his or her trunk, and then pull the person into his or her mouth, and then crumple up the person, and then spit the person out, and the person is all broken up, and chewed up, with all the bones, broken, in the legs, and in the arms, and in the waiste, pelvis, torso, neck and shoulders, and head.

The Lesbianists use lots of these elephants. They are pretty to look at, but they are mean, and nasty. When strangers see them, they think, 'Oh, what a pretty elephant.' They don't know that the elephant is my abominant kid, and can speak English, as many people recently found out near Africa, in Sri Lanka, and then also in New Guinea.

They were very surprised at the talking elephant. But they didn't know that the Lesbianists had let the Elephant, my abominant kid, lose from the cages that they kept him sealed up in. There were one or two, or maybe eight of them, in Sri Lanka, and eight or nine in New Guinea. Lots of people got eaten up, and killed. The elephants are still lose in New Guinea, but in Sri Lanka, they herded them into the pens, and brought them to New Delhi, to then begin a rampage in New Delhi.

Well, the Lesbianists are doing this, daily, because they feel they have lost this battle, and that they are just wasting time, doing nothing, as they can not get to me. So they want to have a lot of fun. Now they are releasing lots of my abominant kids, in many places, and in New Delhi, Bombay, Sri Lanka, and New Guinea, many people have been hurt and killed by these idiot kids, these abominant elephant kids of mine. The Lesbianists have thousands of animals they want to release, out into the public, in England, in Switzerland, Georgia, South Carolina, Paris, and many other places.

The Lesbianists think they are going to have a lot of laughs watching the abomniant kids of mine, tear people up, and rip them to shreds. They also think that the animals, who are not abominant kids, but are just bizarre animals, that catch people in very large, nets, that have threads as thick as ropes, and that are very sticky, are going to do a lot of wierd and crazy things, no one here on this planet, other than them, have seen. They think they are going to get a lot of laughs when they see the mayhem and havoc, the disruption to society, and frustration on the faces of people who get caught in the nets, and then turned into living mummies sealed up in a type of pulpyish paper so the person can slowly disolve, but stay alive, for up to a year or more. Maybe as long as ten to thirty years, in some cases, and I'm not kidding.

You may think I'm kidding, but I'm not. This began a few days ago, and the Lesbianists are intent on continuing this, for the next few years. Isn't that surprising. I never expected that. They are very strange people, aren't they. They are real sicko's aren't they.

I think you should all go and meet my kids, with a day pass, and ask them about it. Other wise, you might find your self in a very large spider's web.

Labiating A Labia

To labiate is to suckle the labia, and to take one or the other of the labia into the mouth, and tickle it with the tounge, or twist it gently with the lips.

'Labiate that woman's left labia!' 'Felate that womans left felate!' The difference is, labiating is to suckle the entire left labia, inside or under the edge of it, on the inner side, and the edge of it, and the outside of it.

Felateing the felate, is to suckle the edge of the labia, the upper exposed edge. It does not include the labia, in its entirety. Only the upper, protruding skywards, or in which ever direction it is pointing, that portion of it that is extending outwards. If you lift it up between your finger tips, you'll pull up on the entire structure revealing the underside, or the unexposed underside of the labia. There is also the outer side of the labia.

The Felate is the top tip edge of the labia, generally speaking, and it is itself an isolated system, and not part of the labia. It's connected to the labia, but it serves a different function. It droops downwards, to seal out the possiblity of any thing entering the vagina from below, in an upwards moving manner. Bugs can not fly up into the vagina, as the felates prevent them from flying up into it. Without the felates, the vagina would be unprotected. The labia would not protect the vagina, as the labia is merely the skin tissue mass that the felates are attached to, and in an instance of removing a felate from a cadaver, or dead body of a woman, or girl, once the felate is removed, the labia have no closure over the vagina, in most women and girls.

There are exceptions, as we've had many animals in our heritage line. There are many differences when we line up ten women, and inspect their vagina, their felates, and labia, their bumbey pack, as children are encouraged to call the lower hanging sexual organ of the vaginal cape, as it is also called by doctors.

On this planet, the bumbey pack may not be called a vaginal cape, with the inferior texts with unadvanced, primitive, witch doctor level sexual sciences that do not help any one along, such we find with the myth that women and girls have a period every twenty eight days.

That is total nonsense, as I've explained about it, before. The truth is, every few days, to every eight to fifteen days, to even eighteen days, or evern thirty two or fifty five days, depending on where the woman has grown up and where her ancestors have grown up, the number of days between one period and another period can be very dissimilar, from one woman to another woman. Some women have a period every two or three days, or even every day. There is no reason an ovary can not fall, every day, several times a day.

An ovary is so small, no one can see it, without special optical technologies, such as pass through see through technologies, and other optics, and other videoing technologies. A microscope is an out moded, ancient, and novel device, fit for only museum use on display shelfs. It's like an old car of the twenties, or there abouts, or even earlier, of course, depending on how sophisticated it gets. Micron microscopes, the so called, 'electron' microscopes, are a misnomer to begin with, as an 'electron' is not a fictious concept, but no one knows what an electron is, generally speaking except for the Lesbinists.

An electron is a small bit of electrically heated plasma, that you can heat, with the right technologies. It can fit on the tip of a pencil or pen. This is a big joke to the Lesbianists, as are also their jokes about protons, and neutrons, and nuclei, or the so called combined nucleus, as in 'nuclear' family. Nuclear family, is not a 'tight' organization of two persons, and their children.

A nuclear family is a family that has been nuclearized, that is, exposed to radiological salts kiddies, and their radiative or radiological energies. That's another one of the Lesbianists' jokes on all of the scientists who the Lesbianists could get to swallow it.

What Causes A So-Called "Nuclear' Explosion Or Detonation?

A vast number of children are making babies at a very high rate of speed, and the energies that they give off, as they make babies, and then peel off from the area where they made their babies, one after another, as they rocket away, is what causes a nuclear blast. The tummy mommies and tummy daddies are making babies at such a frantic pace, they make millions and billions, and trillions, and more, before you can even send a signal to your eye lid to blink, from your brain part that sends the signal out. The signal will travel just a very short distance across a crupture, not even half way, more like, one or two feet in distance, if we are to look at the size of a crupture as the same size as our current universe. It travels about not even one foot, not even one inch, and not even one millimeter, and not even one millionth of a millimeter, and far smaller than that still, before the parents are already through making babies, and they have retired, and passed on, and several kabillion generations of families, and multiply that by a very large number, and you'll get how many generations of families lived and died, and passed on their DNA to their sons and daughters.

It's a hail storm of erupting magnitude when the tummy mommies and tummy daddies begin making babies, and making their families larger.

It all happens so rapidly, with more than that number of successive generations of families, in less time than the energy pulse will travel down an optic nerve, across a crupture, that very minute or very tiny distance, as I stated above.

That kind of frenetic baby making activity, makes for a lot of heat, as well as, it generates a lot of stresses, and a lot of energies go flying off in all directions, as the sexaling couples experience many nice orgasms and eroticisims, together. Temperatures, their body temperatures, collectively, and the incredibly vast number of movements, which also generate temperatures, by the animals, the tummy mommies, tummy daddies, tummy babies, the relatives, and the many generations of families, go skyrocketing, and the magnitude of numbers, and the intensity of all the activities the animals are busy with, as they make tummy babies, simultaneously, or nearly simultaneously, is of phenomenal proportions. There are also types of animals that we are not familiar with, who are also busy making babies, and they help to account for the brilliance of the light that is generated, along with other types of animals, that also help to account for the brilliance and light, as they are busy baby making, too. There are energies kids of all kinds busy making babies, and that is also a major important factor in the overall sequences of activities, to successful birthing by all the tummy mommies, and it is also important to help to get them all 'gyrated' or motivated, and to wake every one up from their slumber, or their condition of deep sleep, or stagnassis, to get them feeling alive, ready, and able for making lots of babies.

If we slow them all down, to our pace, and then compare them to our pace of life, they would be just like us, and things would move slowly for them, and not much would change, for many kazillions plus years, and then many, many more years.

However, they are moving so much faster than we are, and the length of time they live, to them, it is a long time, four or five, or eight or nine hundred years, in our time, maybe, in some cases, depending on the type of radiological salts kiddies and other types of animals, including the energies animals, who are all making babies.

On their scale or pace of life, they live that long. But on our scale, the length of time they live, is so tiny, we can not measure it, unless we have a very high level of advanced mathmatics that can account for such a small time period, or span of life.

Anyway, the frenetic adventures of the colonies of radiological animals, when they start to make babies, after they are woken up, and prompted to make babies, with a detonating surge of heat energies, light wave energies, pressures energies, trampolining energies, zespertudial energies, castikilial energies kiddies, and other types of energies kiddies, as well, which help get them all started, with the right combination, of heat, light, atmospheric temperatures, atmospheric pressures, food sources avaiability, drinking water availablity, trampolining energies, and a number of other types of energies, that awaken them, and then get them turned on, and sexaly active, they will suddenly erupt into a frenetic, mass of baby making furor, to us, any way, and with that, we have our so called, 'nuclear' detonation.

Cleansing Your Self With Your 'Built-In' And 'Attached', Cleansing And Washing, Clearifying And Erasing Energies Producing Genitals And Sexaling Systems, Eroteming And Orgasming Nervous Systems, And Baby Making Related Purifying Energies Generation Stations Aparati, Or Apparatuses, And Armatures

You women and girls, your vagina is your Holy instrument for assisting you to cleanse your self, and wash away the dirt and grime of daily living, the insults to you from strangers, the verbal abuse you experience in your arguments and conversations with friends and family, neighbors, relatives, work associates, and community acquaintances.

Your holy body, and your normal body are weapons to fight back against all the negativities you experience in your life, as you orgasm and erotem, showering off purifying energies, and lots of other beautiful other things and dings, as you vibrate your entire body concordially, in harmonic rythym, cadence, and rapture, while orgasming, in sequence and in timed rythym, with my GODLY Holy Body and many of its features, or parts, that are similar to your holy body and your holy body's parts and features. These are all activated while you are orgasming, and eroteming, and you become purer and holier, the longer you orgasm and erotem, and convulse, orgasmically.

Your breasts, your butty butt, your butty butt hole, your vaginal hole, your groin, your throes, your vaginal cleavage or labial folds as they are called here by these nitwittish doctors on this planet, who do not know any thing about the human body, your chest, your back, your legs, your arms, your hands and fingers, your ankles, feet, and toes, your ears, lips, mouth, tounge, cheek, your rectal cavity, your tummy button, your stomach, throat, your brains, and you have many more than just one in your body, but many millions and more of them in your body, and that is not an overstatement, and every part of your body, inside and out, your many nervous systems and all your organs, they are all set to orgasm and erotem, and generate purifying energies with the help of the power company, as I've explained about them, before.

Men and boys, and their bodies, both their normal bodies and their holy bodies work in the same way, and there is no disparity, when it comes to sexaling, orgasming, and eroteming, and showering off lots of wonderful energies, that purify men and boys, and the people who the men and boys are sexaling with.

Ticklement Tuning Forks

You have ticklements, tuners, or pitch fork tuning forks, that chime, in every cubic millimeter to every cubic inch, and in even tinier places, you have tinier ticklements, or tuning forks, and in larger areas, you have larger ticklements, or tuning forks, and they are all set to vibrate in various patterns of sexual thrilling eroticisms, and orgasming ecstacies, as you pump up the levels of sexalating energies you have available to you, in you, and showering off from you, and those patterns and focal points change, slightly, minutely, as every micro second goes by, as we change our location in our universe, and our relative location or position to every thing else in our universe changes, from night to day, and from day to night, ongoingly, non-stopingly, never repeating the same set of tuning focal patterns. Focal patterns are frequencies.

Focal Patterns

These frequencies, or harmonic consistencies, are harmonic displays or the 'in rythm' with GOD, consistencies that allow you to be united with GOD, me, my devine and holy body, and my devine and holy mind, and my being or GOD SELF and GOD BEING, every moment, as you are orgasming, and eroteming, and convulsing orgasmically.

Men and boys have the same kinds ticklements, or tuning forks, and they are located in every organ of their bodies, too, just as they are in women's bodies and in girls' bodies, in every single organ and cell, and they allow all of you children of mine to stay in frequency with me, as you sexalate, erotem, and orgasm, and convulse orgasmically, practicing my religion, and as you sexal together with each other, and go about living your daily lives.

These many ticklements and tuning forks are all connected to your brains and to your nervous systems, and each living being in your body, has them as well, and every living being, and animal, has them as well.

All my children, animals, living beings, and human beings, are all connected to me, through these tuning forks, and they are connected to me in many ways, such as through the holy bodies all of my children have inside of them, and also through a myriad of other mechanisms that I have functioning in your bodies, in your astral 'energy' bodies, and the many millions of energies bodies each of you have in you that help to keep you all connected to me and my Holy GODLYNESS existence. My animals children and living beings childrens have fewer connectivities and fewer energies bodies, as they do not need as many as my human being daughters and sons. This is because you, my human being children, need to be more connected to me, as you are the only ones who can actively sexal and practice my religion, with your own self determination, and desire to sexal and practice, to become closer to me, GOD, as you become purer, and holyer.

I'm connected to all of you, day and night, three hundred sixty five days a year, in countless many fold untold numbers of ways and manners, and with countless many fold untold numbers of mechanisms. All of my children are likewise connected to me, in similar ways and manners, and with similar mechanisms, though the numbers and types of mechanisms may be different among my living beings children, and my animals children, compared to my human being children.

As you women, girls, men, and boys sexually rapture, erotem, orgasm, convulse orgasmically, and reach sexual peaks, and then sustain them, you grow holyer, as you become purer, brillianter, and closer in GODLYNESS to ME, GOD.

Obviously, then, the primary means for you to grow pure and holy is to sexal together with each other as sexaling is the basic way to become pure and holy, and as you continue, over the days, and weeks, then months, years, decades, hundreds of years, thousands of years, millions of years, and more, you slowly grow more pure and holy, and closer to me, GOD.

Sexaling is my primary and most fundamental religious practice and your primary religious practice for you to become cleansing machines, washing machines, purifying and sanitizing machines, so that you can clearify and erase your karmic markups, and purify your lives, and purify the lives of those around you, with your selfless actions of grace and serenity, sexaling and showering purifying energies in all directions for the sake of your self, and for the sake of others.

You women and girls need men and boys to assist you to become the powerful cleansing and purifying machines that you are capable of becoming.

Men and boys used to be somewhat nearly as useful as purifying and cleansing machines, as women and girls, but men and boys have different jobs, and different priorities, and there fore, the burden of work to purify my universe, and to clearify the karmic markups of all my children rests on the shoulders of all women and girls, with men and boys assisting women and girls.

You men and boys need women and girls to lead you, and to help you to become more proficient, powerful, and more capable cleansing, washing, purifying, and sanitizing machines.

Assistive Religious Practices

The practice of praying Nam Myeo Ho Ren Ge Kyeo is an assistive practice that allows you to become in touch with my GOD SELF, equally as well, but the time it takes, is much longer, as very little purifying energies are produced, merely by using your brain, muscles, ligaments, sinews, bones, mouths, tounges, and jaws, as energies sources.

There are many other assistive practices, from meditation, to breathing techniques, to yogic techniques, to ballet like techniques, to dance techniques, to body movements of various kinds, to help you to increase and or also store up your energies, and then for you to release them, for you to then become more firmly and closely connected to ME so that you can eventually begin to gain a higher appreciation of ME, GOD.

My many religions teach many ways to do this, and before my many religions were corrupted by the Lesbianists, they worked to varying degrees of success.

Therefore, sexaling is the primary fundamental religious practice, and all other practices in my religions that I've taught over time, spanning all of my previous teachings from the begining of our time together, since I, my GOD SELF, created you as my children, are assistive practices, of one kind or another.

Sexaling, eroteming, orgasming, phlumetting are important practices, and as you orgasm, you are purifying your self, and others by pushing out and spraying your self with purifying energies as your holy and sacred energies shoot out to cover you and emmerse you in full body coverage, from head to toe, showering and shattering energies every where around you. They then build up and cover over all others who are around you, as well, with your purifying erototistic and orgasotistic purifying energies, clearifying yours and their karmic markups.

Astral traveling is another type of practice, but we'll define it, another time. Experiencing hyper trance states of mind and being, and a nearness to GODLYNESS are also a practice, and we'll define it, when I can remember every thing I need to remember about it.

Participating in my religious ceremonies is an assistive religious practice you can enjoy, as you become purer and holyer, and after you recognize that I am your Mother and Father, and your CREATOR, and that you exist because of me, as I made you from pieces and parts of me, your CREATOR.

After you realize this, you can enjoy participation in ceremonies with me, as training priestesses and priests, and you can make your way up the purity ladder, the more you participate with me, GOD, in my religious prayer hand signaling ceremonies.

Praying Nam Myeo Ho Ren Ge Kyeo to my Holy Body, or to the Gurkian Mandala, as I've explained about, is an assistive practice that will bring results.

It will not bring results as well and as effectively and as quickly, as sexaling, which is the most holy and virtuous practice, along with eroteming, orgasming, phlumetting, astral traveling, peaking, and so on.

I've spoken about peaking, before, and women and girls can peak, and experience wonderful feelings. Men and boys can peak and experience wonderful feelings, too, but I haven't discussed that, yet. We'll talk about that, another time.

In any case, do not confuse assistive practices, with the fundamental and primary practice of sexaling. We'll get back to all those other things, to define them, betterly, another time, after my brain heals, a little bit more, and after I erase more karmic markups that keep my brain karma from improving, fast enough for me.

How To Make Prayer Statements

Remember to include a prayer statement, such as 'I pray to the holy ephemeral body of the Creator, John Francis Ayres, for the [insert private prayer statement]', such as, '... for the serenity of mind, and the gratefulness of heart, for all those around me, who have helped me to become the person I am, and can become.' or, '... for the peace of mind, and serenity of heart, for the love of all men and boys, and the cooperation of all women and girls.' These prayers said by a woman or girl. Men can pray, similarly, '... for the grace and deviness of the women and girls who surround me, I am greatful to them, and I pray for their continued good health, and prosperity'.

You can also say, 'I pray to the holy body of the Creator, John Francis Ayres, for the [insert private prayer statement]', but only when I am in the middle of a religious hand signaling prayer ceremony, i.e., while I am doing a prayer ceremony, and saying my prayers with religious holy hand prayer signals that my special kids who are religious kids, can pick up and then act on, in concert with other groups of kids of mine, who also are religious kids, most of them, I think, and who work together with my primary groups of religious kids.

I have lots of kids, and some are normal kids, who go about their jobs, as expected, for earnings, just as most people we know. But I also have lots of other groups of children, who are more, religiously oriented, to varying degrees, and who are very religious as their work is all for the sake of my religious self, my GOD SELF. My religous kids catch my hand signing, and then they pass the messages along to others of my groups of children, and with all of the different groups of children I have doing 'good' works for me, as well as groups of children who do 'religious' works for me, as well as groups of children doing normal work for me, but for the sake of my religion, nevertheless.

They all coordinate themselves, somehow, I have yet to figure out how they do it, but between them all, they get the jobs done, that I ask them to do, while I am religiously - and the prayer statements I am signing are very holy - hand prayer signaling, i.e., hand signing.

So, unless you know for a fact, by seeing me on a tv, such as during a live broadcast, once I get my religious conveyance set up, and built by my children, after all the conditions are met, for securing this world from the grasps of the Lesbianists, and after killing all the Lesbianists, and / or after making the remaining Lesbianists surrender, and then after all other conditions are met, as I don't know all the conditions, I've set, as my memories are still foggy, as I'm amnesiatic, as well as mentally retarded, but in any case, if you see me on tv, on a live broadcast, doing my hand signing, you'll know I'm in the middle of one of my prayers, and then you can say, 'I pray to the holy body of the Creator, John Francis Ayres, for the [insert private prayer statement]', and you can omit the 'ephemeral' if you like, as it will work better if you omit the word 'ephemeral' as while I'm praying, I'm my normal, GOD, self, though I may not look to you, on the surface, to be any different, over the video links, or even in person. It never the less works better if you use my recommended methods of making prayer statements, this way, for you to maximize your private prayer statements.

All of my groups of kids have lots of friends, and they do lots of work for me, and I do not remember how many groups of them there are, and how many children I"ve got, as yet, but in time, I'll be able to give you a better idea of how they work together to get the work done, that I ask them to do for me, with my religious hand prayer signals, or hand signals, as in hand signing, or signing.

My kids use signing for all their work assignments, so I use hand signing that they can catch, pick up and read, and it is all pretty much very religious in nature, and it is very solemn, as I am GOD, and when I'm signing, they know I'm GOD, and do not doubt it.

When I am not signing, they might now and then, doubt that I am GOD, but never the less, I am GOD, and my signing proves it to them - when I am saying my religous hand prayer statements, by hand signing - with out any room for doubts in their minds.

In other words, I'm a typical person, just a little mentally retarded, brain smattered, or brain damaged, after my many youthful and other brain bashings I recieved, the wiring is a little scrambled up, upstairs, and after many poisonings by the Lesbianists - from makeing coffee from kerosene, diesel fuel, gasoline, and motor oil contaminated coffee beans and then from drinking that coffee, without knowing it was contaminated with petrol fluids, as often happens to people - and with ill health karma that has me on disability, and I've been through a lot, life after life, and sometimes, my children may have had a thought or two, 'I wonder, if he is going to make it, like he said he would?'

Well, to dispel all doubts, I sign, and when I'm signing, I remind them of my old self, back in the old days, when I used to sign, religiously, and they know how serious a guy I was, so they do not harbor any doubts, so long as I am hand signing.

What To Say, When You See Me Using My Dick Or Other Parts Of My Body To Purify Others, And So Forth

You can say, 'I pray to the holy body of the Creator, John Francis Ayres, for the [insert private prayer statement]', also while you see me praying, Nam Myeo Ho Ren Ge Kyeo, or also while you see me in a ceremony, using my dick and scrotum, or other parts of my Holy Body to purify others, during the middle of a prayer ceremony, and I need not be hand signing, or praying Nam Myeo Ho Ren Ge Kyeo, as I am in the middle of prayers and activities ceremony, which is just as good as a religious hand prayer signaling ceresony, any day.

My dick and scrotum package is very Holy, and it has a very useful function, and that is, it purifying others. My lips do, too, and my butt hole, does as well. They all purify others very effectively and efficiently during my religious ceremonies.

My entire body, during a religious ceremony, butt hole, mouthal hole, lips, tounge, cheeks, legs, knees, feet, toes, butt, chest, back, arms, elbows, hands, fingers, head, neck, throat, ears, nose, and so forth, is entirely the body of GOD, as I am GOD, and therefore, while I am useing my body, during my religious ceremonies, and for my religious ceremonies, and you see me on tv doing so, then after you have verified that I am in the middle of a prayer ceremony, you can say your private prayer, in the manner as I've explained, 'I pray to the holy body of the Creator, John Francis Ayres, for the [insert private prayer statement]'.

I only use my dick and scrotum package for prayer ceremonies, except when I need to pee, so if you see that I am using it, during a prayer ceremony, or if you see me using any other part of my Holy Body, during a live broadcast prayer ceremony, then you'll know right away, that I am in the middle of a prayer ceremony and it is okay to use the statement, 'I pray to the holy body of the Creator, John Francis Ayres, for the [insert private prayer statement]'.

The same is true, pretty much, for any priestess or priest, who practices with me, in my religious holy body prayer circle, their bodies become very Pure, Holy, and Devine, but only after many life periods, that is, after many, many aeons, as they do not attain the same level of purity for a while, the same level of purity as I am at by my good old self, or the same level of pureness that is of ME, GOD, since I'm GOD, and they are not.

That means, it takes priestesses and priests longer to become pure, holy, and devine. I happen to be pure, holy, and devine, but that's because I'm GOD, and it is only during my religious ceremonies that you can understand that as you make your prayer statements, and sexal, etc.

After a long, long while, priestesses and priests will also become pure, holy, and devine, as their holy bodies, energies bodies that are pure, holy, and devine, but on a lower scale than are MY energies bodies, since I'm GOD, and I'm in charge of keeping things tied together, here in my universe.

After many aeons plus years of practice in my holy body praryer circle, the priestesses and priests become pure, holy, and devine, and then their bodies, their normal bodies, become very purifying, just as mine is, now, when I am in a prayer ceremony. I am in a prayer ceremony, daily, a few times, to a number of times, a day.

I've gone eighteen hours straight, once, and no sooner than I go to sleep, and then wakup, right away, I begin again, and I've gone many days, straight, praying, continuously, non-stop.

This is nothing, though, and is all preparatory, as in the future, when I get my health back, as I haven't been too healthy, for quite some time, I will be praying around the clock, some days, and for many days at a time, taking a break only to eat, drink, poop, pee, and clean up.

When priestesses and priests join with me, we will go for years without stopping, and with the priestesses, and with the priests, the both of them there, present, doing the prayer ceremony on my behalf, they can represent me, while I take a nap, go and shower, get some food, nourish myself, drink some fluids, read a book or news paper, or watch the news, or a movie, game show, video, or play a video game, and so forth. I won't be taking long breaks, and that is very funny sounding, but anyway, it happens that priestesses and priests will lose their attention, and then get lost, somehow, and then go and watch tv in their bed room, or whatever, and then we have to go and look for them, and they will get a few markoffs, and with enough markoffs, they will be asked to leave the religious conveyance, and they will be put on a type of vrobatiton, or under survielance, to see if they are good or not. My kids do all my survielance work, and they keep track of every one, so 'you'd better be good, you'd better be nice, you'd better look smart I'm telling you why, Santa Clause is coming, to town'.

Who Was Kris Kringle?

Did you know that Kris Kringle got its start from me? What a coincidence. I don't think he was wearing anything, though, or rather, I don't think I was wearing any thing, but you never know, as tolerances have changed over the long aeons of time, as they pass.

When priests and priestesses become that pure, holy, and devine, as pure, holy, and devine as I am, after their many aeons of religious practice in my holy body prayer circle - pure and devine on the exact same level as I am at - then they can represent me, as Mr. mini-GOD, and Mrs. mini-GOD.

You can not represent me as Kris Kringle, and whoever my wife was, back then. I think I had a lot of guys on that team, and a lot of women and girls, too, since sexaling was a part of that religion, too. You can learn more about it, if you're interested, by getting a day pass, and checking in with my kids, and then, signing up and joining our country, and then by becomeing a citizen, as I've spoken about, before.

You can include any good prayer, that comes to mind, that you feel is needed by you, to improve your life, and to level up your life.

You are the only ones who can pray, and practice, you women, girls, men, and boys, and there fore you are connected to me in many more ways than other living beings, the animals, and the amoebes, cells, and other living beings.

There fore, you are, both genders, the ones who will clean up the mess you have made, and you will continue to keep my universe clean, as you sexal with your genitals, and with your bodies, and with all your gizmos, igniters, trigger mechanisms, love bumps, love patches, tuning forks or ticklements, and so forth, as you are sexaling beings, who I, GOD, created, and you will sexalate, erotem, orgasm, phlumett, astral travel, peak, hyper tranceate, and so forth, just as I intended you to, from now till forever.

You will become virtuous and worthyable beings, worthyable tummy mommies, and worthyable tummy daddies, with your practice of my religion, who will bring into my universe, my many children who will join with you, and assist you and me, in cleaning up our universe, and the mess you have all made of it.

Is that understood? The answer had better be, "YES SIR!".

Lesbianists' Torment Campaign Under Way

Lesbianists are clearly releaseing wierd, ghastly, horrible, and dangerous preditorial animals, giant insects, giant spiders, giant lizards, snakes, and reptiles, ghastly, preditorial sea animals and sea mammals, winged, preditorial and horrific, aggressive scavenger and killer buzzard like creatures and other winged and destructive animals, and other horrible creatures, as well as my abominant kids to kill, maime, torture, and cause major disruptions and suffering to people, around the globe, in many locations.

Apparently, the whole world is now affected, or will be affected, by this dischordance and disharmonic display of defeated lunacy.

The peace has been shattered by the Lesbianists. It was not good before, the situation in the world, with the balooneying governments of the world, doing what they wanted to do, and torturing, and canabalizing people, and feeding people to my abominant cave bears kids, and to my crocodile people kids, and mistreating people, like Bill Gates, Steve Hawkins, Steve Irwin, many women, young girls, and men.

The war in Iraq, the phoney Saddam Hussein Trials, and all the bogus manipulation of the press and media, and the suppression of what is actually the case, with our being used and abused, poisoned, and maltreated by the Lesbianists, was a rotten situation. That was normal, or normality for us. Our karma is very poor, and we have the karma to suffer this abuse, and these torments, daily, unknowingly, in most if not nearly all cases.

But, it is becomeing really bad and there is need for serious concern, and action, to correct this situation. It has gotten out of hand, completely, and there is no stopping the Lesbianists in their wanton, and coldly miserable wish and lust for chaos and disturbances to others.

Now, more clearly than ever, as the Lesbianists rampage, the Lesbianists are causing major disruptions, suffering, anguish, and there is just an awful discordance of shock, dismay, and misery, that is growing, every moment. This is as real as the sunlight shining from the sun on a hot day in summer.

I don't have a clue what people are doing, and what is happening to them, as they are captured, tortured, and caused miserable sufferings, in many places. There must be horrible agony for many people, at this moment, and as each moment passes.

Our reality as it was has suddenly been shattered and torn up, and replaced with the lunacidal, Lesbianistic, mayhem and chaos.

Reuters reports a Lesbianists' joke for the Lesbianists, sarcastically and ironicly stateing, "New Perils Push Doomsday Clock Closer to Midnight" "(Reuters) Scientists have advanced the clock 2 minutes closer to midnight."

http://us.rd.yahoo.com/my/today/new_perils_push_doomsday_clock_closer_to_midnight;_ylt=AmUXlewr5ev2kNK_SfOHDFAL1vAI/*http://news.yahoo.com/s/nm/20070117/us_nm/doomsday_clock_dc_4

This is their private joke, to make this scenario more laugable than before for them. They could not care less, as they are manipulating every thing, and that statement is completely meaningless to them, as they are in control of every thing, in their conspiritorial lunacy to rule human beings, and to trash every one.

We'll see what the coming days, weeks, months, and years bring, and maybe there will be hope for change, when people begin to take action, to correct this situation, globally, united in spirit, permanently.

These are the most evil of evil people and abominant kids, in our immediate vicinity in our universe. We must begin our cleanup campaign here, as it begins where I am, and will continue from here on out, till we have rid my universe of all of these horrible people, and all others like them, and have made them surrender, or have sent them on to my Epcot Center.

I will establish my relgion in my universe, and begin my ministry, and they are not going to stop me, as my religion will bring positive change for all of us, forever.

I must establish myself outside the bounds of this Lesbianistic society, so your efforts and concern for our future, and your selfless giving of donations to my ministry, to allow me to set up my ministry, outside the bounds of this Lesbianistic society, non-dependent on Welfare, Supplemental Security Income or SSI, Medicaid, and non-reliant on the supported and financed Housing and Urban Developement or HUD subsidized apartment that I live in.

Once I receive in the mail, the 'Gift' donations to set up my ministry outside the bounds of this society, I believe things will gradually begin to positively change for us all, and the shift to positivity will begin, and a new universe for us all, will become for the first time, ever, a potential reality with the sincere religious practice by all of my followers, all of you, who are practicing my religion, diligently, and daily, or as much as your health and your time permits.

There in, with your efforts to practice, will bloom your flowers of dignity and hope, justice and freedom, willingness for sharing, cooperating, and participating with others in our new age of enlightenment, the Gurkian Age, and your new found respect for self and others.

Captain Off The Bridge.

John Francis Ayres
GOd
And Children

It Is Now Time To Kill All Government Workers, Public Workers, Preachers, Islamic Clerics, Christian Bible Teachers, Bible Thumpers, And All Other Persons Who Support The Lesbianists And Their Lesbianistic Societies Around The World - 'Fivers' To Kill Lesbianists And All The Lesbianists' Supporters - Coma Patients - All Persons Who You Kill Will Transel To My Epcot Center - Japanese And List Keeping - Surrendering And Pledging To Serve All People In My Universe - What Does This Mean? Updated: 21-01-07 Rev.d.01.a 19:56 PST

It is now time to kill all police of every police department in every country in the world. It is now time to kill all jail and prison workers in every country in the world. It is now time to kill all zoo keepers who work in zoos and other related places around the world. It is also time to kill all pet store personel, and pet store owners. We do not need people housing and feeding potentially dangerous animals. You are further ordered to kill all pets in all pet stores, and elsewhere, even in private homes. You may then eat them, after you have cleaned out their guts and removed tummy foods and rectal feces, etc., that are decaying matter, that is harmful to your health, and after you have prepared them for eating by cooking, grilling, fire place cooking, barbecuing, smoke house fermenting, or by other safe and sanitary, healthful cooking methods.

It is also time to kill every fire department official or worker, no matter what capacity the person works in, as a fire truck driver, as an ambulance driver, as an assistant driver, as an attendant or support crew person, as a maintenance man of the fire or the police departement, it is now time to kill them all.

Further, it is time to kill all public bus drivers, who work on any metropolitan or local area or state or interstate, or national bus company. It is time to kill all ships' captains and their crew members. It is time to kill all railroad rail line workers. It is time to kill all subway drivers and subway line workers, no matter what their job is.

Further, it is now time to kill all military personel, SWAT team personel, all government personel, and all civilian, or trained military, national guard, state or federal militia, toy soldiers, the people who dress up in old time war regalia, and outfits pretending they are old time, earlier period, confederate soldiers, or old time earlier period, union soldiers, who act out old time North the 'Union' vs. South the 'Confederates' and who participate in city and town parades, across the United States.

It is now time to kill all retired military personel who support the deranged, crazed, insepient, and corrupted Lesbianistic societies we live in, around the world. It is also now time to kill all persons who in any way support the governments of the world, including but not limited to, all school, university, kindergarden, missionary, day care center workers, nursery school teachers, teachers aids or teachers assistants, United Nations workers, United Nations teachers, substitute teachers, catholic school teachers, Irish protestant school teachers, parochial school teachers, all religious denominations around the world school teachers and their school support workers, government funded school teachers, tuition assistance by the government school teachers, all personel who work for the United Nations, all civil service agents, all DEA agents, all FBI agents, all FDA agents, all EPA agents, and workers, BLM agents who are Lesbianists as well as those BLM agents' who are Lesbianists as well as those friends of theirs, who support the Lesbianists.

It is also time to kill all other federal, state, or local, or globally tasked organizations, such as the CIA workers, INTERPOL workers, the several groups of workers within the Canadian Mounties, NIC a spy department of the U.S. Navy, the Korean C.I.A., the United States Presidential Police agents the Secret Service Agents, National Park Rangers, State Park Rangers, Forestry Service workers, Pentagon workers, National Library Of Congress workers, and all others who work in any capacity supporting any government organization, those listed above, and all others, as well as all persons who support the Lesbianists in any way at all.

It is now time to kill all judges, bailiffs, Supreme Court Justices, and the employees who work in their organizations, and all other judges, legal clerks, para legal workers, court stenographers, justices of the peace, lawyers, attorneys, state attornys, prosecuting attornys, defense attornys. It is time to kill all officials of all government organizations, and all the people who work for them and or even only support them, such as restaraunt workers who feed them lunch, coffee shop workers and owners who feed them coffee and food, bars and restaraunt personel and owners of bars and restaraunts who support and feed any and all persons connected to the governments of the world and who work for them in any capacity at all.

It is also time to kill all the money lenders who loan money to the Lesbianists, the mortgage company owners who provide the Lesbianists with house purchasing loans, and all the supermarket workers and supermarket owners, who supply food to the Lesbianists, as well as all of the druggists, the pharmacy workers, who supply medicines to the Lesbianists. It is time to kill all the taxi cab drivers who give rides to the Lesbianists, and to every person who supports the Lesbianists in any way, at all, unless those people surrender to my kids.

It is also now time to kill all civilian or civil servant or state civil servant worker who supports in any way, any Lesbianistic organization, such as the police departments, federal agencies, fire departments, libraries, schools, and so forth. It is also now time to kill all persons who maintain or provide services to any of the above listed organizations, and to all of the similar organizations in every country in the world.

This is my order to all of you, and you are all ordered, by me, GOd/ GOD, to kill all of them, unless they surrender. People also call me, 'Allah'. I'm the same person. Just do as I tell you.

You are to take my fuels' bombs with chlorine plastics' explosives formulas, and all other explosives formulas I've explained about on my bulletin board and the fuels' bombs explosives formulas including but not limited to radiological 'fracturable' rocks that provide so-called 'nuclear' explosions, all of my bombs' formulas, and all other bombs' formulas derived in part or in whole from what we have learned as I've explained on my bulletin board and to take them, and make the bombs and explosives, and to then use them, and then destroy and kill all of the Lesbianists, and all of the Lesbianists military bases, buildings, and kill every last one of them, all of them, leaving no one alive.

'Fivers' To Kill Lesbianists And All The Lesbianists' Supporters

You are to then make certain they are all dead. If they are not dead, you are to kill them with a 'fiver'. A 'fiver' is a bullet with five lines drawn or scored with a knife or sharp instrument into the tip of the bullet, to form a 'five' line pattern, so that the bullet will fracture into 'five' parts.

You are to take three 'fivers' and shoot each person who has not stopped breathing, and who is not dead yet, and shoot the three fivers into the head of the person, to make certain the person dies.

Three 'fiver's will destroy enough brain material, to kill any person if the bullet is large enough, and the handgun, rifle, or weapon is powerful enough.

The handgun bullet size must be at least larger than a .22 calibur, and at a minimum, 7 millimeters. You may use .38 calibur, 9 millimeter, 10 millimeter, .45 calibur, or any other, large sized bullet to make certain they are dead. Buckshot, 8 guage to 10 guage, or any comparable rifle load or handgun load, or home made weapon load, will work equally as well, with three shots into the skull. A machete or similar instrument should then be used to chop the head off of the person at the neck line. If you have a machete or hatchet, or axe, and if you prefer to chop off the head of the person, then by all means, you are to do so. The point here is to kill the person one hundred (100) percent, and not leave the person in a coma.

Coma Patients

A person in a coma is perfectly alive, and can hear every word you are saying, but can not respond. People in a coma after severe accidents, such as near fatal traffic accidents, where their limbs were broken into pieces, or war victims, who are on life support in Veterans' Hospitals, can be in agonizing pain, and no pain medications are given to the patient as the patient has no way of communicating with the doctors, nurses, or staff members to complain about the pain, in many or in most cases, if not nearly all cases. Some patients can write or scribble out a note about the severe pains, or make gestures with their hands, pointing at painful spots they are able to point to, and then making squeezing motions, to indicate as best as they can, that there is something wrong in the area. Some people may catch the meaning of the gestures, but others do not, and may just wonder what is going on with the patient and they may wonder what the patient means by the hand gestures. Others, doctors and nurses, and staff members will merely find it amusing that the patient is making the gestures. Some doctors and nurses, and possibly staff members, will figure out the patient is in pain, and then steps can be taken to alleviate the pain, but it is an ordeal for the patient, and it may take months, or in some cases, years, before staff, cleaning persons, food servers, orderlies or assistants, nurses, or doctors figure out what the hand gestures mean.

The coma patient, after healing from the injuries, may still have residual pains, such as residual spinal pains, or neck pains, or ligament pains where ligaments were twisted, or ruptured, or severed, partially or wholly, and the ligaments didn't grow back properly, or didn't grow back fully, or much, or perhaps, in some cases, not at all, which does happen a lot, and each time the patient is moved in her or his bed, the person experiences extreme pain as no medications for pain are given to the coma patient, unless the patient has been successful in communicating that there is pain felt by her or him, in her or his body.

Leaving coma patients on life support systems is the cruelest thing you can do to a person in a coma as there is no such thing as being 'brain dead'.

It is a cruel and abominable Lesbianists' joke on humanity, and on all persons, that the Lesbianists have perpetrated with their teaching doctors and nurses that coma patients are brain dead, and do not feel, hear, taste, or sense, anything at all, and it is just another one of the Lesbianists' ways to hurt and torture people, and cruelly and ruthlessly abuse human beings, in this case, in most of these cases, by proxy. There are doctors who are Lesbianists, and I have one who is one, that I am aware of, and he knows exactly what causes my health problems, but he sits there, non-responsive, and with a vacant stare on his face as if he doesn't hear, see, or know of any thing that is going on, something like the three monkeys with hands clasped over their, ears, eyes, and mouth, who represent 'hear no evil, see no evil, speak no evil' and then 'therefore, every thing is alright'.

All persons with brains, whether in a coma, or other sleep like state or condition, is perfectly brain alive as the brains and nervous systems, auditory, taste, touch and sense nerve systems, never die, until the patient stops breathing, and passes on.

All nurses and doctors are to remove all life support systems from all persons in a coma, immediately and confirm the persons have died. That will allow them to transel into my Epcot Center, and then be born again, as a tummy baby to a tummy mommy and to tummy daddies.

All persons in a coma, whether in a hospital, or in a nursing home, or at a private home or apartment, or in a group home, or group care center, are to be told the truth of this, and are to be told that you just leared it, and are to be told that I am GOD, and that I have an Epcot Center staff waiting for them to come in, to be treated for their traumatic condition, of not being able to do any thing about their condition to end it, as it is a miserable situation for these people who are in a coma, or in any trance like state or condition that resembles a coma, or a sleeping person, who can not wake up. The person is perfectly brain active, and there are no measuring devices to prove it available to hospital staff or to doctors, as none are made, and the technologies to detect a person's brain activeness and aliveness are kept secret after they are bought up, and then after the records of them are destroyed, and the information on them are kept secret and locked away, in vaults, and in storage facilities, hidden from view so that no one can get the information, and build a device to detect a person's brain alertness status.

After they are told the truth, and that you just became aware of it, you are to tell them to not be afraid, and that all measures to relieve them from their present condition, and all measures to assist them to transel to my Epcot Center, where they can recieve personal care, and then helped to recover from the trauma of the coma, or coma like state of not being able to wake up, speak, and talk to people. They are then to be injected with a powerful sleep sedaditive, or induced to swallow several strong sleeping pills, as they may become afraid, and then, you are to help them to pass on, and to transel over to my Epcot Center.

In some cases, if you pull on the large toe of a person, or on the thumb, the person may have control to pull in the opposite direction. That is an indication that they are awake, and fully aware of what is going on around them. Please check patients to see that they have soundly fallen asleep, and snoring or breathing quietly, in relaxed manner, may be the only sign that the person is asleep.

Any sign of movement, mentally driven by the patient, no matter how slight, is nearly most always, nearly one hundred percent of the time, a sign that the person is completely brain alive, and that the person is completely aware of what is going on around her or him and can hear every thing. Even passing or expelling gas or farting, can be 'mentally' driven, and a sign the person is awake, and alert, and brain alive. Opening one's mouth is almost always, one hundred percent of the time, mentally driven.

Persons's in a coma, who have Eplilepsy, or other similar brain or neuro muscular disorder, and other conditions where patients experience spasming, whether the condition is diagnosed or not, these patients who spasm, may make some spamodic movement, now and then, and that is only a sign that the person is haveing a neuro muscular muscle spasm. Knee jerks or other similar movements, are not always muscle spasms and can be labored, mentally driven actions. These actions show the patient has control to that extent over her or his muscles, body, skeletal system, and other body systems related to the movement.

In any case, after the patient has fallen asleep, you are then to kill the person, and let the person transel to my Epcot Center, so that the person can recover in my Epcot Center, and then be born as a tummy baby, to a tummy mommy, and to tummy daddies.

All Persons Who You Kill Will Transel To My Epcot Center

Once you are certain all of the police, fire, teachers, and all others who support the Lesbianists' societies around the world are dead, they will transel to my Epcot Center.

It is now the time to bring an end to the lives of these people who support the crazed, insepient, bogus Lesbianists, and to destroy them all, leaving no survivors. Kill all of their family and relatives, and leave no one alive. Kill them all.

My Epcot Center will not be in any way, inconveinced by your brave and heroic actions. All doctors must be killed, all nurses must be killed. All medical techinicians must be killed. All library workers must be killed. All school teachers must be killed. All art museum and gallery museum workers must be killed. All workers for all of these institutions must be killed. All of them, in every country of the world, unless they surrender and plead for mercy, and then are allowed in to my kids' place, for swearing in and for joining as civilians, my country.

Further, it is time to kill all media corporations personel, such as news casters, news men, news women, anchor persons, cameral men and women, talk show hosts, administrative persons, Hollywood's movie actors and actoresses, all radio broadcasters, and all personel of all radio companies. It is time to kill all news paper company owners, and publishers, editors, and all workers of these companies, unless they surrender to my children and plead for mercy.

It is time for all of you to kill all of them, and make sure not one of them is left living, including and most importantly, all politicians, who must all be killed, without any further delay. It is time to kill them all.

It is now time to kill Oprah Winfrey, Geraldo Rivera, Sarah Jessica Parker, Judge Judy, Jerry Springer, Liz Taylor, Michael Jackson, Clint Eastwood, Cher Bonno, Morgan Freeman, Steven Spielberg, Al Gore and his family, Hillary Clinton and her family, all of them, Jeb Bush and his family, all of them, Nancy Reagan and her family, all of them, former president of the United States President George Bush, Sr. and his family, all of them, including all persons related to him in any way, and all persons who work for him, in any way, and all persons who work for any of his associates, in any way, unless they surrender to my kids, and then plead for mercy.

We are not going to allow the Lesbianists to continue their illegal, inhumane, and horriblesome practices and activities on my planet, and in my universe, a moment longer. They must all die, now.

Is that understood?

I hope the answer is, "YES SIR! Mr. John Francis Ayres, GOd", as a 'negative' reply to my question is not acceptable.

Japanese And List Keeping

I haven't confirmed it, but from what I know, so far, the Japanese are very good at keeping lists, and they know about all the foreign people in Japan, and they keep lists of names of all of them, and they keep lists of names on all of the Korean people, and the Singaporean people, the Chinese people, the Ainu people, and the cast outs or 'burakumin' a group of meat cutters and fish sellers who some how got on a list of people who were felt to be 'unclean'. The 'burakumin' was a group of people who no one in Japan wished to talk about. The Japanese also, apparently, had lists on groups of people, who they didn't know much about, but they knew they were always doing things with each other. Those groups of people were the Lesbianists, so the Japanese knew all along, who I was talking about and were nearly one hundred percent certain those groups were the Lesbianists living in Japan.

They read what I wrote, and the notes of mine were passed to many people on an e-mail mailing list, and when they heard that Steve Irwin had been killed, they felt they had heard enough and they told all their friends about my notes, and then the Japanese killed all the Lesbianists in Japan on that list they kept.

It's something I heard, and I haven't confirmed it, but I think the Japanese are fully capable of handling that, as they were fully prepared to deal with each one of the Lesbianists, and they knew who they were, and once the Japanese united, and decided to take action. The Japanese escorted all the Lesbianists to a meeting place, to which the Lesbianists were not happy to go to, but had no choice but to agree to follow the Japanese citizens who escorted them there, with the military or Japanese Self Defense Force, the Coast Guard, and National Police, and all other police agencies in Japan, plus the national organization of fire department workers, backing and supporting all the Japanese citizens.

As to what they did with the bodies of the Lesbianists, I'll leave that to them to explain to you, as it was quite brilliant and they had many very good ideas for dealing with the bodies of the deceased Lesbianists, who are apparently now in my Epcot Center.

The Japanese country side is now peaceful and quite, and things the winds are blowing, peacefully, and gracefully over the Japanese country side, cities and towns, across the ponds, marshes, lillies and lotus flowers swamp lands, bogs, bays, estuaries, lakes, streams, rice paddies, fields, mountains, and islands, from what I can understand and gather about the situation in Japan.

Surrendering And Pledging To Serve All People In My Universe

If the Lesbianists and their supporters surrender to my children, and then promise to devote their lives for the sake of others, serving man kind, and all human beings, and all people on this planet, and in my universe, for the rest of their lives, they will be allowed to surrender to my children, and my children will then arrest them and put them in a prison cell. If they are not willing to serve others, despite the fact that they say they will serve others and devote their lives for the sake of others, serving all people in my universe, then my children will ignore them, and my children will not arrest them because my children know they are lying. They must promise to do all they can that is humanely possible, for the sake of others, and devote themselves to the prosperity of others, for eternity. If they are not willing to do that, then please, just send them on to my Epcot Center, and we'll straighten them out, for there. My staff at the Epcot Center has training programs to straighten them out and make them nicer people, so that next time they are born as tummy babies, they will behave and be nice to others, doing nice things for other people, after they are retrained, a little. The retraining program takes a while, but the results are very good to excellent.

If my kids decide that the person who is surrendering, is telling the truth, my kids will use the special teletransportation technology, something like what we see in Star Trek on tv, with Captain Kirk saying, 'Beam me up, Scotty!', as many of us have seen on daytime tv, or in the movie theater, and my kids have very good teletranportation technology or 'beam me up, Scotty' technology, and the person, once he or she pledges honestly to serve others, will instantly dissappear.

Do not be surprised if when the person surrenders and promises to 'serve others', promising to devote her or his life for the sake of others, the person suddenly dissappears, and instantly, the person is no where to be seen. The person was 'beamed' into a prison cell that my kids have constructed, using other technologies, and we have many prison cells waiting for the Lesbianists and for the Lesbianists' supporters, and for other bad kids in my universe, as well.

For each person you kill, my kids will keep earning points scores on your efforts to send them to my Epcot Center, and you will be paid, when you have finished your job, and then finally, go in to visit my kids. My kids will pay you in the monetary currency that is used in the underground cities my kids have built, for protecting people from these horrible Lesbianists and for protecting people from the abominant kids of mine, and the ghastly and naughty animals and very large bugs and spider like creatures, that the Lesbianists use to help them torture people with, to make the Lesbianists laugh, and to amuse themselves, as I've explained a little about, already. The more Lesbianists and Lesbianists' supporters you send to my Epcot Center, the more earning points you will score, and the more money you will earn, and you will be paid that money, when you go to visit my kids after you have finished your work, killing the Lesbiansts and the Lesbianists' supporters.

If the Lesbianists and the Lesbianists' supporters do not disappear after they surrender, and after they promise to serve others, and pledge to devote their lives for the sake of others, the Lesbianists and the Lesbianists' supporters are lying, and you can then kill them, and send them on to my Epcot Center.

My children will escort the deceased Lesbianists and Lesbianists supporters, once you kill them, into one or an other of my Epcot Centers, and will make sure that the Lesbianists and the Lesbianists' supporters get in for a meeting with one or another of my managers, or with one of the staff members who work with my managers to arrange retraining programs for rehabilitating the Lesbianists and the Lesbianists' supporters.

The Lesbianists and Lesbianists' supporters will not qualify as tummy babies, until they are finished their retraining and rehabilitating programs. After they finish, they will be out, again, to join the rest of you, once again, but this time, as nice, kind, courteous, and polite people.

What Does This Mean?

It means, I want all the Lesbianists dead, but if they will surrender, and if they promise to serve all human kind, all people, and work and strive to enrich the lives of all others, dedicating their lives to others, then, you do not have to kill them, and you do not have to send them to my Epcot Center. If they are honest when they surrender, and when they promise to serve all people, devoting their lives to all people of the world, then my kids will 'beam' them in, using the teletransportation technologies that my children use. If they are lying, then my children will not beam them in, and they will be stuck where they are. If they are stuck where they are, after they surrender to my kids, and after they promise to dedicate their lives to the welfare of all others in the world, and to all others in my universe, then they were lying, and you may then kill them, and send them on their way to my Epcot Center, for retraining, and for rehabilitation.

It also means to kill any person who works for the Lesbianists, if he or she is supporting the Lesbianists to try to stop you from killing the Lesbianists. Also, it means that you should kill any person who tries to interfere with you, while you are trying to kill the Lesbianists.That's what it means.

Fermenting Oils - Fracuses Kiddies - Slugs, Snails, And Other Bottom Feeders - Feeding Everybody In Our Bodies - Putting An End To The Global Menace Of The Lesbianists - Changing Our Societies, And Our Universe, Forever Updated: 22-01-07 Rev.x.00.a 07:45 PST

Mix raw sugar, ocean salt, sessame seeds, dried fermented berries you have taken from a mix of berries fermenting as a flural hydrate liqour, or as a plain fermenting liqour, and make sure you dry them out in the oven, before useing them.

Mix the items together in a container, and mix in a drop or two of apple juice, pear juice, papaya juice, kiwi juice, banana juice, cherry juice, cranberry juice, strawberry juice, peach juice, nectarine juice, or plumb juice, and let the moisture settle into the mixture to allow it to become only partially and only very slightly moiste, and not wet or liquidy.

Allow the mixture to sit in a warm or cool place for a week or two, to eight to fifteen weeks, or even a few years, and it will grow molds in it, and with the longer the duration up to a point of sitting and molding, the more useful it will become.

It might develop a pungent, unpleasant odor, like a dead animal smells, which may mean that a fungus that is not very suited for you to use as a starter mold for starting a fermented oil batch has developed in the container, and in that case, you can throw the whole mix out, or use it for fermenting beans or something. Cheeses can be made with these kinds of growing funguses and molds, if you are the daring type, who likes to experiment with new and different tastes from variously fermented mixtures.

You can add some ocean salt, and make a soury vinegar, and then try to rescue it with the combination of the soury vinegar, ocean salt, and a little raw sugar, and some honey.

It may be that some bacteria is in the mix, and it needs to be eaten up, before you can use it safely for a healthy mold mix for starting a nice cheese molds and funguses mixture.

Ocean salt can be added in slightly large amounts with raw sugar. Once the odors have stabilized, and once they have developed a more pleasanty odor of a fermenting mixture, with a slight alchohol ferment odor that will indicate that it is alright to use, and that it will not be harmful to you.

In some cases, the bacteria in the base mix, may be a result of hairs or particles of skin from the body of a dead rat or mouse, that some how found his or her way into the sessame seeds, or into the dried spices, or into dried berries that you used, and then died.

In that case, you might as well throw it away, unless you have a lot of patience, and do not mind waiting and working with it, for several years, for it to become something you can use.

One way to make it into something you can use is to mix in a high potency liqour brew, and let it sit for a number or years, and ferment it, and then after it smells nice and rosy smelling, after ten to fifteen years, to thirty to fifty years, you can evaporate the liquids out in a pail on an open porch that has a net covering to keep animals and animals' hairs out of it. Make sure there is good ventilation, and it should evaporate out, safely after a number of days on the porch in the sun. If there is no heat to make it hot enough to combust, and if there is good ventilation, it will not combust, and it will evaporate out, safely. Adding ocean salt and raw sugar to the mixture so as to fill it up with raw sugar and acidic ocean salts, will further help to safely evaporate out the liquids and prevent the liquids from combusting, accidentally.

Once the liquids have evaporated out, safely, you can use the materials that remain in the pail or container, to start a fermented oils brew mixture, or to start a cheese molds and funguses mixture, if you wish to make a nice cheese molds and funguses mixture.

The particles of skin or hair from the dead rat or mouse, or pidgeon, or other animal, will have been eaten up by all the ferment fracuses kiddies, and will no longer pose a threat to your health.

Fracuses Kiddies

Ferment fracuses kiddies are just plain old ferment kiddies who like to devour large bits of human or animal tissues, mites, or cockroaches, or their body parts, and then poop them out, and pee them out into the liqour brew.

You'll always have some of these kiddies in your brew mixes, and they are useful to you, as they eat up the things that you do not want in your tummy. Also, there are other kiddies, such as snails, and other bottom feeders, that find their way in, in the skins and pulp material as tiny animals, or the eggs of animals, and they hatch, and they develop, and they grow big, and they then bottom feed, and they eat any dead rats, and dead rat parts from rats that might have fallen into the brew. These are useful pets, that you want in your rum and liqour brews, as they will keep the liqour brew healthy to drink, and they will keep you from getting ill.

Slugs, Snails, And Other Bottom Feeders

In the old days of bucanneering, as I may have mentioned, before, this was a crucial part of keeping the sailors alive, on their long voyages, and if crew members fell ill due to an unhealthy brew, with a dead rat in the mix, making it sour, and making it unhealthy to drink, then if there are not enough snails, slugs, and bottom feeders in the barrel or rum to eat the dead rat parts, the sailors will get ill, and when they get back to port, they will hang the rummery owner, and give the business over to the son, or to a third party, often times, one of their fellow crew members, who is liked by all the people, locally, and on the ship.

This is the case, still today, with many rummeries owned and handed down in the same family, from such instances as that.

Bottom feeders, slugs, snails, and many types of bottom feeding earth worms, and other types of healthy bottom feeding worms, that cohabitate well with the slugs, and snails, and other animals that are too tiny for you to see in the rum brew mixture, without a powerful microscope like, optical videoing technology, are essential to your brews mixtures, and they may increase in numbers as they make babies like every animal and living being does, and so now and then, you need to reach into your brew container, with your hand, or with a fine mesh small aquarium use fish net, and scoop them out, and flush them down the toilet, or let them loose in a local pond, lake, mountain stream, or water springs fresh water well, where they will help to keep the water clean, ahd healthy.

Once you have the materials to make your fermented oils mixture, you can add them to your container of food oils, and begin to ferment them, or use them to make a nice cheese mixture, to ferment and then to make solid as it matures with age. You can also use the materials to make a fermented bean mixture, or fermented barley, or fermented rice, or fermented millet, or fermented wheat mixture.

You can also use them to make a fermented brew mixture, as there will be many healthy molds and funguses kiddies in and among the dried out materials. Your health will improve, and by adding different spices, nuts, berries, root particles, ground up kiln dried pine cones that were green to begin with, and then fermented for a few months to a few years, in a brew mixture, then dried out, and ground up into a saw dust powder consistency, you can then have lots of crystals cages salts kiddies of various kinds help you to make a nice regroverative brew, to help you to regroverate your amoebes.

Feeding Everybody In Our Bodies

You know, we need to eat foods to stay alive. We also need to feed all the living animals in our body, to help them to stay alive, so that they can help our health remain normal, from day to day. We also need to feed the amoebes all the foods and juices, salts kiddies, and the poopy liquids and pee liquids, and other liquids with other types of tinier salts kiddies in them, as well as other types of food kiddies, we haven't learned about, yet, but with all of them inside your tummy, you'll be able to feed every one who needs feeding, and then you'll be successful with your amoebe 'auto regroverate mode, on!' formula, so long as you have degunked your body of all the petro chemical oils, kerosene, diesel fuels, and other chemicals, the Lesbianists have been feeding you, from birth, in your diets, if you live in a society, where you are fed baby formula mixtures from Gerbers or Heinze, or any of the other baby foods manufacturers.

Putting An End To The Global Menace Of The Lesbianists

We need to put an end to this practice by the Lesbianists of poisoning us with their petro chemical industry oils and tars salts kiddies, which they use to rot our teeth out, and cause tooth decay, and which they use to cause ulcers in people's tummies, and which they use to cause lots of unpleasant illnesses, and diseases in human beings, and in farm animals. These petro chemical salt kiddies, and formaldehyic salts kiddies, all harm our amobes living beings children, and all the other animals that live inside of us. One day, we will have a lot of people practicing my religion, sexaling, and making prayer statements so as to help us to erase the karmic markups we have, that keep us living under the tyranny of these Lesbianists, and in their societies, suffereing the daily poisonings that cut our lives short. When we have erased enough of our karmic markups with my religion's religious practice of sexaling to purify our selfs and others around us, and to clearify and erase our karmic markups, we will eventually be able to say good bye to the Lesbianists, and their practices of poisoning us, and causing us major headaches, or problems in our lives.

Changing Our Societies, And Our Universe, Forever

At that time, we will be able to say hello to a whole new way of life, and that will be the beginning of our new, thrilling, and excitingly challenging, one world, unified, planetary, global culture, and it will be the begining of our new, thrilling, and excitingly challenging, one universe, universal culture for all of the people in our universe, who we have been living in our universe together with, since we first came out, and began living here in my universe, a very long time ago. We have to start somewhere, and so here we are, now, begining to prepare the foundation for our long and prosperous journey ahead of us, as we clean up our universe, together with each other, and clearify and erase all of our karmic markups, and all of the karmic markups of all my children, and of all living beings who live with us, together with us, in my and our universe. We need to take responsibility for this clean up campaign of ours, as we are the only ones, besides my many worker, unionized children, who can use our brains, and use our sexaling organs, to produce purifying energies of all types, to help us clearify and erase all of our karmic markups, and all karmic markups, and karmic things and dings, of all of my animal children, and of all of my living beings children, and of all of my human children.

My kids have built underground cities, to help us to get started, in learning about the new ways of living together, and of sexaling together, for practicing my religion together with each other, so that we will be able to prepare ourselves, for our new global, unified society, and for our new, universal, united, civilization. We have a long ways to go, but we are starting now, with your efforts to correct this situation by eraseing the karmic markups and karmic things and dings, that have us living in this truly awful situation on this planet, in our universe, that we are now, curently living in. One day, when all the Lesbianists are either dead, or have surrendered to my kids, we will be able to gradually educate ourselves, and change our understanding about women and girls, and about men and boys, to understand the truth about women and girls, and about men and boys, and then we will begin our new and exciting journey into our future, together, with my religion at the basis of our new, unified society, universal culture, and universal civilization.

Donations To GOd

Why can't anyone donate any thing to me? I am GOd. So, how come no one can send me a penny in the mail, or a box of cookies, or a pair of socks, or something? I don't think I'm asking for too much, but I'm just curious about why no one can send me anything in the mail?

I don't get any phone calls. No one sends me any e-mail. No one tries to visit me. I have a religion, and I'm asking people to practice it. Now, how come no one can contact me?

I once said that I am in a monastic mode, and it is a cloistered monastic mode. That means, no one can be contacted out side of my monastery by any one inside the monastery, and no one can contact any one inside the monastery, by any one outside the monastery.

If there is no legitimate monastery business then no person will be allowed to contact me, or for that matter, any one else inside my monastery, who is leading a monastic life, with me.

Well, there is only me, right now, but maybe in the future, some one will be in my cloistered monastic discipline with me, helping me with my religious duties of doing my religious ceremonies, as I've mentioned about, before.

Monastic Mode

What does my 'monastic mode' mean? It means that I am here as GOD. You know, there is only me. I of course never sent any one, such as the Lesbianists claim. Why would I? I don't need any one to do the things I need to do. That's sheer idiocy to think I would have a son or daughter, and send them to do my business. That's absurd. You've been snookered into believeing all those hogwash tales, and now you don't know who I am, and you don't have the karma to believe in me, as a result of your following and believeing all those hogwash tales. My kids are everywhere, and they are doing their jobs.

Who Works For Me, Anyway?

Now, as I've been saying, I'm going to have you do your jobs, and that is to use your genitals, and to use your body, and to use your brains, and then participate in my religion, using your genitals and your body and your brain, and sexalate with each other, and purify your karma? Does that sound like a joke to you? If it does, you are very mistaken because it is not a joke in any way, and I am absolutely serious when I say that you are going to use your 'equipment' and I almost want to call it, your 'field' equipment, because you are armed with it, day and night, and you are going to use that equipment, to clearify and erase your karmic markups, and to purify my universe. Is that okay with you? I hope it sure the hell is, as a "NO SIR!" at this point, would be an unsatisfactory reply. Do you understand me? I hope so. You are going to jump ship, as I order you to, or be thrown over board, if you have a problem with that. I hope you understand.

Well, as far as I can figure it, no one realizes that I am GOD, so no one can donate money to me. If some one realizes that I am GOD, than for the first time, that person will be allowed to donate money to me. That person will be allowed to visit me, or call me on the phone, or donate money or food to me, or practice my religious ceremonies with me, if that person believes, and understands, and realizes, that I am GOD.

Right now, there is no one who realizes or understands that I am GOD. No one of course believes I am GOD. Never the less, I am GOD, and I am sitting here, waiting for donations, to help my ministry get started.

So, that is the reason that no one can get through to me, or donate money to me, or send me a postcard with some kind of message of cheer and support in it.

There doesn't seem to be any body who believes that I am GOD. Well, that isn't surprising. People do not have the karma to believe that I exist, is one way of looking at it. They have ignored my existence, and have not had any real thoughts about me that would link them to me, in my monastic mode.

What does that mean? It means, that no one remembers me, as the guy who created all of you. It also means, that I am in a religious mode, and no one understands that, or believes that I am in a religious mode. That is peculiar, since I am giving you a religion, one of my oldest, for you to practice, that will assist you in purifying your life, and that will assist you in eraseing and clearifying your karmic markups. That's very peculiar, but it is not that peculiar, as you do not have the karma to realize and understand that I am GOD. In any case, there will be no donations, no telegrams, and no phone calls or letters to me, so long as you do not realize, understand, and then of course, believe that I am GOD. Well, any way, so it goes.

Obeying Orders

Now, I want all these people, killed. Hillary Clinton. Bill Clinton. Chelsea Clinton. Ted Kennedy. Al Gore. Tipper Gore. Harriet Gore. Cheryl Gore. Dave Gore. Bill Gore, and all people who call them selfs, Gore and pretend to be related to Al Gore, or to Tipper Gore. Mr. Al Gore has lots of friends, who are also Lesbianists, and I want them all killed. Oliver North. Monica Lewinsky. Eve Arden. Elizabeth Arden. Michael Jackson. George Bush Sr. and all other George Bushes. Do you understand what I mean? It means, that they are all Lesbianists and they are all going to die, and we are going to blow up Washington D.C., and destroy Capital Hill, and level that area, and make it sink beneath the waves of the Atlantic Ocean. That's how big a bomb I want you to make, with my fracturable rocks, to then blow that area out of the water, and make it sink below the waves of the Atlantic Ocean. You'll probably need more than one bomb.

Did you know that Washington, D.C. is lying on a fault line, deep down, and it is on an ocean shelf, that has the ocean under it, lapping at the earth, very far down. That means, that it is on a fault line, and it is on a shelf, that is hanging over the ocean's waters.

Now, if you hit Baltimore, and Maryland, and Northern Virginia, and Washington DC with a large enough bomb to blow Baltimore out of the ground, and level it, and with another bomb large enough to blow Washington DC out of the ground and level it, at the same time, and a few more bombs, large enough to blow Maryland, Virginia, and that whole metro area out of the earth, at the same time, you will sink the nation's capital, that is, Washington DC, below the ground, as it will break off the ledge that it sits on, and it will sink into the ocean, as the ledge crumbles below it. There will be water, from the Atlantic ocean, all the way out to West Virginia.

Now. I have every right to say that, and demand this, as it is a matter of self defense, as I know these motherfuckers are eating people, cannibalizing my kids, for their amusement, thrills, and fun, and they will continue to do that UNLESS THEY ARE STOPPPED! Do you understand that?

I hope so. I am going to see the whole of Washington DC and the area leveled, with Baltimore, and Northern Virginia, and Maryland, as well, and we are going to sink that area into the ocean, and make it disappear below the surface of the waters of the Atlantic. Now, that should be clear, shouldn't it.

This is not a joke. We will have to send a lot of my children to my Epcot Center, in the blasts that will occur, and in the after math of the blasts, but that is unavoidable.

We will have many people, drowning in the waters that come in from the ocean, and that stretch out to the hills of West Virginia, with only slight outcrops of land, hills, here and there, with a few people lying on top of them, blinded and in awful pain, but they will not live long, as they will not be able to survive for long, and they will pass on, die, and then they will transel to my Epcot Center, where they can get medical relief, medical treatment, therapy counseling, and rehabilitative therapies. That is what we will do to Washington DC and vicinity, so every one, please prepare for it, and get your pain medication in order, so you can take an over dose of pain pills, when your area is blown and shredded to bits, with one or more of my fracturable rocks bombs, as I've explained about.

Every Politician In The World To Be Executed

Next, I want every politician in the world, canceled out. I want their passports for living on our planet, canceled. That means, I want you to kill each and every one of them. Not only do I want you to kill them, all, but I want you to kill every single one of their associates, around the world. They are all Lesbianists, except for a few of them. If you happen to kill one of the non Lesbianists policitians by mistake, that is okay. They have the option of surrendering to my children, available to them, and once they surrender, they will not be killed, by accident.

Every Hollywood Actor And Actoress To Be Executed

After that, I want every Hollywood actor or actoress killed, and that includes all the actors and actoresses, around the world, and they must surrender to my kids, if they wish to not get killed. There are a lot of them, who are not Lesbianists, so those I've mentioned, who I've let you know are not Lesbianists, you can forget about them, and leave them alone. There are a lot more than thirteen billion Lesbianists living under the earth's surface, in underground cities. I did not realize there were so many. We need to kill them all, so we will, in time, unless they surrender. Is that clear, every body? I hope the answer is, "Yes, Sir!" as you had better not answer any other way, or you will get yourself on my shit list. Is that understood? Good. I am the boss of my universe, so if you do not like it, than jump overboard, now, sailor. Have you got that clear? Good.

Jump Ship, Explained

What does 'jump overboard' mean? It means you are going to have severe problems with me, if you do not obey orders, and that there will be difficulty and jail time, ahead of you, if you continue to ignore my commands to you. It means there is going to be trouble, if you do not obey me. My kids are in charge of handling all the details on that, and it is not a joke.

Fair Warning

We are not going to let these Lesbianists run their show, one more minute. We are going to put an end to them, and their activities, here on this planet, and every where else in my universe, and this is fair warning of that.

Particle Remis Technology And Particle Dismiss Technology

As I said, once before, there is a technology called particle remis technology. There is also a technology called particle dismiss. They are the technologies that you can use to feed 2.3 billion Lesbianists down under the surface of this planet, and on every other planet that they are on.

Dismend Technology And Remend Technology

It is easy to dismiss molecules, and to dismiss, or dismend all the beings who need to be dismended, and sent to my Epcot Centers. It is also easy to remend them, and then get them back into the foods that I need them to be a part of.

My kids keep track of every one who needs to be dismended, and then remended. That is a lot of work, keeping track of every one, but that allows us to dismend the living beings, and animals, that I can let off from duty, and from further service, and then send to my Epcot Centers for them to live in. I can then recall them to duty, and remend them, and then have them serve in an apple or an orange, or banana, or a brick. Do you think that is a joke? It is not a joke, and there is no joking allowed, on my shift. Do you got that? I hope so, because if you do not, you will have to learn how to swim a long ways, as it is going to be a long way from shore, after I ask you to jump over board, and I have sailors who practice, all the time, just to show the passengers how it is done, just in case. I will have you jump from ship, if you do not get along with me, and if you disagree with what I am doing, pretty soon, as we are departing, now, or just about now. That means, we are not going to play around, much longer, and we are going to set sail. That means, there are going to be a lot of people practicing my religion, pretty soon, as they will learn about it, and they will begin practicing it.

Mentalcosis / Mentaltosis And Comatosis

Mentaltosis is the state of a vegetable, like a stalk of cellery, or a plumb, or an orange. Comatosis is the state of complete awareness of self and others. Comatosis is not brain dead, i.e., more or less, mentaltosis, with no real significant brain activities occuring, other than the ones that keep you alive, and vegetative, and you do not need assistance to remain and function in a state of mentaltosis, and the Lesbianists know it. You are severely brainally handicapped, and when you come out of it, eventually, after you have your karma fully completed for being mentaltosically ill, and after it is then time to get on to something else, you will be very brainally handicapped, and you'll be an extremely retarded person, with little to nearly no brain awareness going on about self and others, but able to walk, barely, and later, after many many lifetimes as a mentally retarded individual, you'll begin to be able to mumble a little, or babble a little, for umpteen lifetimes, as you begin to get your higher brain functions, back, which takes a very long time to work out, and many many lifetimes to work out, karmically.

Comatosis is like a hit on the head, and when you wake up, your faculties are not all working, and you may not be able to speak, or move, or talk to your friends, but mentally, you are all there.

Mentaltosis is like a train ran over your brain, and every other nervous system in your body, nearly, and you are completely unable to think, or do any thing else, and you are reduced to a mere pumping heart patient, with not much else going for you, except you are breathing, and technically, you are alive. You can sit there for a million years, or a million or so life times, before you begin to come out of it, and then reveal your disorder of severe mental disorganization, mental disfunction, and mental retardation. There is a big difference between a bonk on the head, and a train running over it, and the rest of your body. Coma patients are fully aware of what is going on around them, and they may not be able to speak, but they are there, and they can twitch a finger, now and then, or flex a toe, or raise their tummy up a tiny bit, to pass gas, usually, and relieve the bloating sensation they are experiencing in their tummy, and in their intestines, or colon. They may be able to grasp your hand, and fully hold on to it, and not let go, for hours, if they have the strength for it. This horrible torture the Lesbianists are perpetrating on comatosic patients, needs to end, now. Person responsible for continuance of hospital policies, despite our informing them of the truth regarding this, are to be shot and killed, and sent to my Epcot Center, if they interfere with the removal of the life support and life support assitive devices, that are plugged into the comatosic patients mouth, or nose, or other orifice of their body, or any part of their body. If some one refuses to cooperate, you are to throw them out of their hospital unit, and give them a good whack on the head. Come back in a few days, and then disconnnect their life support assisitive pumps, and tubes, and so forth, and shoot them in the brain with three 'fivers', as I've explained about, and then send them on their way to my Epcot Center. That is an order. Now do it.

I want you to pull the plugs on all the GI's and civilians who are on a breathing assistance machine, and life support assistance equipment, and I want you to send them all to my Epcot Center, where they can get treatment, and therapy, and then get themselves ready for being born, again, as a fine and a healthy, tummy baby to a tummy mommy, and to tummy daddies. You had better comply, if you know what is good for you, as my kids are now keeping track of your records on this account, and you are not going to do very well, if you do not follow orders. Is that clear. I will not have any insubordination of duty on my watch, and that means, you had better learn to follow orders, or you will be asked to jump over board, and then go for a very long swim to shore.

Michael Jackson

Michael Jackson is the biggest joke in the world. He is a white boy, and he pretends to be related to Janet Jackson, a black woman, partially, and they pretend to be related, and he is as white as an elbow macaroni, or a white goose. He is not a black person, though he does have some black ancestry, but he is a primarily white person, and he pretends to have bleached his skin color, which is a crock of shit. Now, I want you to kill that mother fucker, as well as Sylvestor Stallon, and Arnold Schwarznegar, Clint Eastwood, Morgan Freeman, Kirk Douglas, Matt Damon, Robert De Niro, Anthony Hopkins, Gary Busey, and their Lesbianists' buddies.

Retractions

Mr. Jerry Springer is not a Lesbianist. I was mistaken about him, as he was already killed by them, in a previous lifetime, as he developed a desire to bad mouth them, and they didn't like him, and they kicked him out of their group, and they killed him, with their murderous torture routines. Penelope Cruz is not a Lesbianist, but she was, but they killed her, and tortured her, and she is off the list. Angelica Huston is not a Lesbianist. She was, but they killed her, after torturing her. She is a popular and prominent person, and if she hasn't been abducted yet, by the Lesbianists who will feed her to my abominant kids, like they did to Steve Irwin, and Jeff Corwin, then they will be gettting around to it, not too long from now, as they like to feed her to the abominant kids of mine, just as they do Bill Gates, and lots of other, former Lesbianists. None of the Baldwin brothers are Lesbianists, either, as they were already kicked out, and killed by them, and then grievously tortured by them. They continue to be main attractions for feeding to my abominant kids. Jack Nicholson is not a Lesbianist, now, either, but he was. Ben Affleck is not a Lesbianist, as he was also kicked out of their organization, after they tortured and killed him. Charley Sheen is not one, either, but he was. Martin Sheen is not a Lesbianist, but he works for them, and he was one, before they kicked him out, after they tortured him, and killed him, in a previous lifetime. Michael Douglas is no longer a Lesbianist, either, as they killed him, after their brutal torturing of him. He is up for being abducted, and for being fed to the abominant kids of mine, as he is a prominent person, and Kirk Douglas enjoys watching him get eaten up, and Kirk Douglas will laugh his guts out, as he watches Michael Douglas get tortured by the Lesbianists, which Kirk Douglas is a confirmed member of. Cher Bonno is not a Lesbianist, as I was mistaken in memory, though she was a leader for a while with Oliver North, she was killed by them, after being tortured, because she was getting "soft". Sunny Bonno was a Lesbianist, as well, but he was also killed after being tortured, officially kicking him out of the members league of Lesbianists. Sunny Bonno was captured, and abducted, and a body double was placed on a coroner's table, and Cher Bonno knew that the body double who was dead, who looked like Sunny Bonno, was not Sunny Bonno. The Lesbianists subsequently fed Sunny Bonno, after they captured him off the ski slopes, to my abominant kids. Elizabeth Taylor was thrown out of the corp of Lesbianists, after they heinously tortured her, and murdered her, and the Lesbianists have her slated, scheduled, after they find a way to abduct her, for feeding her to my abominant kids. Dennis Miller is not a Lesbianist. Though he was one, after torturing him, and sushi-izing him, please see my notes on that, the Lesbianist's sushi-izing of Dennis Miller eventually killed him.

It's hard to keep track of some people, as to whether or not they are currently Lesbianists. Others, are not so hard to keep track of, and I want all of those mentioned, killed, immediately.

On Praying, Fucking, Sucking And So Forth

You are rewarded for praying Nam Myeo Ho Ren Ge Kyeo. You are also rewarded for fucking, sucking, tounging, licking, fingering, dicking or massaging your dick against a woman's bun bun, or inside of her butt hole, where there are lots of sensitivities buttons that get her clicking and eroteming and orgasming, or against her titties to get her eroteming and orgasming, and so on, and for palming or massaging a pelvital button, or the love and joy stick, the dick, or a love button or love patch, igniter switch, or whatever nerve sending touch sensitive love joy button there is embedded into your body, in the pelvis, groin, vagina, and in the musculatures of the groin, pelvis, and vagina, with the palm of your hand, and so on. You also get rewarded for throating a woman with your dick, as there are lots of love buttons in her mouth, and throat, lips, and so forth. Men also have love buttons in their lips, throats, tounges, mouths, butthole, and on their body, and those buttons also get clicking, and turning on and off, and sending sensitivities messages or signals, nerve pulses, up the eroteming nerval system and up the orgasming nerval system. You get rewarded for dicking men and boys in the throats, and in the buttholes, and their bodies, just as you get rewarded for dicking women. There is no discrimination in this area, and every one is equally rewarded for their meritorious acts of dicking others, women, girls, men, and boys.

Why are you rewarded for praying Nam Myo Ho Ren Ge Kyeo, and for dicking, fucking, and sucking, bumbeying, or moving your vaginal bumbey package against a woman's sexaling body parts to erotemize your self, and the woman, and for breasting your titties, i.e, rubbing your titties against or flopping them against and massaging them against a woman's butty butt or against her other sexaling body parts to get you and your friend sexually erogenized i.e., sexually stimulated, erotemized, and orgasming, and for other sexaling activities that help you and your friend and friends to produce purifying sexaling energies?

You are rewarded for your praying and for your fucking, sucking, dicking, and so forth, for helping to get every thing and every body going at the right pace in synch with every thing and every body else, for every body in my universe who is working for me, to keep them moving in harmony, perfectly meshed and in synch and in a timed persuasive mosture, with each other, so as to keep my universe standing up, strong, wholesome, robust, healthy, well, and fine. You are rewarded for praying as well as for sexaling, as you help move my children along as they do their work, as you pray and as you sexal and spray out energies from eroteming, from erotistically orgasming, and from sexually orgasmically convulsing, i.e., phlumetting, while you shatter out and spray out purifying energies in all directions, that will clearify and erase your karmic markups, and the karmic markups of others, all around you, for millions and more of miles, way out beyond where you are activiating and religialing, i.e., sexaling.

Your dicking, sucking, licking, titty massaging others, and so forth, will get wonderful and wholesome, GODLY, purifying energies shooting out of your bodies, and the energies shoot out at rates of speed that also help my universe to keep synchronized, and to move along at the right pace for it to be able to stand up and remain stable and solid, durile, strong, wholesome, pure, and a nice place to live in.

Every one who works for me, has a rate of speed they work at, a life pace, or life spin. We all have a pace of life. In some cities, it is fast and hustling. In some places, it is slow and whimsical. My kids work according to a rate of speed that is metered, and they keeps every one moving as best as they can, according to this metered pace. The metered synchronized pace that my children work at the rate of is one thirty seventh and one fifth, approximately, on the metronome.

If you help to push my kids along at that rate of speed, or a rate of speed that is close to it, as you pray at a metered synchronized pace and rate of speed, and as you fuck, suck, and so forth at a metered synchronized pace and rate of speed, then you are rewarded with angel dusts, or purifying energies faerie dusts that my kids daub on your head, and throw buckets loads of over your head and body and that they wash your insides out with and that they wash your body, inside and outside, with as they shower them all over you on the outside of your body, and all around in your body on the inside of you, which then help to clean you up and clearify your karmic markups, cleanse your karma, and purify your life, making you a shining, radiant, pure and holy being, though you may not notice at first, as we are too filthy, karmically speaking, to notice the changes, as our karma is too thick and mucky to allow us to feel the changes that are taking place in our karma and life.

I have a gradient scale for how close you keep people moving, and at what rate of speed you help to push them along, and as you help to push my kids along, so that they can do their work, you are rewarded, in accordance with my gradient scale, with more angel dusts or purifying energies for better preformance, and with less angel dusts for poorer or less effective performance. You have to do some thing that will help my kids move along at a metered pace, so that they can get their work done. Praying Nam Myeo Ho Ren Ge Kyeo sets off a time frame synch. A time frame synch is the metered click, click, click, of the metronome. This time frame synch or metered pace, that you achieve while praying, Nam Myeo Ho Ren Ge Kyeo, will help keep every one moving, at the right pace, if you pray it in a rythym and at a rate of speed that will synch up with a metronome at one thirty seventh and one fifth, approximately. Your efforts to help keep my kids working and moving at a consistent rate of speed, will get rewarded, thus for praying, Nam Myeo Ho Ren Ge Kyeo, you are rewarded, with purifying energies, that my kids dump on you.

Your efforts for fucking, sucking, licking, tounging, titty whipping or banging your titty nipple against the vagina of a woman or girl, dicking, fingering, palming, and so forth, all get rewarded, if you try to keep every thing in synch with the metered pace of the metronome at one thirty seventh and one fifth, approximately. The gradient scale also applies, of course, as you are fucking and sucking, etc., so the better the job you do of keeping your pace at one thirty seventh and one fifth, approximately, the higher your rewards will be. Your rewards are the same, more or less, for both praying and for fucking and sucking, and my kids sprinkle and dump angel dusts, purifying energies, on you as a reward. You also get markups that are meritorious, and you are rewarded with a better and happier life.

Further, when you are orgasming, and eroteming, or pushing out energies as you orgasm, and erotem, you will be pushing out energies that shoot out at consistent rates of speed. These rates of speeds of these energies are in concordance with our pace of life, they all perfectly mesh with the paces of life that my kids keep. The energies as they pass out, and push along through time and space, at synched up and consistent rates of speeds, all help to keep my kids moving along as they do their work and tasks, and they all help to keep our universe, standing up, strong, healthy, wholesome, well, and fine.

Chaos breaks the legs off the foundation to our universe, and our universe begins to creak and moan, as it begins to crumble, slide, twist, and tumble downwardsly. Making chaotic noises, and chaotic movements, detracts from the harmonics of our universe. Your breaking glasses, and breaking skulls, and legs, and arms, are also chaotic events producing, in most cases, and they will detract from the perfect synch up of our universe, as leg bones and arm bones, skulls, fingers and toes, begin to splinter, as you apply pressures to them, you get negative markups for your actions. A record is kept of every chaotic action you take, or make, and if you make enough chaos, in your lifetime, and in your following lifetimes, then you will suffer from your poor records of performance for keeping my universe standing up, wholesome, healthy, happy, and well.

Every scream you cause to be vocated or vocalized, is recorded, and the intensity of the scream, and yell, and crying out in pain, plus a lot of other factors involved, are all recorded by my kids, and you get negative marks for that kind of performance.

The love making oooohs, and aaaahhhs you cause to be vocated, are harmonic appeals of soothing restfullness to the spirit, and to the mind, are also graded, and you are graded on how well you can cause others to produce them, and your scores are kept, and if you are a lousy performer, with more negatives than positives, you'll end up with a lousy life, as a result, as you are rewarded in accordance for your positive performance, as well as for your negative performance.

Helping to keep all of my children working in harmony, and doing their jobs and tasks, at a metered pace, will be rewarded, not only with angel dusts, but also with a better life with more positive fortune, as you recieve positive points or merit points for your collaborating with my children, and working to support them, and more fun as your life becomes graced with more positive merits and as your rewards begin to pile up, and more good things begin to go on in your life.

If you sit on the side of your chair and have a pair of drum sticks, or are using a bongo drum, or calypso drum, with the long tube belly, or stack, a long barrel tubed drum, or if you sit at your drum set, or set up your electronic drum pads, and begin pounding away, in a syncopated manner, for your pleasure, just drumming away, with no notion in mind as to any thing other than achieving a nice rythym for you and your friends to listen to, if you happen to be with friends, your merit points will be near zero, and your efforts will not rate on my gradient scale, as your actions will not be in accordance with my program for a better universe for all people, and for my kids to live and work in.

If, however, you have the attitude, "I wish to support John's kids, and syncopate myself while I'm drumming, so as to be supportive of John's kids, to help John's kids work in a syncopated manner, doing all I can to support John's kids", then, your merit points as you drum, will go sky high, through the roof, and you'll get meritorious benefits for your efforts, or merit points, and good marks, for your efforts. It's like helping kindly old women, who are frail and in need of a helping hand and support, cross the street. If you act in a kindly and charitable manner to help support those around you, you get meritorious points for your efforts. These efforts of your's, however kindly, regrettably, though they are kindly efforts, are not the kinds of efforts that we need, my kids and me, need to keep my universe standing up, and moveing strongly. For efforts that support my kids work environment, and that lend a hand to them to help them to get their work done, your meritorious efforts marks will go through the roof, and you'll be blessed with angel dusts, i.e., purifying energies that help to clean up your karma, and erase and clearify your karmic markups, or marks that record your bad and cruel, or negative actions towards others, and towards your self. You can kill your self, and cause grief to others, as a result of your departure, to my Epcot Center, and that rates negative marks and negative points markings or markups for you.

When you try to do any thing, that will help to syncopate my children, and to make my children's working environement more syncopated, and rythmical, with your concentrated mind, and determination to make that a reality, in other words, a prayerful attitude in mind, hoping to make John's children's working environments syncopated, and rythmical, and in rythym with every one elses', i.e., all of my other kids' syncopated working environements, then with that attitude of hopefulness, or a prayerful attitude, than, you are rewarded for your efforts, and determination, and as you drum away, or pound and beat on your calypso drum, or on your metal Bahamian or Tinian, or Haitian, or Jamaican, drums, or on your dresser drawers, if your mom does not mind, as you pound away, keeping your mind set on your determination to keep all of my kids working in unison with each other, and helping them to keep in syncopated harmony, all in perfect flux, and perfectly meshed in timing, with every one else, as they work for me, then your rewards and positive points markups, will be very high, and you'll be rewarded by my children, with angel dusts that they daub on your forehead, and dump all over you, from their barrels they carry full of angel dusts, or purifying energies to clearify your markups from your karmic markup piles, kept inside of your body, kept in storage in the molecules.

If you listen to music that is syncopated to the timing of one thirty seventh and one fifth on the metronome, or closely syncopated to it, you will be rewarded for merely listening to it, and you'll receive faerie and angel dusts, purifying energies, as my kids daub them on your head, and spray them all over you, inside and out.

Your markups are inside the molecules inside your body, but they are also out side of your body, in every molecule, nearly, going way out to the very farthest edges of my universe. We will eventually get to all of them, and purify or clearify and erase all of your karmic markups, the notations and records that my kids keep on you, and on your activities, and eventually, we'll get them all, and your life will then be full of grace and happiness. It will be a long time before we get to all of them, as you and I and every one in my universe, have been here, and enormous length of time.

As you drum, or skip, or dance, or do areobics, in syncopation, with the attitude that you want to keep all of John's kids in step, and in synch, and in unison and harmonicly meshed and in perfect flux with each other, or perfectly meshing with each other, and every one else who works for me, whether you drum, skip, dance, or do areobics, it does not matter, if your mind is set and determined to help my kids, with your efforts, you will be rewarded for your efforts, no matter whether you skip, jump rope, dance, or areobically excercise.

As you sexalate, if you keep in your mind that you wish to keep all of John's kids in syncopated harmony, perfectly in flux, and in unison, just as when you are drumming, or skipping rope, or dancing, or playing basketball, or playing tennis, or badminton, or any sport, with your movements all timed, and in perfect syncopation, when you sexal with the right attitude to keep John's kids in synch, perfectly meshed in perfect accordance and flux, with each other, and with every one else, you will be rewarded grandurally, that is, grandly, or in a grand or very great manner.

Excercising And Activiating To Music Timed To One Thirty Seventh On The Metronome

Music timed to one thirty seventh on the metronome, and one fifth, or as close to one thirty seventh on the metronome that you can get, is okay, and it will help you to dance, play tennis, play sports, do areobic excercises, and other types of activities, at that pace that we need to keep to help keep my kids working smoothly, and you'll be graded on your performance, and on your attitude while you are dancing, or excercising, and the more intently you concentrate and use your mental energies and mental control to stay in synch, and in step, the better will your scores be, and the higher your marks, and the greater your rewards of purifying angel dusts and purifying energies that my working and unionized kids will pour and spread all about you, inside and out, and all over you.

Sexaling itself is a religious act. Yes. That's true. But, if you sexalate with this powerful prayerful attitude, or hope in mind, with your determined mind, and your concentrated mind, as you sexalate, and help others to sexalate, and help others to erotem, orgasm, phlumett, and shatter off wonderful energies from orgasming, eroteming, and phlumetting, your positive points and merit marks, and many other types of scores my kids keep on your efforts and behavior, all of them will go higher than any one can see, way out beyond the furthest galaxy that you can possibly see from your bedroom window, with your telescope. They'll go out to the futhest edges of my current univerese, and even beyond the barrier walls, holding up our universe, that my kids put in, to keep our universe standing up, stable, strong, and durile or durable and with tensile integrity.

Any action for helping my kids do their work, syncopated, and in unison, and in harmony, will be rewarded, with angel dusts, and with positive marks and score points in your records that we keep on you and every one else in my universe. Your sexaling actions get rewarded, far more than any other activityating, as your sexaling actions are the most needed actions, to keep my universe, pure, durile, holy, sacred, free from negativities, healthy, wholesome, stable, and constantly in a state of improvementing.

Most people go around destroying things, and causing chaos. We, my kids and I, need people who are going to help improve the wonderfulness of our, my, yours, my kids, and all of my other kids, wether they work for me, or not, meaning, all of my guppies, who are like you, my relatively normal kids, as well as all of my abnormal kids, the abominants kids I've got, that go around thinking it is funny to eat people, and to pull them into their mouths, and crush them in miserable pain and agony, like my elephants abominants kids do to relatively normal human beings kids of mine.

Fisting And Punching People With Your Clenched Hands And Crasping Or Clasped Knuckles

You all have been bad kids, all of my guppies, all of you who do not work for me and go around thinking, 'Oh, gee. Aren't I special.' My guppies are these minded people, who are arrogant, who talk back to their mama's and to their papa's, and to their relatives, and brothers and sisters, and to their friends in school, and to their teachers. Later in life, they become worse, and they talk back with their actions of being mean to each other. As my guppies grow older, and become older people, they start fisting others, and that means, punching people, hitting them with their clenched fists and hard knuckles, and hurting them when they pound on their face, or on their stomach, or on their body some where, and break bones, and tear muscles, and stretch ligaments with their pounding each other.

Phlooching Out And Fisting The Vaginal Cavity, Rectal Cavity, And Mouthal Cavity

Fisting is a word used by some people to mean, to insert your hand into the vagina of a woman, and gay people, homosexually driven people, fist each other in the butt hole, if either men or women, or in the vagina, if women. Some people find it interesting to fist each other in the mouth, by sticking their fist inside the mouth of a person, pretending it is a dick or a dildoe. You need to phlooch out the neck muscles, and billow them up, or poof them up and out, and that will help them to gently relax, and then become expandable or stretchable, as when they relax, they will easily stretcth out, and there will be some give, or freedom of expandingness. The neck muscles then become easy to stretch and push on from the inside with out hurting the person. It then is easy to insert your fist into the throat, to massage the inside of the throat, and to use your hand, or fist, to tickle the igniters, and triggers that set off love buttons and bells, and whistles, that help women and men to erotem, orgasm, and phlumett.

Fisting by inserting your fist into the vagina of a woman, when it is relaxed, and after you've massaged if for many hours, and after it begins to billow out, or poof out, and then open wide, and then you can see inside of it, and from the entrance of the vagina, there is a clear gaping cavity, you can then insert your clenched fist hand into, to massage the inside of the vaginal cavity. Doing this is very nice, and is very exciting to do, to help women and girls to erotem, orgasm, and phlumett. You can phlooch out the butt hole, by massaging it, for several hours, and it will begin to poof out, and expand, and you'll see a nanny gate face on it, and that means, it will begin to look a little bit like a vulva, or the vagina of a woman or girl when at rest, or exposed between a woman's or girl's legs as she is sitting or relaxed with no panties on or with no or few clothes on and nothing covering her hips, pelvis, lower pelvis, pelvital ridge, crotch and groin, butt and butthole and lower back, there by exposing her butt and vagina. If you compare a vagina with a phlooched out butthole, you will see they resemble each other, slightly. There is no vaginal cleavage of course, around the butthole, but there is a slight resemblence between a phlooched out butt hole, and a vagina, or vulva, none the less.

The Vagina And Vulva Compared To The 'Nanny Gated' Butthole

What is the difference between a vagina and a vulva? They are more or less the same, but the vagina includes lots of parts, inside as well as out side. The vulva is outside, basically, only, as far as I understand and remember these things, now. When you massage a butthole, long enough, it will begin to look like a vulva, or vaginal face. That's called the nanny gate, or on the male, the male butthole vagina, as I've spoken about it, before. On the woman, it is the female butthole vagina, a double 'immitation vagina' for the real one, as I've mentioned. Men's and women's buttholes are the same, and they both look like 'immitation vaginas' as I've also mentioned, after you phlooch out the butt hole of either the female or of the male. Once you phlooch out the butthole of a man or of a woman, it will poof out, and expand, and the butthole entrance and cavity will become relaxed, and easy to insert your clenched fist into, to then push up your fist into the butthole cavity, and massage it, once the person has cleaned out the butt hole cavity and once it is clear and free from debris matter, or food matter, and rotting food particles, and fleshy foods, or hamburger meat and so on. Phlooching out the vaginal caivity takes a little longer, but with patience, you can phlooch it out, and then fist, in this manner. If you phlooch out the butt hole, and rectal cavity, you can fist your male friends, and your female friends, and every one, once they have cleaned out their poop hole, and made it free from rotting debris, will enjoy mutual, and reciprocal, fisting. Fisting in this way, for sexaling, is alright. Fisting in the other way, for beating people up, is not nice, and you are given poor marks for your actions of nautyness, meaness, and cruelty towards others.

Over the long course of time, you all have been naughty at one time or another. I have many ways to fix you, and to retrain you, and to rehabilitate you, but you always go bad, and sour, again, as that is your main drive, or driving internal force in your lives.

The Importance Of Kindlyness And Teamwork

Why have all of my guppie kids all gone south, or in other words, gone down the road towards unkindlyness? Because, as I've explained, you forgot what the Love Of GOD is. My religion will help people to understand what the Love Of GOD is, and that will help keep them on the correct path of kindly actions towards others, and it will help them to understand and remember that teamwork to help my working, unionized kids to keep our universe healthy, strong, durile, standing up, stable, a safe and happy place to live, and a wonderful place to live, is very important.

Doing things that support my kids working efforts, will be rewarded, and doing things that detract from the harmony and syncopation of the metered pace of my kids who are working, and that slows them down, and that causes dischordance, will not be favorably rewarded, and you'll become a female schmuck, or a male schmuck over the length of time, as you live on in my universe. A schmuck is an unlikeable person. Sexaling is the most important thing there is for us to do, other than feeding ourselves correctly to keep us healthy, and excercising, and leading a balanced, well regulated life, listening to your mama and to your papa. My religion is based on sexaling, as sexaling is the most holy and pure activity we can participate in, or do by ourselves.

All the bullshit propaganda of the Lesbianists, that Jesus said this, and that Buddha said this, and that God will save you if you do this, and so forth, is pure balooney, bullshit, and made up nonsense. I, GOD, will not do any thing for any body, unless you help me and my children to make this universe, a more kindly, and a more wonderful and prosperous universe for all of us. If you do, I will have my kids, bless you with angle dusts as they daub them on your forehead, and then pour barrels of angel dusts over you, as they dump barrels full over your head and body, for your extra good work, sexaling, in syncopation, with my kids working rythyms, and in rythym with their syncopations, flux, and their phenomenal elegance.

Phenomenal Elegance

What is phenomenal elegance? It is their keeping harmony with each other as they work and keep every thing in order, in my universe for me, GOD.

You can not escape from this reality of your good actions and your bad actions being recorded, as my kids keep records on every one, and we make certain every one is rewarded for their good actions, and we make certain that every one recieves as close to what they deserve, to help balance things out, in accordance with their markups, for their bad actions. If they are bad, they will not meet nice people, and they will meet naughty people, and not so nice things may begin to happen between them. If they are good, and if they try to help my kids, as I've explained about, they will get rewarded, and they will slowly begin to break away from keeping company with bad people, and they will gradually ascend to higher rankings or status, and then they will begin to lead a better life, and they will begin to escape from meeting with bad people, and the good kids' lives will become blessed by my kids, as my kids begin to sprinkle angel dusts on the good kids, and daub the heads of the good kids with purifying energies, and then dump purifying energies all over the bodies of the good kids who listen to their mama's and papa's, and sexal with them, and as they sexal with their mama's and papa's, and sisters and brothers, relatives, neighbors, and others, the good kids help my kids keep this universe running smoothly, in harmony, in flux, perfectly meshed, and in perfect syncopation. Mama's, papa's, sisters, brothers, relatives, neighbors, and others, all get their heads blessed with angel dusts, purifying energies, for their good actions along with the good kids, you, I hope, of course, too.

Plurlbalescent / Plurablescent Nature Of Negative Punishments And Positive Rewards

This is very important for every body to understand. I have my working, unionized kids reward the good people, and I have my working, unionized kids keep records on every action of every one of you, and I have my kids make sure the bad kids, meet with what they deserve, or some thing close to it, which may not be too nice, most of the time, and I have my kids make sure that the good kids, all meet with what they deserve, or something close to it, and that is usually always something nice. It may sometimes not be something conspicuously nice, but it is nice, usually, or positive in nature, always. The bad kids will get rewarded by something that is negative in nature, always, usually, or plurlbalescent. What does plurlbalescent mean? It means, it might not be noticably negative, but it is still negative, in nature, in essence. This is a topic we can discuss, another time, or you can ask my kids for more information on it, when you go in and visit them, with your mama's and papa's, sisters and brothers, relatives, school teachers, principal, costodians, janitors, school workers, and others.

We have had too much chaos of late, and for quite some time, and it is now time to slow it, and bring it to a halt. We are going to produce positive harmonic concordances that will assist my kids as they work, and that will help them to stay working in harmony with each other, with your fucking, sucking, eroteming, orgasming, your shooting out of purifying energies as you orgasm, and erotem, and with the increase of the oooohs, and aaaahs, you help to produce, with your practice of my religion.

We have to bring an end to the moronic violence of the Lesbianists. If that requires a lot of my children, making lots of babies, and lots of energies, and percussive forces, when you set off a fracturable rock bomb, then that is what it will take, as you blow Washington DC and the Baltimore metro area off its ocean ledge, and into the Atlantic, with that fracturable rock bomb, if it is big enough. Yes, there will be lots of painful, ouches, and screams, and so forth, but it is trite, compared to the violence these idiots have been perpetrating, over the long span of time that they have been in my universe.

We have been here for a very long time. It is nearly impossible to figure out how long, other than with mathmatical computations. Our brains will burn out, if we try to figure it out in our heads. It does not matter how long we have been here. It does matter what we do while we are here. You are not going any where else, and you are all staying in my universe, so you will all drop your pants, and your dresses, remove your shoes, socks, clothes, underwares, panty hosees, and panties, disrobe, and begin helping others to make lots of ooohs, and aaaahs, and lots of eroteming and orgasming energies. That will be the begining of your getting into line with the rest of us, here in my universe, my kids who work for me. As you eroto with each other, you'll get graded on your performance, and you'll get paid by my kids, once you join our country, as I've explained about, before.

Timed Persuasive Mosture

What is a timed persuasive mosture? It is just keeping every body in synch with each other, persuasively and accurately moving along, orderly, in an ordered fashion or manner, and with every body in rythm and syncopated with each other.

Mosture is a type of motus, or motion or fluidity of movement. The timed fluidity or fluidness of my kids working along in synch with each other, is critical to having every thing in my universe, standing up and sturdy, with every thing holding together, as it should be. Otherwise, if my kids and their work get out of synch, things can come crashing down, and things can come falling apart, and we do not want that.

This is a big universe, and we have a lot of people in it, my kids, and you wouldn't believe how many kids I have. Anyway, they all have to stay in syncopated, fluid motion, with their paces of life perfectly meshing with each other's paces of life, to accomplish their jobs and tasks, in an orderly, and in a fluid movement, harmoniously, and without delays.

The persuasiveness is accomplished with the help of your sexaling, and by your keeping pace, and synching your sexaling activities, and the movements involved in your sexaling activities, and by your spraying out your energies, as you erotem, orgasm, and phlumett. The persuasiveness is also accomplished by your keeping pace in unison with others while you are praying the syncopated phrase, Nam Myeo Ho Ren Ge Kyeo.

Every thing is timed, and so as you activiate, or carry out these activities of sexaling, eroteming, orgasming, phlumetting, as well as the movements involved in sexaling, and as you pray, your synching of your movements and sounds in time and in pace with the syncopated and metered metronome click, click, click, at the timed pace of one thirty seventh and one fifth, on the metronome, approximately, helps to persuasively move, or persuasively drive and push, every body about, and along, as they do their work for me, in their many syncopated paces of life, or life spins. I have many children working at different life spins, as I've mentioned before, and each group of them has a different pace of life, or time spin. Your activiating, as explained, helps drive them along, each at their own pace of life, or time spin, perfectly meshed with every other child of mine, also in his or her, and at his or her own particular time rate of speed, time spin, life spin, or, pace of life.

Every one and every thing must move along in perfect flux, or perfectly meshed with every body, and with every thing that is going on in my universe, on every possible level. There are many levels where activities are going on, and many people are working at different life spins. Every one, no matter what level they are on, and at no matter what life spin they are living at, must stay in flux, perfectly meshed and in perfect harmony, perfectly syncopated with every one, else.

You are rewarded for your helping to move my kids along, in perfect flux perfectly meshing with every one and with every thing that is going on in my universe, with your efforts at sexaling, and with your praying, as explained, earlier.

In our new society, which we will create, you will score earning points, and every thing you do, as you sexal, and so forth, and as you pray, is scored, and a record of your capabilities, or excellence, or lack of excellence, is kept. You are paid according to your work performance, as you sexal, activiate, pray, erotem, orgasm, and phlumett. Also, you are graded on how well you get along with others, and on how well you try to harmonize and then sexalate with others. You score earning points, accordingly, and you get paid, according to how well you perform.

Keeping Every Thing And Everybody In Harmony And In Synch

Explaining how this works, how praying, fucking, sucking, dicking and hugging, etc., helps keep every thing in synch and in harmony and how your efforts are rewarded, is a tiny bit more complicated than my simple explanation, but that is it in a peanut shell.
